District Tax On Business Or Purchases Seen by King

Chances of Reviving Income Proviso Discounted.

Kennedy Predicts Sales Levy Defeat

Would Lose in House, He Tells Senate Committee.

By James D. Secrest.

Opposition to a District sales tax appeared to be rising on Capitol Hill yesterday as the Senate District Committee wavered between it and modification of the business privilege levy adopted by the House.

Chairman Kennedy of the House sub-committee which handled the omnibus tax bill predicted that a sales tax would not be accepted by the House any more than would a local income levy.

Vigorous opposition to it also was expressed following yesterday's hearing by Senator Capper, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the committee.

Senator Capper said that if the business privilege tax is rejected he would press for revival of the income tax, and he expressed confidence that it would be adopted by the Senate.

Other membess of the committee indicated that they wanted to hear the Commisisoners before making a decision, as Chairman King said that hearings will be concluded this morning, after which the committee will go into executive conference with the District heads.

To Ask Retention.

District officials, while wavering like the committee, indicated they will ask that the business privilege tax be retained because of the danger of a deadlock with the House, but they showed a willingness to accept amendments which will iron out some of the admitted inequities.

Senator King expressed the opinion that the committee will have to choose between the business privilege tax and the sales tax because of the adamant stand of the House against the income levy.

Meanwhile, other members of the committee suggested new tax proposals as solutions to the problem.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, adopted the land tax plan of Benjamin Marsh, of the People's Lobby, and said he might propose it today.

This plan calls for an increase of 1 per cent or $1 on $100 valuation in the realty tax, but with the application limited to land alone. The tax rate on improvements would remain at $1.50.

Would Raise $4,800,000.

McCarran said that Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen had advised him that the increase would raise $4,800,000. The business privilege-sales tax controversy then could be dropped, he said.

"This increase in the tax on land would be absorbed in the margin between the assessments on land values and the market prices," he said.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, said he would submit a schedule for raising the tax rates on liquor licenses after Roger Whiteford, counsel for the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, proposed a local levy on beer and ale.

Reynolds said that at least $500,000 might be raised by hiking the rates on liquor licenses. He suggested the wholesaler's permit might be raised from $1,500 to $2,500, the retailer's license from $750 to $1,500, the tavern's from $200 to $500, and the hotel fee put on a graduated scale based on the number of rooms. The range, he said, might be from $1,000 to $5,000.

Would Hear Consumer.

Following the morning hearing, at which Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Consumers Council, assailed the sales tax, Senator Capper expressed regret that business interests had overshadowed the consumers at the hearing.

While explaining that he had no criticism to make either of the way that the hearing had been conducted or of the business men defending their interests, the veteran Kansas Senator said:

"The consumers, and especially the poorer classes, are not so well organized and consequently aren't so audible at tax hearings."

Mrs. Boyle, whom Senator Capper said he believed spoke for the Police, Firemen Called by Visitor To Mail His Letter

Fifteen fire engines, two patrol wagons, a covey of motorcycle policemen and the rescue squad converged on the Supreme Court Building yesterday afternoon because Harvey Householder, a visitor from Akron, Ohio, wanted to mail a letter.

Acutely embarrassed by the fanfare, Householder explained to police of the Ninth Precinct that he was trying to find a slit big enough for an envelope in a little red box on the corner of Maryland avenue when he inadvertently turned something or other and things began to happen.

Convinced the tourist had made an honest error in mistaking green for red, police released him after questioning. The convention of emergency vehicles dejectedly dispersed.

Europe Today

Czechoslovakia, Where War Is Feared, Is More Confident of Peace Than Is America.

By Felix Morley.

No. 12 in a Series.

Prague, June 17.—"I decline to concede that war is inevitable and in this spirit we shall do all we can to avoid war in the year 1937."

The quotation is taken from a calm and courageous message delivered by President Benes of Czechoslovakia to his people last Christmas Day. Now, with the fateful year nearly half over, this statesman of central Europe is even more quietly confident of the prospects of peace.

So is everyone with whom I have talked in this country. Here, in an area of high international tension, there is a far less jittery feeling about the likelihood of war than was recently apparent in the United States.

Probably that is because the leaders of Czechoslovakia are concentrating their energies on the preservation of peace, while in America the effort is to keep the country from being involved in war if, as and when it comes. There is a big difference in the approach which proceeds from the assumption that peace is indivisible, and that which argues that in the event of a general conflagration one house can be saved from the flames.

The latter attitude is impossible for Czechoslovakia. If there should be another European war this country would be an almost certain victim. The German general staff is said to have calculated that Prague, if attacked simultaneously from the north, the west and the southwest, would fall in two weeks. The Czechs, placing confidence in the high efficiency of their relatively small army, believe they could defend the capital for six weeks.

The difference in the estimates is not as immaterial as it may seem. If it were universally believed that Czechoslovakia could be beaten to the ground in a fortnight it is quite possible that it might be invaded without the risk of a European war.

Assistance from the little nation's major allies, France and Russia to be precise, might come too late to be of any value and therefore very likely would not be sent. But if the Czech resistance to external aggression were sure to be stubborn and prolonged, as military men here are confident would be the case, it is impossible to believe that this Central European democracy would be left to perish.

This is what President Benes had in mind when he said, last Christmas, that "our democracy is strong and firm, calm, fearless and courageous. And at the decisive moment our army would do its duty, as few

Booming Guns Launch Scout Jamboree Here

25,000 Boys in Capital for Biggest Show in Group's History.

Pictures—Pages 13, 19.

The first National Jamboree in the 27-year history of the Boy Scouts of America will open today with more than 25,000 Scouts and leaders participating in the inaugural flag raising on Washington Monument grounds.

Climaxing five years of preparation, the biggest show of its kind since the founding of the Republic will be launched when Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, addresses a coast-to-coast radio audience at 8:45 a. m. and the troop flags and national emblems of 25 countries are sent aloft.

This is the day for which 400 foreign Scouts, including a few girl guides, have come from China, New Zealand, India, Sweden and a score of other remote lands. It is the day toward which American boys, from tenderfeet to eagles, have been banking their pennies for travel expenses and interested adults, from President Roosevelt to prairie parents, have planned.

67 Special Trains Arrive.

Sixty-seven special trains arrived yesterday, bearing what will be practically the last arrivals. A scattering of campers, including some of the foreign delegates, is expected early this morning, but the tented city along the Potomac is expected to be up to full strength when a trench mortar booms its stern "Stand By!" at 8:45 a. m.

Walter W. Head, president of the Boy Scouts of America, arrived yesterday from New York. "Uncle Dan" Beard, granddaddy of American Scoutdom, is scheduled to be on the scene for the official opening this morning.

A bomb fired at 9 a. m. will be the signal for hoisting more than 1,600 American and Boy Scout flags above the 780 camping areas in East and West Potomac Parks, on Columbia Island and along the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway.

The first mass assembly of all 25,000 boys and leaders at the Jamboree will begin at 7:45 p. m. around a huge campfire in the arena north of Washington Monument.

A gathering unique in the annals of American boyhood, the campfire program, will be ushered in when "Uncle Dan," who is National Scout Commissioner, strikes

Tax Hearings May Be Tabled, Says Official

'Loopholes' Explained Sufficiently, Is View of Spokesman.

By Sidney Olson.

Intimations came last night from official circles that the much-heralded tax evasion and avoidance hearings, still unproductive of any sensational developments, would be quietly shelved this week-end or early next week, if possible.

A Treasury source, speaking frankly but unofficially, said in his view, sufficient evidence surrounding various types of tax avoidance would have been presented to the Joint Congressional committee tomorrow to justify closing of the open sessions.

"We've pointed out the loopholes," he said. "Now it will be up to the committee to plug them."

Almost without exception, all cases presented by the Treasury thus far to the committee have been "entirely legal." Tax avoidance has been stressed, but tax evasion has scarcely been mentioned. Many points of the law under which a great deal of the tax avoidance has been done have not yet been litigated, Treasury experts have said, and thus no sharp line can be drawn between evasion and avoidance.

Yesterday's case, again strictly legal, included figurative blueprints of the methods by which nine wealthy Americans slashed their income taxes deeply by spreading their incomes through personal holding corporations.

Those named were:

U. S. to Give Democracies Economic Aid

By Franklyn Waltman.

In a series of moves the United States Government yesterday took steps to strengthen the democracies of Europe and Asia, increase the solidarity of the American nations in preserving world peace and thus isolate the dictatorship countries.

Without advertising the fact in so many words, this Government undertook to give renewed assurance of its sympathetic co-operation in economic matters to Belgium, France and Great Britain in Europe, and to China in Asia. Thus the United States moved into closer harmony with this democratic bloc and farther away from Germany, Italy and Japan, the dictatorship powers.

Foremost in the actions pointing toward this end was the issuance of a formal joint statement by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium. Coming as France again was writhing in the pains of another financial convulsion, this statement significantly promised "continuing co-operation in monetary matters." The statement was issued after the Belgian Premier lunched with President Roosevelt.

Sees Hull, Morgenthau.

Earlier in the day Van Zeeland conferred at length with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau. Undoubtedly the latter conference was devoted to a discussion of the French financial crisis, as were other conferences held during the day at the Treasury by French and American officials.

Although the Treasury maintained a rigid silence, there was evidence that efforts were being made to work out an arrangement whereby this Government could co-operate to help the French over their present difficulty without unduly jeopardizing American interests. As much was promised, in an abstract manner, in the Roosevelt-Van Zeeland statements.

During the day the President conferred with Dr. H. H. Kung, Chinese finance minister and vice president of the Executive Yuan. All Mr. Roosevelt would say of that meeting was that the Chinese minister would return for a further conference on Tuesday.

But it was clear that the Kung visit to Washington was drawing closer the bonds of friendship and help between China and the United States. This was evidenced when Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman, announced that the Government-owned Export-Import Bank, the advisory committee of which he also is the chairman, had agreed to participate in financing a purchase of American locomotives and equipment by China.

To Accept Chinese Notes.

The Chinese have placed orders with Baldwin Locomotive Works and American Locomotive Sales Corporation for 20 locomotives costing approximately $1,500,000. It is understood that the Export-Import Bank will advance $750,000 of that sum in exchange for notes in that sum of the Ministry of Railways of China maturing monthly over a five-year period. The notes will be guaranteed by a responsible Chinese bank.

Dr. Kung yesterday declared it was the intention of his government to refrain from seeking further foreign loans—the transaction just cited is regarded not as a loan but as a credit advance—and thus free itself from the requirements of the five-power consortium and financial obligation to Japan.

The Chinese minister is being roundly received by American officials, who are not concealing their pleasure over his reports of increasing stability in China and increased strength to resist Japanese encroachment. On the theory that the best guarantee of peace in the Orient is a strong, independent China, officials of this Government are anxious to encourage undertakings toward that end.

But these were not all of the de-

Public Turning on Extremists In Steel Strike, Roosevelt Says; G. M. Seeks 'Wild' Strike Ban

Campaign Forecast For Responsibility

Knudsen Cites Over 200 Unauthorized Walkouts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Mich., June 29.—General Motors corporation today struck back at labor unions with which it has contracts it claims have been violated.

Action came in the form of a notice served on the United Automobile Workers of America. It said the corporation will not renew negotiations with the union until the union agrees to definite penalties for instigators of unauthorized strikes.

Such unauthorized strikes by units within the automobile workers union have reached a total of more than 200 since the union contract, intended to prevent such strikes, was signed.

The continuance of such strikes, with no apparent disciplinary action by union officials against persons responsible, has been made the basis of a bitter fight on John L. Lewis' C. I. O. effort to organize labor.

It was believed that the independent steel companies' fight on the C. I. O., and proposed legislation intended to establish equal responsibility, of labor and employer in union contracts, followed by General Motors notice today forecast a broadening industrial campaign to establish by law the responsibility of labor.

Knudsen Confirms Action.

William S. Knudsen, president of the company, and considered by many as friendly toward labor, confirmed reports of the company's action. He did so after Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. chief, announced the union had declined to promise support of company punitive action before beginning a conference on new contracts, or contract changes, as provised in the original union contract.

Martin declared Knudsen's demand itself amounted to a contract change and should be negotiated along with proposed union amendments. Knudsen answered that compliance with his demand would merely put teeth in an agreement clause which already forbids "stoppage of work" until conciliation efforts have been exhausted and or without approval of international union officers.

Lists "Violations."

"This is the clause," Knudsen commented, "which has been violated in more than 200 cases in the last four months in 48 different plants and no negotiations can be of any value until this part of the agreement is strengthened and made to work."

Martin asserted the union was "determined that unauthorized stoppages of work shall cease," but did not want to "revert to the place where foremen or others will unleash on the workers their personal likes and dislikes."

The U. A. W. A. president said he expects the conference with General Motors officials to begin next week. The agreement which ended the long motors strike provided that

President Advises 'Dunce Caps' After 3d Term Queries

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt refused to comment yesterday when asked about the statement of Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania urging him to run for a third term.

A reporter then asked him the direct question at a press conference whether he would accept another term.

He also remarked that the weather was very hot.

Another questioner was advised by the President to join his colleague in the dunce cap corner when he asked if the President's "victory dinner" speech last March 4 fully covered the third term question.

Mayor of Johnstown Asks Aid After Blasts Close Steel Plant

3 Strike Leaders Warned City Can't Assure Their Safety.

By the Associated Press.

Johnstown, Pa., June 29.—The mayor of strike-embattled Johnstown telegraphed President Roosevelt today the people of this community might "take the law into their own hands," in the wake of two explosions which shut off the vital water supply to the Cambria Steel Works.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation charged giant water pipes from two mountain reservoirs were dynamited, throwing 6,000 men out of work on the eighteenth day of the strike.

A reward of $10,000 for the arrest and conviction of the persons responsible for the dynamiting of the pipe lines was offered by Bethlehem.

Mayor Daniel J. Shields telegraphed the President the citizenry might rise in protest unless John L. Lewis' steel union forces withdraw from the city.

"I appeal to you direct," said the mayor, "to make it possible for good citizens of my community to enjoy liberty for which our forefathers spilled blood, and this can be accomplished by the overthrow of the un-American empire that John L. Lewis is building up."

Meanwhile, city council concurred tonight at a special meeting with the action of Mayor Daniel J. Shields, who told two of three strike leaders he would no longer be responsible for their safety in Johnstown.

Shields had ordered city police to bring the three strike leaders before the special session, but the officers reported they were unable to find H. M. Van Sant and said they believed he was not in the city.

The two who heard the expulsion order were:

James Mark, sub-regional director of the Committee for Industrial Organization-Affiliated Steel Workers Organizing Committee and president of District 2 of the United Mine Workers of America.

C. W. Jones, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

The meeting was stormy and marked by a verbal clash between 'Plague on Both Houses,' President Declares in Interview.

Statement Aimed Against Extremists

On the Labor Front.

"A plague on both your houses," President Roosevelt in effect declared, revealing his "disgust" with both sides in the steel strike that is gripping seven States.

General Motors Corporation served notice it will not renew negotiations with the United Automobile Workers of America until the union agrees to fixing of penalties of unauthorized strikes.

The "people of this community might take the law into their own hands," the Mayor of Johnstown, Pa., wired to President Roosevelt yesterday after two explosions shut off the vital water supply to the Cambria Steel mill, scene of a bitter conflict with the C. I. O.

Police in Ohio announced they had smashed a wholesale "terrorist" ring in Warren with the arrest of three men. The alleged brains of the plot, Gus Hall, C. I. O. strike leader, was being hunted.

Criticizes Extremists.

By William V. Nessly.

Only a few hours after his mediation board had officially reported its failure to bring together the opposing sides in the widespread steel strike, President Roosevelt yesterday, uttered the quotation, "A plague on both your houses."

The President used the expression at his press conference after he had been assailed earlier in the afternoon by Charles P. Taft 2d, chairman of the Mediation Board. He told reporters he and Taft had agreed that the Shakespearean exclamation represented the feeling of a majority of the people in the country toward the bitter and protracted strike.

Later, White House attaches said the expression was intended to apply only to the houses of extremists on both sides, those who want violence and those who refuse to negotiate. It was not intended to apply, it was said, to those employers and employes, organized or unorganized, who were said to constitute the great majority, who do not believe in violence and who are honestly willing to pursue collective bargaining within spirit, as well as the letter of the law.

Denying reports Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania had invoked martial law again at Johnstown, Charles Margiotti, the State's attorney general, told The Post last night there was "no change in the situation to justify such action."

He added he and the governor had come to Washington simply to attend a dinner tendered them and 12 other Pennsylvania Democrats by Senate Floor Leader Joseph T. Robinson last night. They will fly back to Harrisburg early today, he added.

Day's Developments.

The Day's developments in the surging labor turmoil that has swept the country for months included these:

Taft and Edward F. McGrady Assistant Secretary of Labor, members of the steel mediation board, dictated their final report on the mediation efforts, at the office of Secretary of Labor Perkins, and Taft prepared to sail for Europe for several weeks.

John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., which has sponsored the steel strike, called for 17 maritime union chiefs to meet him here July 7, to plan a C. I. O. campaign to unite all maritime workers under the Lewis banner.

Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, in a statement, charged the C. I. O. with "lawlessness" and hit at "the failure of governing authorities" to meet the lawlessness.

Representative Hook (Democrat), Michigan, urged that Lewis remove "Communistic leaders" from his organization.

It was on the eve of what has been termed the "Romeo and Juliet" marriage of his son, Franklin, jr., and Miss Ethel duPont, today, that the President, apparently unconsciously, reached into that Shakespearean play for his expression.

The unhappy romance of the son and the daughter of the warring

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 29.—Frank A. Vanderlip, 72, veteran financier, died in New York Hospital today after an illness of several weeks.

A native of Aurora, Ill., Mr. Vanderlip started life as a machinist's apprentice and rose to the presidency of the National City Bank of New York, one of the world's largest financial institutions, before he retired in 1919.

He entered the hospital June 16 for what his son, Frank A. Vanderlip, jr., described as "observation following an illness in California eight months ago."

Mr. Vanderlip retired to an estate in Westchester County, New York, after leaving National City Bank, but he confessed that his energy drove him on and he studied financial problems assiduously.

After typhoid illness kept him inactive for three years, he became a special adviser to a Wall street house and by 1931 was reported to have made $3,000,000 paper profits in a Wall street coup.

In his autobiography, written in 1934, he wrote that "society does not owe every man a living, but a fair chance to contribute to the welfare of society sufficient effort to warrant drawing back from society the elements of an abundant life."

Vanderlip was the third financier of national renown to die in recent weeks. May 23, John D. Rockefeller, sr., died and his death was closely followed by the passing of George F. Baker, international financier, who died aboard his yacht May 30 at Honolulu.

Mr. Vanderlip was the father of six children, Narcissa, Charlotte D., Frank A., jr., Virginia J., Kelvin and John M. Vanderlip.

Restless, and as he expressed it,

$135,000,000 For Tenant Aid Voted by House

By Robert C. Albright.

A $135,000,000 first venture in farm tenancy aid was approved yesterday by the House, while the Senate broke Administration bounds to extend a 3½ per cent interest subsidy to farmers.

By a 307 to 25 roll call vote, the House sanctioned help for 3,000,000 farm tenants and sharecroppers. The sweeping program of farm purchase loans, rehabilitation aids and submarginal land elimination had approval of the President.

But both houses disregarded Administration warnings in extending the emergency Federal Land Bank rate for another year.

Over "disturbed" protests of the President and Farm Credit Administration admonition against a stimulated "land boom," the Senate voted another extension of the emergency loan rate.

The measure previously had passed the House, despite a plea by Governor W. I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration for a "business" interest rate. It now goes to the White House, where a possible veto awaits it.

The bill extends the 3½ per cent subsidized rate for a year from June 30, imposing a 4 per cent rate thereafter. It further scales down interest on land bank loans from 5 to 4 per cent.

A futile effort was made by the Senate Banking Committee to eliminate this cut. The Senate rejected the committee's amendment.

"It appears quite possible that if the Federal Land Banks continue to finance the purchase of farms at an artificially low interest rate it may have the effect of stimulating a land boom and thus ultimately have a far-reaching and undesirable effect on the whole structure of land values

By the Associated Press.

Inglewood, Calif., June 29.—Police spread a dragnet from fashionable Beverly Hills to the Mexican border tonight for "Eddie the Sailor," suspected degenerate slayer of three small girls who were lured from a park Saturday and attacked and garroted.

"It is likely we will have our case completed by Friday," declared Sheriff's Capt. William Penprase. Meanwhile, 11 men were being held for questioning.

That is the day officials will hold an inquest over the bodies of Madeline Everett, 7, her sister, Melba, 9, and their playmate, Marjorie Stevens, 8.

Last Saturday the three girls were playing in Centinela Park, near their homes. They left their playthings and called out that they were going to hunt rabbits. By nightfall, said Dr. A. F. Wagner, county autopsy surgeon, they had been attacked and strangled to death with a length of clothesline rope.

Today Police concentrated on a search for a man described as 30 to 35 years old with tattooing on one arm and dressed in work clothes. They believe he is the same person children in the park knew as "Eddie the Sailor."

Persons at the park furnished the description of the man as that of one seen talking to the three little victims.

Roosevelt-duPont Marriage Today Will Bring Happy Climax to Modern Romeo-Juliet Story

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

Wilmington, Del., June 29.—One of America's most publicized romances will reach its climax tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in historic Christ Church at Christiana Hundred, near Greenville, Del.

In the presence of 300 guests, Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and Ethel duPont will join hands in holy matrimony before an altar symbolizing the triumph of love over political leanings and opposing loyalties of the two families.

At the last minute tonight arrangements were made to have 300 Federal soldiers stand guard about Owl's Nest, the duPont home, during the reception which will follow the wedding.

Through Col. Ball, Col. Starling, head of the President's Secret Service detail, arranged to have the First Regiment of Engineers, from Fort Dupont, Del., on hand because the police protection the State of Delaware was able to provide was considered inadequate, as most of the highway force has been called to duty at Delaware Park, the new race track near Wilmington.

Fort Dupont was named for Samuel Francis duPont, ar ancestor of Roosevelt's bride-to-be, and an admiral in the Federal Navy during the Civil War. The name is spelled with a capital "D" because an Army post name must begin with a capital letter.

What the bride and her attendants will wear, where the young couple will go on their honeymoon when they speed away in a limousine after the reception, and the exact proceedings, play by play, as they will be carried out at sunset are veiled in secrecy—a secrecy maintained by a high-powered publicity man. Since the press agent came into the picture more than a month ago, it has been his duty to serve as a buffer between the family of the bride-to-be and the press, and to dispense his information in small and dribbling doses. The most sought-after facts have had to be gleaned from other sources.

From the beginning Ethel duPont has insisted that her fiance should have no idea how his bride and her maids will look before they start down the aisle this afternoon. A stickler for tradition, she has observed romantic wedding customs down to the last notch. Each time the designer of her trousseau, Henri Bendel, has come to Owls Nest, she has arranged that her fiance be escorted away from the estate.

Two weeks ago, while he was a guest there, she sent him visiting while she donned her completed nuptial ensemble and posed for wedding pictures. Only her mother and the photographer, Jay Winburn, were present. Later, the bride's father took charge of the pictures and placed them in his safe, where they will stay until sometime tomorrow morning when they will be made available for publication.

The story-book romance, however, already has been written, chapter by chapter, in newsprint that began to center around the principals three and a half years ago, when "sometime" early in

$135,000,000 For Tenant Aid Voted by House

in the United States," Myers had advised the Banking Committee.

The President in a letter to House and Senate committees said he was "disturbed" by provisions of the bill, cautioned it added $40,000,000 annually to budget costs, and warned that if extra appropriations continue "new taxes alone will bring the budget into balance."

The $135,000,000 farm tenancy measure, an admitted "experiment" in promoting the ownership of farm homes, passed the House by a 275 to 14 standing vote, after two days of debate. A roll call followed, and the final count was 307 to 25.

House Republicans made an unsuccessful effort to send the bill back to committee to remove an exemption of employes from Civil Service laws. Although the motion was in line with "merit" system declarations of the President, it was rejected, 101 to 233.

The three-fold tenancy program provides:

Three per cent loans, for not more than 30 years, to farm tenants, share croppers and farm laborers, to enable them to purchase small farms. Only about 3,000 applicants could be aided in the first year. For this purpose, $10,000,000 is appropriated the first year, $25,000,000 the second and $50,000,000 the third.

For Stock Purchases.

Rehabilitation loans at 3 per cent, for not more than five years. These would be used for purchasing cows, horses, mules, poultry and other livestok; for family subsistence; for equipment and supplies, and for other farm needs.

Systematic retirement of submarginal lands, "not primarily suitable for cultivation, in order to correct maladjustments in land use, and diversion of the tracts to conservation projects. The bill authorizes $10,000,000 the first year, and $20,000,000 for the next two years.

Few changes were made in the Agriculture Committee's draft of the measure.

Substitute Tabled.

A substitute by Representative Gerald Boileau, Wisconsin Progressive, to reduce the interest rate to 1½ per cent, was rejected, 17 to 50.

Critics, including Representative Joseph W. Martin (Republican), Massachusetts, pointed to the huge potential cost of the program, and the small number of tenants initially aided. Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, argued the program may eliminate "a large measure of the poverty, social unrest, and economic insecurity of that part of the population."

While the House was approving 3 per cent interest loans for tenants, with tacit sanction of the President, the Senate was completing Congressional action on the 3½ per cent farm loan bank rate extension, over opposition of the President.

Mr. Roosevelt's opposition to the emergency rate extension was outlined in a letter to Jones, dated June 8.

Pointing out that the whole of Government agency loans to farmers, home owners, businessmen, banks, and municipalities is involved the President said "no reasonable person should think today that the Government of the United States should permanently subsidize these borrowers by an annual grant or gift caused by legalizing an abnormally low rate of interest."

Myers' Testimony.

The President's letter reached the House Agriculture Committee after the House had authorized the extension, but a copy was transmitted to Chairman Robert F. Wagner of the Senate Banking Committee. Only yesterday the committee approved the measure, with one amendment and it was rushed immediately to the Senate floor.

Total land bank loans outstanding on March 31, of this year, amounted to $2,046,833,000. Land bank commissioner loans were $832,800,000, giving a grand total of $2,879,633,000. The 3½ per cent reduction in land bank loans costs the Treasury $31,000,000, and the 4 per cent land bank commissioner rate, $9,000,000,000.

Before both House and Senate committees, Myers testified less than 10 per cent of the 6,812,000 farmers in the United States are land bank borrowers, and only 14.9 per cent of these are delinquent, or less than 1.5 per cent of all farmers in the country.

He said conditions have improved to a point where the great majority of land bank borrowers, barring disasters or drought, could pay a "business rate of interest."

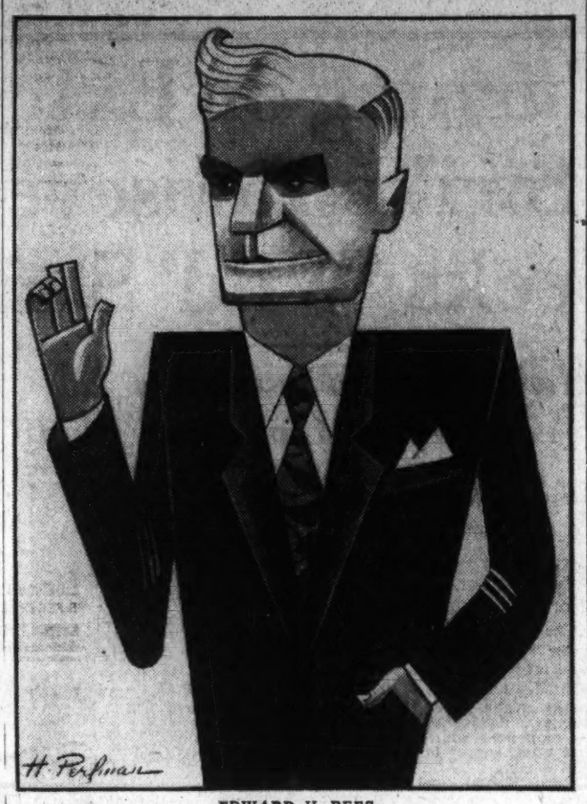
Continuance of a subsidized rate, Myers said, would result in a demand for similar treatment by home owners and other special groups, and mean unwise concentration of credit in subsidized agencies, a tendency to increase "the violence of land booms," and weakening of the land bank co-operative structure.

Myers' land-boom warning was challenged by Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, who said no such fear was justified.

"I think the improvement in the price of land, in almost all cases, has been a sign of recovery," Myers argued. "The dangerous point is reached when land values get beyond a point that can be supported by the farm income.

New Faces in Congress

Kansas Representative Rees Admires William Allen White



EDWARD H. REES.

By Scott Hart.

While all the Democrats were gamboling on Jefferson Island the other day, Edward H. Rees, of the Fourth Kansas District, sat in his office. Representative Rees didn't gambol with the Democrats because he is a Republican. And the fact delights him. While the Democrats were at play he related how he beat a Democrat by 9,000 votes.

And then he turned to the subject of William Allen White. It was both natural and inevitable that he should do so because he comes from Emporia and is well acquainted with the editorial lair of White. He turned as inevitably to the personality and doings of the journalist as the Representatives from Louisiana turn to the subject of Huey Long. And he had some elegant sentiments on the subject. White, in turn, has favorable feelings toward the Representative.

"Congressman Ed Rees is not a rable-rouser. He doesn't roar around on the hustings. But he does see the truth, and in a quiet, decent way tells the truth where it will do the most good," said the journalist recently of Rees.

"William Allen White is a fine man," said Rees.

And then the subject turned to the big broad farming fields of Kansas. The Representative has a farm of his own out there and is gratified to learn a big crop is in prospect. First of all he is a farmer; he was a farmer before he was a school teacher, before he was a banker, a lawyer, a State legislator or a Congressman.

He holds the soil close but doesn't claim he could solve the farm problem. He was asked what could be done to give permanent solution to the farm problem. The Representative let out a laugh that shook like a Kansas window pane in a cyclone and said he didn't know.

He doesn't want it said William Allen White was responsible for his entering of public life—rather, White was the inspiration for it. This public-life career includes membership in the Kansas House of Representatives (1927-33), during which time he was majority floor leader (1931-33). He served in the State Senate (1933-35). Subsequently he was chairman of the Kansas Judiciary Committee (1935-37); member of the Kansas Judicial Council, and is engaged in the general practice of law in Emporia. In private life he is a member of various Masonic bodies, the American Legion and the Farm Bureau and Grange.

He has no personal program of salvation for the country.

Owen B. Winters, executive vice president, secretary and director of Erwin-Wasey Co., New York, large advertising agency.

Charles E. Merrill, capitalist, of Palm Beach, Fla., and 40 Wall street, New York, partner with Edmund C. Lynch, of New York, in an investment firm. Both were named.

Methods Described.

The case histories presented, beginning with Lupton, detailed the methods by which the persons named saved huge amounts that ordinarily would have gone to the Treasury as income taxes.

Lupton, according to the witness, Abe Fortas, a Securities and Exchange Commission lawyer borrowed for the hearings by the Treasury, avoided "a large amount of taxes" through a personal holding company, the Central Shares Corporation, saving $131,045 in 1934, $181,788 in 1935, and $335,690 in 1936.

Another example of what was termed an "incorporated pocketbook," was presented in the case of Henry L. Doherty, who besides acting as president or director in 63 other companies than Cities Service, also owns a number of personal holding companies. At the top of these in the pyramided structure is Doherty & Co.

For the year 1934 alone, four of his personal holding companies paid a surtax under Section 351, governing such companies, of $479.44. He thus saved about $160,000 in taxes, Fortas said, on a combined corporate and individual net income that year of about $620,000.

Merrill & Lynch, investment firm partners, were cited twice. They control 23 corporations and 40 trust funds, Fortas stated, and 12 of these are personal holding companies. Some companies are owned solely by Merrill, some solely by Lynch, and some jointly.

$60,000 Annual Saving.

Each saved more than $60,000 a year in income taxes for the past three years, Fortas said. They also own two realty companies—one each. These are not personal holding companies.

The two corporations, through "losses" on sales of securities back and forth, claimed losses in 1935 of $522,987.86, it was shown.

How It Works.

The companies sold securities back and forth and even "round the circuit," according to the testimony, showing great "losses"—which are deductible 100 per cent from taxes—although the securities ended up where they had originated.

Fortas, in adding up Lupton's income through the years with his corporate income, had showed that Lupton saved actually a total in three years of $648,523.49 in taxes.

Mrs. John J. Raskob headed this list through her ownership, partial or entire, of numerous holding companies which represent her farm, estate and other holdings.

On Capitol Hill

Recess by Senate Leaves War and Interior Departments Without 1938 Funds.

IT HAS happened here.

Two Government departments will open business tomorrow without any legal right to spend money, negotiate contracts, hire or pay workers or finance routine operations. They will have no legal right whatever to do any business whatever.

And all because the Senate yesterday recessed until Thursday without final action on the War Department and Interior Department appropriation bills.

The 1937 fiscal year closes at midnight tonight. At that witching hour 1937 appropriations expire. And the War and Interior departments are the only two agencies without 1938 funds.

Nevertheless, business probably will go on, about as usual, at the same old stand. Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring and Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes are optimists. After all, Congress is responsible for their plight. And they believe Congress will make good the debts, and justify the authority they assume after midnight.

THEIR NOVEL predicament was precipitated by House and Senate conference differences on the two big supply bills, and aggravated by the Senate's failure to meet on this last day of the fiscal year. Why the Senate decided to take a holiday today remains a mystery. Solution may come tomorrow in adoption of a "continuing resolution" re-enacting last year's appropriations, if conferees continue in deadlock.

* * * *

MOST PUZZLING of all is the Capitol row that is holding up final passage of the War Department bill. The House wants it divided into two separate measures, segregating the military from civil appropriations. The Senate wants it all lumped into one bill. Both houses have passed the measures in their own way, and now conferees are at loggerheads.

Only a small matter of $13,053,575 is holding up enactment of the Interior bill. The Senate added that amount to the $123,001,304 measure passed by the House. Some $10,193,000 of the amount tacked on by the Senate would go for "vocational education"—rural and community instruction in home economics, trade, industry and teacher-training. Conferees will try for an agreement today.

OFFSTAGE NOISES sent House members running from chamber to cloakroom yesterday, where they discovered that a practical joke of Representative McGranery (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, in the form of a firecracker, had backfired. McGranery allegedly was seeking to plant the miniature bomb under Representative Fuller (Democrat), of Arkansas, when it went off, burned two of his fingers and sent him to the office of Dr. George Calver, House physician. Calver administered first-aid and secrecy. No reporters were permitted to interview McGranery.

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA., oldest of American cities, will have a coast guard station if a bill passed by the Senate yesterday becomes law . . . Park Field Military Reservation, near Shelbyville, Tenn., for which the Army has little use, would be transferred to the Department of Agriculture, under a proposal made by Chairman Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, of the House Military Affairs Committee . . . The Senate approved the nomintion of Joseph H. Lyons to be collector of customs at Mobile, Ala. . . . A $1,500,000 Marine hospital for "somewhere in Florida" was given the Senate Commerce Committee's blessings yesterday, after favorable House action previously . . . New England, New Jersey, Florida fisheries joined hands at House committee hearing to indorse a bill which would establish a Department of Commerce corporation to promote co-operative fisheries marketing associations . . . Another but very different corporation would be provided in a newly offered bill to incorporate the American Chemical Society to encourage "the advancement of chemistry in all of its branches.

REJOICING in the $2,700,000 allotted the Natchex Trace Parkway by the Senate and hoping for House acceptance, Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, said, "the road will be the finest in the Nation" and "will not only be a beautiful scenic drive but will afford a good highway beneficial to industry" in Alabama, Tennessee and Mississippi.

ECHOES of the Hindenburg disaster sounded in the Capitol when Commander C. E. Rosendahl, in charge of the Lakehurst lighter-than-air station, told the House Military Affairs Committee he believes the United States should permit the export of helium.

* * * *

PROUDLY, SENATOR GEORGE (Democrat), of Georgia, announced Gen. Pershing has appointed Edgar B. Dunlap, of Gainesville, Ga., as the third United States representative at a memorial ceremony August 1 at Montfaucon in France, to dedicate a memorial to Americans who died in France in the World War. The other members of the group are Louis A. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, and H. W. Colmery, national commander of the American Legion.

* * * *

AN APPROPRIATION of $300,000 additional to Governmental benediction for the reunion of Confederate and Union veterans at Gettysburg in July, 1938, was asked by Representative Haines (Democrat), of Pennsylvania. The occasion of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the greatest of American battles will, sponsors of the ceremonies hope, seal already healed scars of civil faction. Haines said Pennsylvania already has appropriated $90,000 for the event.

Control of Power Held Vital to U. S.

Providence, R. I., June 29 (AP).—U. S. Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, today declared that whoever controlled the switches in the power business in the United States, controlled American industry.

This control, Hoffman said, John L. Lewis, Committee for Industrial Organization leader, had boasted he would obtain, and with it, Hoffman continued, chaos and destruction could be inflicted on the country in 24 hours.

Speaking before the Providence Rotary Club under the auspices of the Constitutional Educational League, Inc., Hoffman declared Tom Girdler, of Republic Steel, and others of the "little steel" group were justified in their fight against the C. I. O. because a contract with that organization "isn't worth the paper it is written on."

Soil Bureau to Move.

Lynchburg, Va., June 29 (AP).—Arrangements have been made to move the district headquarters of the Federal Soil Conservation Bureau from Lynchburg to Harrisonburg when Congress makes an appropriation to carry on the service, E. Britain Hinted Ready for Deal In Spanish War

Would Recognize Franco as Belligerent if Italy, Nazis Return to Patrol.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 29.—Informed sources said tonight that Great Britain may agree to recognize Spanish Insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco as a belligerent if Germany and Italy continue collaboration in the "hands off Spain" program.

Usually reliable observers forecast this as Britain's next move in an effort to keep the civil war confined to Spain after both Germany and Italy flatly rejected a proposal by Britain and France to patrol all of Spain's coasts in the interests of neutrality.

Government spokesmen said that should Britain agree to accord Franco the rights of a belligerent, it would not mean that his regime would be recognized as equal to the Spanish government.

Would Recognize War.

Instead, they said, it would simply be official recognition by Britain that a state of war exists in Spain.

British observers said such action by their government would amount to "a pat on the back" for Germany and Italy in exchange for their cooperation for world peace.

No mention was made in the non intervention sub-committee's communique of Franco's petition for a belligerent's status.

Informed sources declared such a move hinged upon the fact that British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was ready to do almost anything to confine the war to Spain and bring it to a speedy close.

Rejection Prompt.

Lord Plymouth, in outlining the Anglo-French proposal to take over the Spanish patrol, received a prompt rejection from Germany and Italy.

Both Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador, and Count Dino Grandi, the Italian envoy, asked hypothetically what attitude Britain and France would take if the roles were reversed. That is, if Germany and Italy suggested taking over the whole naval patrol.

The Italian also declared that "not a single volunteer has left my country for Spain since the ban agreed upon by this committee (February 20)."

A suggestion by the French Ambassador, Charles Corbin, that immediate arrangements be made for the withdrawal of all foreigners now prisoners or wounded in Spain is to be discussed Friday.

Studies Proposals.

Rome, June 29 (AP).—Premier Mussolini tonight studied counter-proposals to an Anglo-French plan for patrolling the coasts of Spain.

Fascist spokesmen said the Anglo-French plan was rejected by Italy and Germany because both France and Great Britain were subject to what was freely referred to as "Communist pressure."

What counter plan will be proposed by Germany and Italy still remained obscure.

Accord Still Possible.

Berlin, June 29 (AP).—The German foreign office declared tonight that the Reich has not closed the door to a possible four-power agreement on a reorganized naval patrol of Spain.

Rejection of an Anglo-French plan in London, a spokesman declared, did not indicate that Germany was unalterably opposed to any international patrol of Spanish waters. He said the agreement of Joachim von Ribbentrop, German ambassador to London, to refer the issue back to his government, meant that the Reich still was giving it careful study.

Report Basque Flight.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 29 (AP).—Insurgents tonight reported Basque troops were abandoning the town of Valmaseda in face of the quick insurgent advance from Bilbao.

Capture of the town, one of the most important in the path toward Santander, would give the insurgents control of roads leading to the northwest and southwest.

Appeal for French Aid.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 29 (U.P.).—Basque officials tonight appealed for French warships to rescue their families from Santander where anarchists, seizing control of the crowded Loyalist city, were said to be killing their political enemies.

Jose Ibanez, anarchist leader, was reported to have seized the government on behalf of the extreme syndicalist-anarchist unions, the National Federation of Labor and the Spanish anarchist federation.

Many Socialists, including persons aligned with the semiautonomous Basque government, were said to have been killed in bloody street fighting.

50 Killed by Shells.

Madrid, June 29 (U.P.).—More than 50 persons were killed or wounded tonight in an hour-long bombardment of Madrid by insurgent artillery.

Roosevelt, Jr., Ethel duPont To Wed Today in Delaware

1934 they met at a college dance in New York.

Late today Roosevelt and Miss duPont rehearsed the ceremony. A dinner followed, with the bride-to-be and her fiance host to the bridesmaids and ushers.

Following the rehearsal, young Roosevelt presented Miss duPont with her wedding gift, a diamond and star sapphire bracelet set in platinum. The design was his own, recalling that his father 32 years ago also designed his wedding gift for his bride.

Miss duPont gave him a flat gold watch with a thin gold chain. The back of the watch was inscribed "To F. D. R. from E. duP., June 30, 1937."

About 8 o'clock Roosevelt and Miss duPont and members of their wedding party arrived at the lantern-lit garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Felix duPont, where small tables were arranged under the trees for the dinner party.

Most of the friends of the couple already had arrived by the time Miss duPont and Roosevelt arrived and they were greeted with laughter and shouting as they stepped smiling from their automobile.

Miss duPont again wore her favorite shade of blue, a tone which is said to predominate her trousseau. This time the model was of soft crepe and she wore with it the traditional orchids, a gift from the President's son.

As they made their way to the bridal table, which was set with two large bouquets of mixed flowers, an orchestra played softly. As the dinner party progressed, entertainers appeared from different parts of the garden playing mandolins and banjos and singing popular and old French songs. Long before the party ended, the guests had exhausted their store of old and new songs which they joined the entertainers in singing.

Tonight young Roosevelt also attended a bachelor's dinner given him by the exclusive Harvard Fly Club of which his father also was a member. There he received the traditional toast to the bridegroom and an engraved silver tray similar to one the President has at the White House.

To Wear "Juliet Cap."

Despite secrecy surrounding Miss duPont's bridal costume, it was learned she will wear a "Juliet Cap," recalling references to the "Montague and Capulet" romance, the joining in marriage of two great families whose politics is so completely opposite as to be mindful of the storied hatred of the Shakespeare tragedy.

Instead of pearls, loops of the cap will consist of mock mother-of-pearl made by the duPont factories. It also was said the bride will wear synthetic orange blossoms—also duPont products—around her waist and on her slippers.

members of the duPont and Roosevelt families dashed about the countryside, attending to last-minute arrangements, meeting trains and greeting old friends and relatives-to-be.

By motor, train and plane guests were arriving all day. Some went to Owls Nest; others were entertained at homes of family friends and other duPonts, and a few stopped at hotels as guests of the bride's father. This morning Roosevelt and Miss duPont met at breakfast. Later, they joined the whole wedding party at the prenuptial luncheon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irenee duPont. Four hours afterward the wedding rehearsal took place.

The only member of President Roosevelt's Cabinet to be absent when the couple are united tomorrow will be Attorney General Homer Cummings. Cummings, it was announced in Washington, has been "ordered" by Mr. Roosevelt to deliver his scheduled address before the opening campfire of the Boy Scout Jamboree, as well as to extend the President's greetings to the Scouts.

Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, the bridegroom's eldest brother and sister-in-law, and Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, his sister and brother-in-law, arrived in Wilmington this morning. So did John Roosevelt, the bridegroom's youngest brother, who will be best man.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt will leave Washington by special train tomorrow in time to reach Owl's Nest for luncheon. Twenty-five State policemen will be detailed to guard President Roosevelt and his party while they are in Greenville. The State police will cooperate with the Secret Service in providing protection for Mr. Roosevelt and his party, as well as for the young couple and guests. Police will be stationed at various points about the home and church to direct traffic.

Many members of the huge duPont family will be away when the ceremony begins. It may be a coincidence, and it may not—members of the family have explained, tactfully, there are "too many duPonts"—but Pierre S. duPont, titular head of the family, and his wife sailed last Wednesday for Europe.

Miss Amy duPont, vigorous Republican leader and aunt of the bride-to-be, also is abroad, while Mr. and Mrs. Alfred duPont arranged to sail for Norway and Sweden on the day of the ceremony.

Miss Carolyn duPont is also in Europe, and her sisters, Patricia and Anne duPont, left recently for the West. Mrs. Victor duPont, an invalid, will not be there.

During the evening a phone call came from Richard C. duPont, in which he expressed his regret at not being able to get to the party from Elmira, N. Y., where he has been participating in the glider meet. He said he would arrive by plane in time for the wedding and reception.

3 Are Hunted After Report of $1,500 Holdup

Police Hear Stakeholder Was Robbed by Bettor at Prize Fight.

Underworld reports of a $1,500 holdup of a stakeholder during the progress of a fight card at Griffith Stadium Monday night led the district attorney's office yesterday to issue subpenas for the arrest of three well-known Washington racketeers.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson assigned two men to investigate after stories filtered into police headquarters via the underworld "grapevine." No report was made to headquarters by the victim.

Thompson said that, according to his information, two men had wagered the $1,500 on the outcome of the Lewis-Reddish fight and deposited the money with a third. During the contest, one of the men saw that he had made a poor bet and, soliciting the aid of a henchman, pulled a gun on the stakeholder and recovered not only his own money but the cash bet by the other man.

One of the persons who reported the affair to police was an underworld figure who said he was a witness to the robbery in the half light of the stadium.

Thompson refused to reveal the names of the men who are to be brought before the district attorney today for questioning.

"If they don't talk," Thompson said, "there is nothing more we can do. Somebody will get killed in one of these jobs," Thompson predicted.

Irwin Jury Hears Slain Girl's Sister, Votes 3 Charges

New York, June 29 (AP).—Scarcely ten minutes after Mrs. Ethel Kudner completed her story of the mad impulse which led Robert Irwin to kill her mother, her sister and a lodger last Easter Sunday, a New York County grand jury handed up three indictments today charging the eccentric sculptor with first-degree murder.

Still showing signs of the fear in which she had lived since the triple killing on Beekman Hill, Mrs. Kudner went before the grand jury shortly before noon. Five police officers followed in quick succession and District Attorney William C. Dodge emerged with the indictments.

Mrs. Kudner was the second witness called by Dodge, who personally presented the case to the grand jury to ask for three first-degree murder indictments—one for each of the victims, Mrs. Mary Gedeon, her daughter, "Ronnie," the artists model' and Frank Byrnes.

The grand jury session opened as Samuel S. Leibowitz, widely known criminal lawyer, went to the Tombs to talk to Irwin and to lay his plans for the expected insanity defense.

It was Mrs. Kudner, Irwin's confession said, who was to have been the victim of his homicidal urge. It was Mrs. Kudner whom he "loved and hated" and whose death would bring "the way out" of his mental sufferings.

Deportation Is Asked For Two White Slavers

Baltimore, June 29 (AP).—Federal Judge William C. Coleman recommended the deportation of two men after they had pleaded guilty to charges of transporting women in violation of white slave laws.

In recommending deportation, Judge Coleman sentenced Joseph Romano, alias Cilibrasi, to 12 years in the Lewisburg penitentiary and John Castagna, alias Costello, to 10 years' imprisonment. He also fined Castagna $10,000.

N. Y. Police Arrest 100 WPA Strikers Fighting Job Cuts

New York, June 29 (AP).—About 100 men and women employes of the WPA education project were arrested tonight when they refused to leave the project headquarters after a prolonged sit-down demonstration against staff cuts.

Attempts by WPA guards to oust the demonstrators, who originally numbered several hundreds, were accompanied by several small skirmishes. Three women fainted.

Near the Mexican border sheriff's deputies started a search on the report of a Chula Vista police matron that she had seen a young man, wearing a tan shirt and driving an automobile that fitted the description of one of the two automobiles sought by police.

Officers here checked the report of a butler in a fashionable Bel-Air home that a disheveled blood-stained young man came to the door last night and tried to sell him his automobile, first for $15, then for $10. The man fled when the butler stepped back in the house to telephone police.

Officers sought a small, battered roadster automobile, without top, fenders or running board, black in color and with a box-like body in the rear.

Such a car was seen early Saturday afternoon in Inglewood with the three girls in it, and later in the evening was seen leaving the hills where the children's bodies were found yesterday afternoon.

Police said a motorist saw such a car in the area early today but it eluded his chase.

Gov. Merriam called upon all county, municipal and State officers to "search for a fiend who is on the loose and must be caught."

Gannett Abandons An Albany Daily

Albany, N. Y., June 29 (AP).—The Albany Knickerbocker Press, one of a group of newspapers published by Frank E. Gannett, carried in its early editions tonight announcement of its discontinuance as a morning newspaper.

At the same time it announced the transfer of the Albany Times-Union, a Hearst publication, from the evening to the morning newspaper field. The Evening News will continiue as an afternoon newspaper.

Welfare Drive Will Be Opened By Roosevelt

Broadcast in October Will Launch Mobilization for Human Needs.

The 1937 campaign of the Mobilization for Human Needs will start about October 18, with President Roosevelt and others participating in a Nation-wide broadcast, it was announced yesterday by Charles P. Taft, 2d, who has accepted the national chairmanship of the undertaking.

Taft called on the President yesterday, along with Stillman F. Westbrook, Hartford, Conn., president of Community Chests and Councils, Inc., which directs the Mobilization, and Allen T. Burns, New York, its executive vice president.

The usual September conference at the White House of those directing the campaign will be dispensed with this year, Taft said.

Taft succeeds as chairman Gerard Swope, who served in 1935 and 1936, and Newton D. Baker, who held the office for the three previous years.

"Approximately two-thirds of the urban population of the United States are represented by the 390 chests, which between October and the end of the year will raise community funds to maintain their private health and welfare service," Mr. Westbrook said.

"The mobilization annually calls public attention to the financial requirements of the private local agencies; maintaining these indispensable social and health services. Thirty-five national welfare organizations sponsor the mobilization. No national fund is raised.

"Totaling some $80,000,000 last year, these local funds support a multitude of community activities, providing hospitalization, public nursing, child care, family social work and relief."

A national citizens' committee for the mobilization will be formed by Mr. Taft, and announced later.

Boy, 16, Is Jailed In Traffic Death

A coroner's jury yesterday held a 16-year-old boy for Police Court action under the negligent homicide act after an inquest into the traffic death of Mary Wersley, colored, 40, of 613½ L street northeast.

Norman Potosky, 620 N street northwest, was ordered held by the jury after it was testified his machine struck the woman in front of her home Monday. She died a short time later in Casualty Hospital.

Meanmhile, Andrew Thomas, colored, 33, suffered cuts to his face when his automobile was involved in a crash at Fourth and L streets northwest. He was treated at Sibley Hospital.

Police arrested Phillip S. Shields, colored, 30, 2139 N street northwest, driver of the other machine, and charged him with leaving after colliding.

Public Opinion Cited.

Those who saw General Motors action as another move in a nation-wide industrial campaign to force labor organizations signing labor contracts to establish equal responsibility with employers, cited Republic Steel's apparent temporary victory over the C. I. O., and several other developments as resulting from public opinion aroused by violence.

Tom Girdler, chairman of Republic, and chief witness before a Senate committee last week, made much in his arguments there and in statements for publication, of C. I. O.'s "irresponsibility" as he said it had been shown in the auto workers' dealings with General Motors.

"A contract with C. I. O.," Girdler had declared in citing the General Motors experience, and against a background of news dispatches citing violence elsewhere, "is not worth the paper it is written on."

Vandenberg Asks Labor Checks.

These charges were followed in Washington by Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, proposing to amend the Wagner labor act in such a way that the law would compel certain action by labor as well as by employers. The proposal has aroused considerable interest in Washington and elsewhere. The proposal would:

Provide punishment for unions violating contracts by enabling the National Labor Relations Board to stop collection of union dues and assessments during the period of discipline; require that all officials be citizens of the United States; provide penalties against any union forcing employes to join by coercion or physical violence; or which destroyed the property of any person or violated any person's rights in real or personal property; or which called a strike for the purpose of forcing any person to violate any contract or any laws of any State or the United States.

General Motors, it was believed may be laying the groundwork for making some of the purposes of the proposed Vandenberg amendment a part of the law.

Purchased Riot Guns.

Chicago, June 29 (U.P.).—The Inland Steel Co. purchased ten 12-gauge riot guns and 250 shells loaded with rock salt, four days before the Steel Workers Organizing Committee called a strike there, F. A. Alexander testified tonight before the National Labor Relations Board.

Alexander, a salesman for the American Munitions Co., testified that W. P. Mortensen, purchasing agent for Inland, ordered the Winchesters and specified that the shells be brass.

"Rock salt," Alexander testified, "would cause cuts and bruises and at close range might cause blindness."

Alexander's statements closed the second day's hearing before the board on charges filed by Van A. Bittner, regional director of the S. W. O. C., that Inland violated the Wagner act in refusing to sign an agreement covering wages, hours and working conditions.

No War Coming, Fuehrer Declares

Berlin, June 29 (A.P.).—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler assured Thomas J. Watson, of New York, today that "there will not be any war."

Watson, president-elect of the International Chamber of Commerce, said Hitler told him substantially this in a private conversation.

"There will be no war. No country wants war, no country can afford it. Certainly that is true of Germany."

Watson said he was impressed with the simplicity and sincerity of Der Fuehrer's expression.

Man's Skeleton Found in Brush Near Greenbelt

Cause of Death, Identity Puzzle Police; Workers Find Remains.

Prince Georges County and Greenbelt, Md., police yesterday began an investigation of the death of a 35-year-old white man, whose skeleton was found hidden in thick underbrush near the Resettlement Administration's low-cost housing project.

The skeleton was discovered Monday by workers engaged in clearing a tract belonging to the Berwyn Heights Real Estate Co.

Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the county police, declined to advance any theories as to how the man met his death. A blue work shirt, a pair of lightweight pants and some lightweight underclothing found near the body indicated the man had been dead since last summer, police said.

Several strands of brown, straight hair found near the remains led authorities to believe the man was white. An examination of his teeth fixed his age at about 35, police said.

Greenbelt police were called into the case on the theory the dead man might have been an employe on the Resettlement Administration's project.

Funeral Is Today For Frank Tweedy

Funeral services for Frank Tweedy, 83, resident of Washington for more than half a century who died Monday, will be held at 10 a. m. today in the W. W. Taltavull funeral home, 3614 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Tweedy was employed as topographical engineer with the Geological Survey division of the Department of the Interior for 41 years until his retirement. He was a member of the expeditions which carried out the original surveys of Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming, and of the Columbia River basin.

He leaves a son, Temple Haydn Tweedy, of Bayville, Long Island, a daughter Gertrude Tweedy, of Washington, and a sister, Isabelle Tweedy, of Plainsfield, N. J. His late wife Emma Haydn Tweedy died in 1930.

Irish Free State Voting Tomorrow

Dublin, Irish Free State, June 29 (A.P.).—The Irish Free State's 1,750,000 voters will decide Thursday on President Eamon De Valera's proposed constitution and also elect the 138 members of a revamped Parliament.

An expected close government victory would change the name of the country to Eire, and assert sovereignty over the present Free State but eventually would include Ulster.

An all-inclusive Eire is acknowledged in the Free State as a mere hope for the future.

Divorce Suit Filed By Mary McCormic

Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—Mary McCormic, the opera star, filed suit for divorce today, charging Homer V. Johannsen, a lawyer, knocked her down last March 17 and threw her across a table six days later.

The singer, alleging cruelty, asked a divorce and return of her maiden name. She did not ask alimony.

The couple was married last November 26 after a brief long-distance courtship. They were separated March 25, she said, because of his alleged cruelty.

Four Women Fugitives Captured Near Prison

Bedford, N. Y., June 29 (A.P.).—Twenty-year-old Nellie Gutowski, known to Broadway as "Norma Parker, the woman in black," and three other women who escaped last night from the Westfield State farm were found hiding in the woods today hardly a mile from the institution.

They were taken back to the farm, and moved from the cottage where they had been living to solitary quarters.

Soviet Isle Accord Reported by Japan

Moscow, June 29 (A.P.).—The Japanese Embassy tonight announced agreement with Russia to withdraw armed forces from the Balshoi and Sennukha islands in the Amur River, boundary between Siberia and northeast Manchukuo.

A Japanese communique said the agreement paved the way for amicable discussions over disputed Russo-Japanese claims to sovereignty of the islands.

The Russian foreign office said the Japanese version of lengthy deliberations between Mamoro Shigemitsu, Japanese Ambassador to Russia and Maxim Litvinoff, commissar of foreign affairs, was not precise. It refused, however, to divulge any further details.

Administration Moves for Aid Of Democracy

Roosevelt and Van Zeeland Agreement Leads Developments.

velopments in foreign relations which took place in Washington yesterday. Without hesitation and unanimously, the Senate ratified eight Pan-American "good neighbor" treaties negotiated last December at Buenos Aires.

The agreements ratified by the Senate included:

1. Convention for the maintenance, preservation and re-establishment of peace.
2. Additional protocol relative to nonintervention.
3. Treaty on the prevention of controversies.
4. Inter-American treaty on good offices and mediation.
5. Convention to co-ordinate, extend and assure the fulfillment of existing treaties between the American states.
6. Convention of the Pan-American highway.
7. Convention for the promotion of inter-American cultural relations.
8. Convention concerning artistic exhibitions.

The prompt ratification given to these agreements by the United States was hailed as a further gesture of this government's desire for a greater solidarity of nations on the American hemisphere—an entente in the economic field, as well as the political, which now is being given effect gradually by the presence here of a Brazilian mission under the leadership of Minister of Finance Souza Costa. President Roosevelt plans a conference with the Brazilian official next week.

But the ratification of the Pan-American treaties and conventions by the Senate were regarded as possessing a significance which went far beyond the western hemisphere. That action was seen as further notice to Europe that this country cannot view sympathetically activities disruptive of world peace such as those in which Italy, Germany and Japan recently have engaged. Among the principles set up by the Buenos Aires convention were two of which these nations might take notice: (1) non-recognition of the acquisition of territory by force, and (2) condemnation of the intervention of states in the internal or external affairs of another.

In the spirit of the Buenos Aires conference—emphasized by the Senate's action yesterday—this Government must continue to regard unfavorably Italy's conquest of Ethiopia; Japanese excursions into Chinese territory and Italian and German intervention—actual or threatened—into the Spanish civil war.

Thus it was no mere rhetorical gesture which caused President Roosevelt and Premier Van Zeeland to point out in their joint statement the program adopted at Buenos Aires and to let the world know that of the principles envisaged by that program, the following three were specially emphasized in their conversations:

"The importance of peoples being educated for peace and led by their governments toward peace.

"The development and faithful observation of peace agreements.

"The pursuit of commercial policies that create peaceful trading interests between nations."

Viewed in this light the Roosevelt-Van Zeeland joint statement becomes far more important than a routine description of the conversations which took place between the two statesmen. The first part of the communique which refers to the trade agreement and monetary understanding between the United States and Belgium as working with "great satisfaction" is hardly more than that.

But the statement then strikes a note of importance to other nations, when it asserts that the Roosevelt-Van Zeeland conversations went "beyond relations between Belgium and the United States" in a discussion of "economic difficulties and the continuing armament race that are now creating so much anxiety in the hearts of people everywhere."

Although no reference was made to the French financial crisis, and the President declined comment on that subject at his press conference, this development must have been foremost in his mind when he approved the joint statement and during his luncheon with the Belgium premier. Thus the following might be taken as a statement of American policy at this time:

"Out of the conversations it was stressed that within the frame of traditional American policy it was the disposition of the United States o co-operate in the joint work of rebuilding international trade, continuing co-operation in monetary matters, and seeking arrangements whereby the burdens and dangers of overwhelming armaments might be reduced or the method of their employment safeguarded."

What is intended by the last phrase remains a subject of conjecture, but the reference to "continuing co-operation in monetary matters" was regarded as a promise on the part of this Government to make every reasonable effort, compatible with traditional American policy and this country's interests, to continue the operation of the original tripartite monetary agreement of last September, to which three other nations have now adhered.

Thus it would appear that the aim of this Government is to do what it can to support French financial and monetary policy when it is formulated in the interest of international currency stabilization. Such was reported to be the aim of those who joined in a series of Treasury conferences throughout yesterday. At the Treasury it was said that France had not withdrawn from the tripartite agreement.

Stormy Weather Predicted for July, August On Basis of Planet Line-up Like That of '81

'Long-Range' Theory of Colorado Engineer Being Tested.

If you are counting on July or August for that "nice and quiet" vacation now due you, it is only fair that someone warn you against the weather. As a matter of perfect frankness, you may run into terrific storms. Things look almost as bad as they did in 1881—when all the planets got bunched on one side of the sun and the weather went on a spree well remembered among weather-conscious individuals.

"There is a distinct similarity between the planetary alignments for the next two months and for July and August of '81. If I wanted to predict, I'd say we are liable to have storms," O. S. Bowman, Colorado Springs engineer whose weather theory is now being tested by the Department of Agriculture, said last night.

He smiled when he said it; for he knows how people (U. S. Weather Bureau included) "scoff" at long-range forecasting." Bowman rarely makes a forecast, except for his own consumption; but his theory concerning the connection between planetary alignment and the weather interested Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, so much that he began to sponsor an investigation of it several years before he became a member of the President'e cabinet.

Is Immense Task.

Since the number of planetary alignments is almost innumerable and an immense amount of "back checking" is required to see whether the theory holds good for weather already on record, the task of working ou' complete and workable charts that could be used for forecasting is a great one.

"If it took 50 years and cost $50,000,000, it would be worth it to the farmer," Bowman declared yesterday.

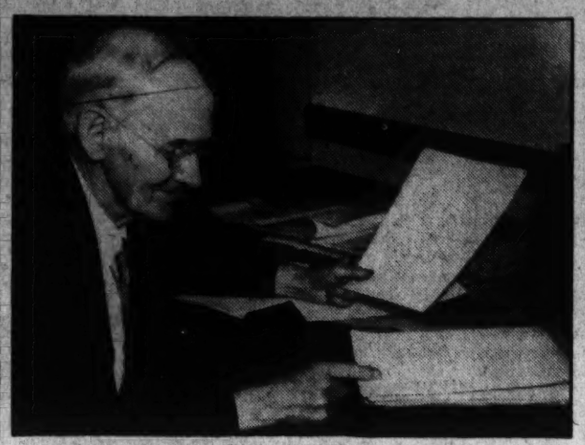
Larry F. Page, astronomer and mathematician in charge of a study of long-range forecast procedures being made by the Department of Agriculture, said that the Bowman theory can be checked mathematically and that the department is still at work on it.

"It is one of five long-range methods we are studying. We are studying the work that has been done by the Russians, the ten-day forecast being used in Germany, the work the British Meteorological Service did studying the monsoon rainfall in India, the McEwan system of forecasting West Coast weather on the basis of the ocean's surface temperature, and also Mr. Bowman's theory.

"I do not believe there is enough evidence in support of any system yet to say that if you just took it and found out all about it you would know all there was to know about the weather."

Theory Found Interesting.

Page said that he finds the Bowman theory an extremely interesting one to work with. He was put in charge of its study by Mr. Wallace in 1925 when the Secretary was editing Wallace's Farmer. The Secretary visited the laboratories of Bowman in Colorado, and, although he was "skeptical," he said that if there were a 50-to-1 chance of its truth time and money should be spent to prove or disprove it.



O. S. BOWMAN,
Colorado engineer, whose theory that weather can be forecast by planetary alignment is being studied by Weather Bureau experts here.

On the basis of Page's study, Wallace's Farmer successfully forecast a hot and dry July for 1931. "We could see from the records that the planetary line-up for that month was most unusual. By checking back we could see that only three times in 56 years had a similar planetary alignment been recorded. On each of those times the weather had been unusually hot and dry. We could not miss, with such to go on," Bowman said.

That is the only "public forecast" before the one made above, but Bowman has used his method to forecast the Puerto Rican hurricane, the first Florida hurricane and the West Coast hurricane 13 months later.

Bowman became interested in sun spots when he was a boy in the Ozarks, and since that time has never relinquished his study of astronomy and weather. He keeps astronomical charts with him on his numerous trips between Washington and his Colorado home. He considers that his theory is the "only sure thing in the varying weather picture," but he hesitates to talk about it "because it is hard to say just a little bit and not sound silly."

Roosevelt, Van Zeeland Text

The joint statement issued yesterday by the President and Prime Minister Van Zeeland of Belgium was as follows:

The President and the prime minister have had the opportunity of reviewing the operation of the trade agreement between their two countries and of the arrangements for co-operation and stability in the monetary sphere in which the two governments are now joined with others.

The results are a matter of great satisfaction. They are a clear demonstration that countries can develop an enlarged and mutually beneficial trade between each other, serving to give employment and to improve the standard of living in both countries, without disturbing in any significant way the organization of their production. It is an example of what can be done where fear, hostility and aggressive intention are absent.

Such arrangements have served and will continue to serve both as steering machinery for the monetary systems not only of the six countries that have become parties to the arrangement but to much of the rest of the world.

Beyond relations between Belgium and the United States they reviewed the questions of economic difficulties and the continuing armament race that are now creating so much anxiety in the hearts of peoples everywhere. Out of the conversations it was stressed that within the frame of traditional American policy it was the disposition of the United States to co-operate in the joint work of rebuilding international trade, continuing co-operation in monetary matters, and seeking arrangements whereby the burdens and dangers of overwhelming armaments might be reduced or the method of their employment safeguarded.

Among the principles envissaged in the program adopted by the American Republics at Buenos Aires there were specially emphasized:

The importance of peoples being educated for peace, and led by their governments toward peace.

The development and faithful observation of peace agreements.

In addition to the joint statement, President Roosevelt, on his own behalf, issued the following statement:

"The conversations between the prime minister of Belgium and myself and other officials of the American Government have been most helpful and encouraging. I am very glad that the prime minister has paid us this visit. I know that his stay in the United States will strengthen the admiration and affection of the American people for Belgium. We recognize in him an advocate of our ideals and hopes.

"The prime minister will carry back to Europe the earnest best wishes of the American people."

other European armies, to the very last consequences."

Since Mr. Benes made this speech, arguing with unassailable logic that while the European democracies "must not threaten others they must themselves be prepared for any eventuality," several items have been underlined on both sides of the balance sheet. They are well worthy of consideration, and those unfavorable to peace may properly be considered first.

First in this category, in the opinion of several with whom I have raised the point in Prague, comes the present neutrality policy of the United States.

To the Czechs just one point in this policy stands out. It is the fact that under the present legislation the United States refuses to make any distinction between an aggressor and the victim of his aggression.

Reduced to cases, and without mincing words, this is taken to mean that so far as America's great influence is concerned, Germany has been given a free hand to overrun Czechoslovakia. The Czechs do not think we intended to do that, but that is what they think we have done.

The second factor regarded as unfavorable to peace is the deterioration in Russia. Whatever the detailed explanation of the current rebirth of wholesale terrorism, now affecting even the military high command, it clearly indicates a weakened and decadent government. The Czechs admit that they are now very dubious as to the military value of their defensive alliance with Russia.

RUSSIAN TROUBLE SEEN AS AN AID TO PEACE.

On the other hand the disturbances in Russia are regarded in some quarters as being a factor favorable to peace.

This viewpoint is found among those who believe that the real solution for the German problem is for that country to take Russia in hand, providing the directive and technical skill which Russia lacks and developing the huge market which Germany needs. A further internal decay of the present regime in Russia, both Germans and Czechs agree, would enable the Nazis to extend their influence eastward and thus relieve the present pressure to the south. So the Russian upheaval is not regarded by the realtistic Czechs as necessarily an unmixed evil.

A second development, which definitely makes a general European war less probable, is the course of the fighting in Spain. This has not merely demonstrated the relatively poor quality of some of the German and Italian war equipment. It has also shown, both at Madrid and Bilbao, that the defensive can be maintained for a very long time against an attack which apparently possesses great military superiority.

There is no doubt that these lessons have been absorbed by Germany in a way which makes an attack on Czechoslovakia in the near future highly improbable. The effect on Italy is even more pronounced. The crushing defeat of his troops at Guadalajara is said here to have deeply affected Mussolini.

A third factor operating for peace, not merely between Czechoslovakia and Germany, but everywhere, is the British rearmament program. The relief which this has brought to Europe, by showing that the greatest European democracy is prepared to fight to preserve its ideals, is incalculable. The turn toward peace in Europe is closely connected with the British decision to rearm, and the steps being taken to make that decision effective.

BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT RELIEVES ECONOMIC PRESSURE

Yet another force tending to make war impossible is the business improvement everywhere. This country is getting its full share of the advance. Unemployment in Czechoslovakia is 20 per cent less than this time last year. The currency is stable. Foreign trade, both exports and imports, is expanding steadily.

Premier Hodza is playing a leading part in pushing Danubian preference plans, which seek to re-establish closer economic unity between the nations which were formerly parts of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire. A recent commercial treaty between Czechoslovakia and Austria is proving very beneficial to both countries.

In this connection much interest is shown here in the pending reciprocal trade treaty with the United States. Dr. Alois Stangler, chief of the economic section of the foreign office, believes with Secretary Hull that these treaties are doing much to relieve the economic tensions conducive to war. He is now awaiting the arrival in Prague, to further the negotiation of this treaty, of Dr. Henry Grady, of the U. S. Tariff Commission, formerly chief of the trade agreements section of the Department of State.

As the work on this treaty advances Dr. Stangler will proceed to Washington to represent his country in the concluding stages. Such visits receive less publicity than those now frequently exchanged by foreign ministers. But they are no less important in promoting peace by promoting prosperity, as Secretary Hull puts it. Incidentally Mr. Hull is very popular here now for his seeming willingness to consider a certain limited adaptation of our general opposition to perference in commercial treaty policy, so as not to retard development of the Danubian preference idea. Certainly it is obvious that there must be external partiality toward economic consolidation in Central Europe if peace is really be consolidated here.

In balance then, it will be concluded that the forces operating for peace in this European danger zone are stronger than those tending toward war. Certainly that is the reasoned conclusion of President Benes, though he is far too much of a realist to believe that the battle is as yet won beyond peradventure.

THREE NECESSITIES TO A STABLE PEACE.

Three developments, in the opinion of this outstanding European statesman, are necessary to insure that really stable peace may be substituted for the present uneasy condition, which may best be characterized as a common consent to postpone war.

In the first place, he suggests, the French must call a halt to the present bitterness of their internal politics and really work co-operatively, regardless of individual interests, to promote the authority of whatever government comes nearest to representing the will of the people.

In the second place, there must be even closer working agreements between France and Great Britain, since on a mutuality of policy between these two powerful democracies depends continuation of that system of government in Europe as a whole.

Finally, as President Benes sees the world situation, the United States, if it is interested in the perpetuation of democracy, will be forced to concern itself increasingly and intelligently with the affairs of Europe. He fully understands the reasons for isolationist sentiment. He agrees that commitments tending to entangle America in European affairs are out of the question.

But he also knows that the mere mass and power of America does much to determine world destiny, whether we act or whether we fail to act, whether our policy is to asssist in preserving peace as a whole or merely to try and insulate America from any war which, at the outset, is none of our business.

So President Benes concludes that our power gives us an inescapable responsibility, and that one of the major factors in determining the issue of peace or war in Europe is the extent to which we recognize that responsibility.

Strike Factions Are Criticized By President

'A Plague on Both Houses,' Roosevelt Says; Viewed as Aimed at Extremists.

Montagu and Capulet families brings, it was recalled, the death of Mercutio, friend of Romeo, at the hands of the Capulet Tybalt. Mercutio is stabbed as Romeo holds his weapon aloft, seeking to prevent further hostilities. The sorely hurt Mercutio exclaims:

"Why the devil came you between us?
I was hurt under your arms.
A plague o' both your houses!
They have made worm's meat of me."

When the President was asked what he intended to do about the "plague" he declined to comment.

Meanwhile, his mediation board virtually disbanded after the two members presented their report, in rough form, to Secretary Perkins. The report is to be submitted to Lloyd K. Garrison, third board member, before it is made public.

There was no indication that the Federal Government contemplated any further action in the steel conflict, already fatal to a dozen persons, although Miss Perkins said she is studying the situation to determine whether further mediatory efforts are possible.

She said the board feels that a "man-to-man discussion around the conference table" is essential to end "the bitterness and suspicion which separate the two sides," though all efforts to bring about such a meeting have failed. The four steel companies invloved said they would make no agreement with what they termed the "utterly irresponsible" Committee for Industrial Organization.

Proposal Rejected.

The board revealed the companies also rejected a proposal, termed by Miss Perkins a "conservative, constructive compromise," which called for an agreement between the companies and the union, to become effective only if the union won an election to be held among the steel employes under auspices of the National Labor Relations Board.

Miss Perkins made it plain that the board had "suspended" it activities and no one would be appointed to Taft's place following his departure for Europe.

Lewis' call for maritime union leaders to meet here, in the form of a telegram, said:

"The purpose of this meeting is to formulate plans for the complete organization of the workers in the entire maritime industry and work out policies for the co-operation of all interested groups with the Committee for Industrial Organization."

Confers With Brophy.

The call was issued after Lewis had conferred with John Brophy, C. I. O. director, who has just returned from a protracted trip to the Pacific Coast, where he discussed C. I. O. organization with ship union heads. It was understood the Western workers would be taken in first and then a drive to enroll the Gulf and Atlantic workers would be undertaken.

Among those invited is Harry Bridges, president of the Pacific Coast District of the International Longshoremen's Association and one of the founders of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Also invited were Harry Lundeberg, secretary of the Sailors Union of the Pacific; Joseph Curran, deck division, National Maritime Union, and others.

Two C. I. O. Attacks.

On Capitol Hill, in the course of the day, two attacks on the C. I. O. were made by Congress members.

Senator Bailey's critical statement said C. I. O. representatives had conducted illegal sit-down strikes, seized the mails, beaten "honest workers" and caused declaration of martial law.

He called on workers to "support only organizations that respect the law" and warned that while labor's cause is popular now "it can be discredited."

On the floor of the House, Representative Hook, Democrat, Michigan, demanded that Lewis remove "communistic leaders" from the C. I. O. He declared that Lewis had thrown out "certain communistic leaders" from his United Mine Workers some years ago, but said the same men are now aids of Lewis.

Crime Never Pays, Forbush Sadly Admits, As He Faces Possible Sentence to Alcatraz

Captive Breaks in Jail, Issues Scared Warning Against Mobsters.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Barely out of his 'teens, young Walter H. Forbush, slim, pale bandit suspect and accused member of the now-famous "black-face" gang, embarked on a crime career which may send him to Alcatraz prison.

Sitting last night in an anteroom at the District Jail, the 24-year-old desperado—who recently escaped from the Lorton Reformatory only to be recaptured amid a hail of policemen's bullets in Baltimore a few days later—appeared to have lost much of his swaggering indifference.

He was scared—for one of the first times in his hectic life. He doesn't like prison and he cringes at the thought of remaining in "stir." For his present predicament, Forbush blames police, prison "crime schools" and his companionship with hardened criminals.

Admits "Some Jobs."

With as much force as he could put into words through clenched teeth, he denied any connection with the so-called "black-face" gang. He thumped his right fist into the sweaty palm of his left hand and said he "didn't even know" any members of the holdup mob.

"Sure," he almost hissed, "I was in on some jobs—but I was forced—forced, understand? It was either go through with it or get shot in the back."

Martin J. Walsh, 35-year-old gunman, killed in the Baltimore capture after their escape from Lorton, was the one who led Forbush into "'big time" crime, the young prisoner charged.

It was Walsh who engineered all the Washington robberies for which Forbush now awaits trial, the youth said. They met in Lorton during an earlier "visit."

"You Can't Win."

Glancing hastily at several jail guards who stood nearby, Forbush hesitated. And then, before continuing, he swallowed hard once or twice, and said:

"Listen, I want to warn any young man who is thinking of tryin' to beat the law that it don't pay. There ain't no profit in crime. It just leads to hardships and no matter how you try, you can't win. Take it from me."

Forbush said he was born in South Boston, Va., and has one sister and five brothers. Both his parents—described by him as that "precious old couple"—are living.

WALTER H. FORBUSH.

Some years ago, young Forbush was employed by the District Water Department. He got into a jam over some stolen radios and was arrested. This was in 1933. He says the radios were brought to his room by a companion and he was tricked into pleading guilty to the charge.

Back Again.

Later he was placed on probation. But it wasn't long before "the law" had him again. This time the charge was attempting to steal an automobile. He went to Occoquan Workhouse for 11 months. He was put to work driving a truck between Occoquan and Lorton. That's how he met Walsh.

It was some months later, after they both had been released, Forbush said, when the "big time" crime forays began.

The young criminal seemed to grow paler as he related incident after incident where Walsh "forced" him into robbing gas stations and liquor stores. Forbush admitted he carried a gun—"but Walsh made me."

While they were robbing, at gunpoint, a liquor store in Southwest Washington, the youth continued, "the cops came up." And again Forbush found himself behind the bars—this time on a sentence from four to six years.

Pausing to choose his words, Forbush bit viciously at his lower lip and explained the Lorton escape was planned because "a bunch of guards threatened to beat me."

Escape Described.

"I couldn't stay there any longer," he said. "They treated me terrible. If Walsh hadn't suggested the escape, I would have gone alone."

Then he told of taking the auto of a Lorton guard and "beating it" with Walsh. Not a shot was fired from the watch towers as they fled, Forbush added.

The pair went first to Baltimore, secured guns, and at Walsh's insistence, returned to Washington and robbed two liquor stores and two restaurants. Then they went to Pittsburgh, he said. Later, Walsh left and returned with a car identified as belonging to Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi.

While they walked a Baltimore street June 20, police spotted them. Bullets flew and Walsh was killed. Forbush was recaptured and brought back to Washington.

Yesterday, he was arraigned in District Court and pleaded not guilty to the four charges of robbery. Trial was set for Friday.

"And I wasn't never connected with the 'blackface' gang," he insisted. "I never even heard of Beck."

Roosevelt's Aid Asked by Mayor Of Johnstown

Shields and Samuel DeFrancesco, attorney for the labor leaders.

Shields ordered the attorney removed, and after some scuffling police ejected him.

They later brought a charge of disorderly conduct against him, but he was released on bond.

While State police sought the cause of the thunderous blasts that rocked the mountain fastness south of the city, the mayor sent a second protest to Gov. Earle asking that State police be placed on guard at all reservoirs in the strike territory.

"Prompt action may save an entire community against annihilation," declared Shields.

Maj. Lynn G. Adams, of the State police, said:

"My men are on the job at Johnstown; they'll do what they can about it."

The mayor told the governor he had no power to guard the reservoirs against the "dynamite gang which operated in our vicinity early this mornirg."

He estimated the explosions "will incur losses to my people running into hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Shortly before the roar of the explosions broke the mountain stillness, the company said 90 per cent of its normal pay roll of 15,000 had reported for work.

Johnstown's citizens committee, self-designated "C. I. O. Resisting" organization, announced tonight the launching of a national movement to assure "protection of the right to work for all loyal Americans who want to work."

Francis C. Martin, chairman, said he had telegraphed invitations to civic groups in other cities on the seven-State steel strike front asking them to atend a meeting in Johnstown.

Martin, who heads the Johnstown Chamber of Commerce, said the date for the meeting would be fixed later.

In his telegrams, Martin explained that the citizens committee and a co-operating steel workers' committee, organized June 19 as a protest against the declaration of martial law in Johnstown by Gov. George H. Earle and the closing of the Cambria plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Gang Smashed.

Warren, Ohio, June 29 (AP).—Police and National Guardsmen announced today they had smashed a wholesale bomb "terrorist" ring in Warren, arresting three men and sending out an alarm for the alleged "brains" of the gang, Gus Hall, C. I. O. strike leader.

The thirteenth death in the wide-flung C. I. O. "siege of steel" was recorded at Beaver Falls, Pa., where a strike picket died from a head wound inflicted by a tear-gas shell.

Late Arrivals.

The decision was reached after an appeal by Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana who sought to lift the strike pending outcome of the National Labor Relations Board hearing on the strike issue—refusal of steel firms to sign contracts with the C. I. O.

Pickets, estimated by police to number 2,500, were massed around the strike-bound plants by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, determined to resist the move to reopen the mills. The number dwindled to less than 300 after the reopening was postponed.

D. C. Sales Tax Proviso Fought In Committee

people, suggested revival of the income tax in lieu of the sales or business privilege levy.

"A sales tax takes a poor man's bread and a hungry child's glass of milk," she said. "It is not based upon a man's ability to pay, but rather upon his necessity to buy.

"The most tragic thing about a sales tax is that those who suffer most are those who are unable to protest and have no powerful agencies of propaganda at their command."

Besides the income tax, Mrs. Boyle proposed an inheritance levy and a land-value tax.

Sales Tax $5,000,000.

The Board of Trade, in response to a request from Senator Tydings, submitted an estimate that a 2 per cent sales tax would raise $5,000,000 even though food, medicines, cheaper clothing, fuel and ice were exempt.

Senator Tydings, in answer to an inquiry from the press, stated his position on the sales tax thus:

"While I'm not committed to it, I'm trying to develop the wisdom of it."

Other witnesses heard yesterday included Edwin S. Hege, president of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association; George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club; J. Nelson Anderson, general counsel of the Federation of Business Men's Association; Mrs. M. C. Mallon, secretary of the District Petroleum Association, and C. F. Creswell, of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

Group Opposes Realty Tax.

Explaining that his association opposed the real estate tax increase, as well as the gross receipts levy and the motor vehicle weight tax, Hege said:

"Real estate is already bearing an unduly heavy burden in the raising of revenue. We are fearful, moreover, of rents being elevated, home ownership being discouraged, and an imperiling of the equities of many."

Hege said his association favored a retail sales tax with exemptions for medicines, cheaper grades of clothing and packaged and raw foods.

Opposition to any increase in the gasoline tax and approval of the special highway fund were voiced by Keneipp.

"We have estimated that under this bill and other existing law motor vehicle owners will pay $5,752,590.63 to the District in special automotive taxes during the next fiscal year and about $2,133,470 additional in Federal motor taxes," he said.

This amounts to about 20 per cent of the total value of cars in Washington, he added, and compares with a realty tax of 1½ per cent.

Anderson appealed for the invoking of the 60-40 law, under which the Federal Government is bound to pay 40 per cent of the District's expenses, but, in lieu of that, suggested a sales tax rather than the gross receipts levy.

Senator McCarran at this point stated that he would offer an amendment subsequently to the gross receipts tax to exempt all non-profitmaking businesses operated for the sole benefit of members of clubs or organizations.

Welfare Body Opens Camp For Children

Vacation begins today for approximately 95 underprivileged boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 12, who will attend the first two-week session at Camp Good Will's new location at Chopowamsic, Va.

The children will assemble at Thomson School, Twelfth and L streets northwest, this morning for health examinations by volunteer physicians and nurses under the direction of Dr. Joseph A. Murphy and will go to the camp by bus.

The following committee will assist with the good-will examinations: Mrs. Nancy J. Parsons, Mrs. Edgar Campbell, Mrs. Laura Costenbader, Mrs. Ruth Niefield, Mrs. Eli H. Griffith, Mrs. Martin A. Johnson, Mrs. Henry Jaeger, Mrs. Walter C. Jones, Mrs. William Lee, Mrs. W. H. McColley, Mrs. Frank Noell, Mrs. Jenny Meir and Mrs. Thomas Rhinery.

The personnel of the two camps, as announced by William H. Savin, director of the Family Service Association, is as follows:

Camp Good Will: Mrs. Robert O'Kane, nursery; Miss Elizabeth Pearson, nature and pioneering; Teresa Moriarity, nurse; Josephine Brown, guidance; Marjorie, Manning, dramatics. The following will serve as counselors: Robert L. Cochran, Phyllis Davis, James D. Fletcher, Mary E. McGrann, Peter Ostuni, Theodore Smith, Norma Gail Stalker, Natalie R. Wandzilak, Charles S. Welsh and David S. Welsh.

Camp Pleasant: Thelma K. Lovelle, nurse; Ferne Greenway, assistant nurse, and the following who will serve as counselors: Eleanore Dixon, Grace Dodson, Louise Foster, Dorothy Gassoway, Adolphus Hughes, John F. Hume, Ambrose Lewis, Orville Lewis, Harryette G. Mitchell and Florita J. Roy.

Downey Given Liberty at Last On 'Ambiguity'

Long Battle Ended Over Simultaneous-Added Robbery Terms.

After running the gantlet of legal battles in Federal courts from Georgia to Washington and halfway back again, Bernard Downey, self-confessed robber, yesterday saw the gates of the District Jail swing open and permit him to regain his liberty eight years short of the maximum set in the local District Court.

Downey pleaded guilty to three robbery charges early in 1932. He was given three 4-year sentences, but the clerk, in putting the sentences on the official book, wrote them ambiguously and it was not clear whether the sentences were to run concurrently or consecutively.

Justice J. M. Proctor, the sentencing jurist, recalled Downey, who had obtained fleeting freedom from jail, and reimposed sentence according to his recollection of the incident. Downey appealed, and the United States Court of Appeals ruled a judge other than the sentencing judge should have heard the appeal.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday held that Downey was entitled to the benefit of the ambiguity.

'Al' Joy, Pioneer With Washington Ball Club, Is Dead

Aloysius C. Joy, 77, who as "Al" Joy was first-string catcher for the Washington Senators back in baseball's pioneering days in 1882, when Cap' Anson was a hero on the diamond, died Monday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret P. Scanlon, 4517 Fifteenth street northwest.

For 20 years Joy had been superintendent of the Knights of Columbus Home here. Throughout his career on the diamond he was known as an excellent player whose ability was matched only by his sportsmanship.

After leaving the diamond, Joy opened and operated a confectionery and bakery in the 700 block Seventh street northwest. When he became increasingly prosperous, he gave large sums of money to charity.

Funeral services for Joy will be at Sacred Heart Church tomorrow at 9 a. m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

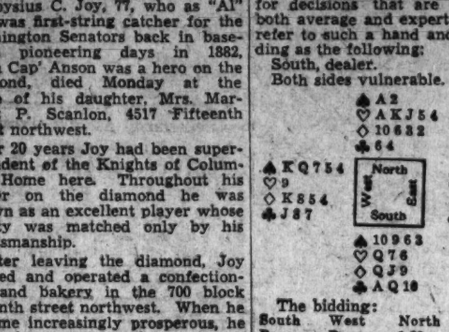
Contract Bridge

You Can't Bid Backward.

One of the most common of all bidding situations creates the need for decisions that are difficult to both average and expert players. I refer to such a hand and such bidding as the following:

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♡	Pass

The bids up to the question mark are too orthodox to require much comment. After passing, South must show that he had almost an opening bid and his two notrump, considering his distribution and honor strength, is the only conceivable response. North, with 5-4-2-2 distribution, logically rebids the hearts—first, to show at least a five-card suit and second, to show no great love of the notrump. It then becomes necessary for South to decide whether to persist with notrump or raise the hearts to game.

Let us examine the pros and cons: South has fair heart support which he has not yet shown directly. As against this, his two notrump shows, by implication, some sort of a fit. His hand, divided as it is, contains no ruffing power whatsoever and, hence, in so far as his own 13 cards go there is no virtue in playing at a suit declaration.

Finally—and here we come to the crux of the situation—if South bids three notrump, North can if he desires, still go on to four hearts. But if South bids four hearts the die is cast—nothing can return the partnership to three notrump. Thus, since by its very nature a three notrump bid is more tentative than a four heart bid would be, it is only logical for South to continue with his notrump bidding rather than raise the heart suit.

At four hearts, the opening lead of the Ace of diamonds and continuation would result in the defeat of the contract. East would ruff the third round and the defenders still would have to make a spade trick.

At three notrump, with West on lead, the proper play by the declarer would probably bring home nine tricks. West would open his fourth-best spade and dummy's Ace should be played without delay. Then on a low diamond lead from dummy, unless East made the alert play of putting up his Ace, three notrump would be as good as home.

I said the contract probably would have been made because, unfortunately, not many players in East's position would appreciate the need for putting up the Ace immediately.

Mrs. Biden Burial Rites Conducted

Funeral services for Mrs. Gertrude B. Biden, 63, were held at her home, 3603 Dale drive, Silver Spring, Md., yesterday. The Rev. A. T. Watson, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church, officiated. Burial was in Rock Creek Cemetery.

A native of Talbot County, Md., Mrs. Biden moved to Kentucky when a child and was educated in the schools of that State. Later she moved to Baltimore, where she attended the Bard Avon Dramatic School and married William R. Biden. She and Mr. Biden came to Washington 21 years ago, where they resided until Mr. Biden's death three years ago. Since that time Mrs. Biden and a foster daughter, Miss Minna Loeschke, had lived in Silver Spring.

Mrs. Biden, who had been ill for six months, died Saturday at her home. Miss Loeschke is her only survivor.

Referee, Aide Freed Of 'Fence' Charge

Indictments against Bernard (Benny) Bortnick, wrestling referee, and Walter E. Koons, manager of Bortnick's junk yard at 171 N street southeast, were dismissed in District Court yesterday. George E. McNeill, assistant United States attorney was the prosecutor.

The two were indicted for purchasing aluminum trays, said by police to have been stolen from an exclusive hotel. When evidence developed to show that neither knew that trays had been stolen the charges were dismissed.

Three colored men named as having taken the trays are yet to be tried. Two were employes of the hotel and the third was the driver of a truck in which the trays were moved.

Presser Finds Safety From Wife in Prison

New York, June 29 (AP).—A plea of "hold me without bail, judge," voiced by John Palermo, 37, a clothes presser, was rewarded today in court when Magistrate Henry H. Curran held him in $1,000 bail because he allegedly beat his wife, Dorothy, 37, with a broomstick.

"Some of my friends," he explained, "might get together and put up the bail for me, and then, judge, I'd be back with my wife again.

"And ever since I married her, judge," he said, in conclusion, "jail is the only place I've ever had any peace."

Welcome, Boy Scouts!

Washingtonians accustomed to finding the parks and byways along the Potomac arrayed in simple green are amazed today to discover virtually every foot done over in khaki. Tents have been pitched on both sides of the river by the hundreds and in between them roam thousands—25,000, to be precise—of Boy Scouts. According to Army comments, it is the largest peacetime encampment in the country's history.

It is an inspiring sight and one well worth a tour around Potomac Park to behold. Assembled here for ten days are the delegates of a group from which the Nation will draw its leaders of tomorrow Surveys indicate that more than 50 per cent of all high school seniors are Boy Scouts. More significant, their scholarship is slightly better than that of non-Scouts and they hold a clear majority of class offices. Better than 65 per cent of the American Rhodes Scholars nominated in the last ten years have had Scout training and an even higher proportion of Scouts is found among cadets and midshipmen at West Point and Annapolis.

Washington can take particular pride in the fact that the person chiefly responsible for bringing the boys here and for organizing them in such effective order is a former District boy. Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, grew up here as an orphan. He it was who conceived the plan to celebrate in Washington two years ago the twenty-fifth anniversary of Scouting in this country. A threatening epidemic forced a postponement. But today the plan has been fulfilled and Washington salutes Dr. West, not only for the Jamboree, but also for the personal accomplishment it represents. In 27 years he has developed, from a simple idea borrowed from Great Britain, a movement numbering almost 2,000,000 active members and 6,000,000 "alumni."

Assisting him in this work today are some 1,500 full-time Scout officials and more than 250,000 volunteer Scoutmasters and assistants. To these latter particularly is owed the gratitude of the Nation for their important contribution of time and energy. Full recognition of their service may be expected in the address to be given by President Roosevelt—himself an ardent Scout supporter for more than 15 years—who will be speaking for the whole country in praising the Scouts' objectives and achievements. It might be more accurate to say he will be speaking for the whole world, for Scouting today has spread to every corner of the globe, as the Scouts from more than 20 foreign lands in Washington for the Jamboree bear witness.

Conspicuously absent are representatives from three countries run by totalitarian rule today. In two of these, the Boy Scout movement has been rudely superseded by highly regimented and desperately militarized youth movements. Happily, the rest of the world has not yet descended to a point of conscripting youngsters. Most countries still pin their faith to the virtues well summarized by the Scout law in which the boys promise not to die but to live, not to cringe but to blossom, by holding themselves ever

Horse Sense In The Water.

Recreation, in and on the water, has long been the foremost hot weather sport. Whether it takes the form of sailing or swimming, it is uniformly marked by the same healthful, stimulating release for mind and body. Unfortunately, another characteristic common to all types of water sports is the element of danger, as was so tragically demonstrated in the drowning of three Washingtonians last Sunday.

That the number of such deaths may be lessened, if not entirely eliminated, the American Red Cross has just issued a booklet entitled "Life Saving and Water Safety." Carroll L. Bryant, for many years a member of the national staff of the First Aid and Life Saving Service of the American Red Cross, is the author. The contents range from common sense precautions against "Swimming After Eating" to the more technical tactics of saving a fellow swimmer. The overturned canoe, maintains Mr. Bryant, offers two means of self-rescue. "If righted," he says, "even though full of water, it is capable of supporting the weight of its crew." Secondly, it can be made "to sustain the weight of the victims without righting it."

This handy little life-saver also contains valuable advice on ice skating accidents, though no one around these parts will need to consult this chapter for many months to come. Resort pilgrims and stay-at-home swimmers, however, will do well to peruse the rest of the book. For even the best swimmer is subject to cramps and the neatest streamlined boat to accident. Here, then, is a valuable short-cut to a safety upon which Sunday divers would do well to pounce, ponder, and practice.

France's Financial Crisis.

Nine months after devaluation of the franc, France has been plunged into another financial crisis worse than that confronting M. Blum when he became premier a year ago. However, the problems of the new Chautemps government are essentially the same as those with which a succession of cabinets have struggled more or less ineffectually in recent years.

France's financial troubles are domestic in origin and can only be overcome through restoration of public confidence in the government's financial policies and faith in its ability to execute promises. In other words, the people must be prepared to make the heavy sacrifices required to cut down budgetary deficits and attract investment support for government loans.

Experiences of the past few months have shown quite convincingly that devaluation alone cannot provide a lasting solution of France's problems. An anticipated further devaluation of the franc would yield a temporary windfall which an almost empty treasury could use. It might also afford a certain stimulus to exports. But a major financial reform is essential to halt the flight of capital and safeguard the stability of the franc for the future.

The devaluation of last fall brought only temporary cessation of the capital outflow. A few days ago it became known that the 10,000,000,000 franc exchange fund created out of devaluation profits had been virtually exhausted by efforts to support the franc—a disclosure indicating the tremendous extent of the capital exodus.

Despite the flight of funds abroad and widespread domestic hoarding, the Bank of France still possesses a gold reserve greater than that of any country except the United States. In case after case, however, it has been discovered during these postwar years that abundant gold reserves are not an adequate defense against the flight of capital frightened away by sinister political or financial developments.

In the case of France, these perennial and deep-seated fears have lately been rendered more acute by the huge outlays for armament and the cost of the Blum social reform measures. To these direct causes of financial disquiet there is added anxiety over industrial conflicts due to rising living costs and to the government's liberal labor program. Opposition to new tax levies, of course, becomes all the more formidable under such conditions and amply justifies the Chautemps government in its demands for sweeping decree powers to rescue the country from its present plight.

The gravity of the situation is revealed in the mounting public debt which (exclusive of foreign war debt obligations) approximates $25,000,000,000 at current exchange rates, while the deficit for the current year is estimated at $1,750,000,000. With the treasury nearing the end of its resources, and heavy loan maturities falling due within the next few months, it is imperative to revive public confidence in order to obtain funds to meet emergency needs, to say nothing of the demands of the more distant future.

On the one hand, new tax levies are needed and, on the other hand, drastic retrenchment in outlays. The first task is to convince the people that sacrifices are inevitable to save the country from another financial debacle. It is infinitely harder to attract political support to carry through a sound financial program than it is to devise a feasible plan. Both tasks, however, are of a magnitude to test the mettle of the able new finance minister, M. Bonnet. All friends of France will hope that he will be able to carry on the work of financial regeneration without the handicaps upon freedom of action that forced the Blum government to retire.

The Local Tax Dilemma.

Perhaps the most distinctive feature of the Senate District Committee's tax hearing is the sharp contrast it offers to the attitude of the House in considering this identical problem. Members of the Senate committee are sincerely trying to work out a revenue program that will not impose severe hardships on District residents. The House tied itself in knots trying to avoid taxing its own members, with little regard for the welfare of the local community.

That attitude has created a real dilemma for Washington officials and the Senate committee. The outrageous levy on chain stores was eliminated without any controversy. But the committee is still confronted by the difficult task of finding a reasonable substitute for the income tax killed by the House. Higher real estate taxes could scarcely be defended. They would fall upon only part of the people who benefit from District revenues, and this group is already overtaxed.

Serious objections have also been raised to the proposed tax on the gross receipts of business and professional enterprises. Levies of this sort are patently inequitable. Too often they force small businesses to close by taxing their turnover instead of their profits. It is well to remember that the District Commissioners turned to this levy only as a substitute for the sales tax.

In these circumstances it is not surprising that the sales tax has gained strong support. A direct levy on retail sales is obviously undesirable, for it is not based on the individual's ability to pay. Yet in some respects it is superior to the business privilege or gross receipts tax. And providing food, low-priced clothing and medicine are exempted, there is much to be said for it in preference to additional burdens on the homeowner.

It is the House which has turned attention again to the sales tax. That body has refused to permit reasonable taxation of incomes. Since Washington is, to a considerable extent, a city of temporary residents, a sales tax is about the only other practicable means of reaching the incomes of those who now enjoy the advantages of municipal service without contributing their share of the cost. More than any other city, Washington needs a tax that will tap the incomes of transients and others who work here but live in Maryland or Virginia.

Undoubtedly the sales tax should be avoided if possible. It is the task of the Senate, however, to approve a levy that will raise the essential revenue in the most equitable manner. If that policy should result in enactment of a local sales tax, the chief responsibility will fall upon the House which sabotaged the original tax program.

Michigan's Labor Policy.

Strike-ridden Michigan has struck back at industrial disorder by enactment of a new labor relations law. Weary of persistent disputes since the General Motors "sit-down" strike, the legislature at Lansing has outlined a new code of fair practices for employes as well as employers. In negotiating for a settlement of the motor strikes, Gov. Murphy did not wait for Washington to take the lead. Now his administration is determined to curb extremist action regardless of whether or not Congress amends the Wagner Act.

It is interesting to note the differences between this measure and the National law. Both are aimed primarily at the protection of workers' rights. Both confirm the rights of labor to organize and bargain collectively with employers. In each case strikes and picketing are recognized as legitimate weapons in the hands of labor. But the Michigan statute also lays certain obligations upon labor unions, in contrast to the silence of the Wagner Act on that subject.

Mass picketing of the type which has recently threatened to plunge Michigan as well as Pennsylvania and Ohio into a state of anarchy is specifically forbidden. "Abuses of this sort," says Gov. Murphy, in an obvious understatement of the case, "have caused a great deal of trouble." Henceforth Michigan will not permit its peace to be threatened by interference with employes entering or leaving a plant, by obstruction of public highways, or by any influx of pickets from plants or unions not directly concerned with the strike.

By this action Michigan has brought the right to work, as well as the right to bargain collectively, under protection of the law. The policy thus established by statute is equivalent to that adopted by Gov. Davey in Ohio through orders to National Guardsmen on strike duty. If widespread lawlessness and violence are to be avoided, this basic principle must be everywhere recognized.

Like the Wagner Act, the Michigan law also authorizes investigations by the Industrial Relations Board. But instead of limiting inquiries to the complaints of employes, Michigan proposes to use this means of protecting both employers and workers against racketeering, extortion and other unfair practices.

Even more important is the emphasis on conciliation. Not content with prescribing rules under which strikes must be conducted, the legislature has provided flexible machinery to aid the adjustment of labor disputes. Of course, the best means of eliminating strike violence on either side is to prevent strikes, or, failing that, to terminate them by amicable negotiations before distracted tempers reach the exploding point.

No statute is a guarantee against strikes or their consequences. But Michigan's new labor law does appear to be an important step toward substitution of amicable collective bargaining for industrial warfare. The constructive action at Lansing suggests that other States may be induced to face their labor problems in a realistic way. Indeed, the rising menace of vigilance organizations and outbursts of violence such as that at Johnstown yesterday may force them to adopt more positive measures to keep labor disputes under control.

Even if all the States enact labor polices of their own, however, amendment of the Wagner Act will be no less urgent. There are many situations with which the States can not successfully cope. If collective bargaining is to be established without protracted and violent struggles, the Federal Government also must assume the role of an impartial mediator and referee. When the attitude of the Secretary of Labor—as revealed in her suggestion that Ohio use its subpoena power to coerce recalcitrant steel executives—is added to the bias of the Wagner Act, the weakness of the National policy is clearly evident.

Congress has a definite responsibility to revise this policy in the light of recent experience.

"By a simple operation, I cure husbands of grouchiness around the home," declares a surgeon. What, cut their throats?

"The most important thing in telling a story is knowing what to leave unsaid," asserts an editor, with whom no husband will disagree.

The Boys Clubs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Boys Clubs of the Metropolitan Police in the District of Columbia have reduced juvenile delinquency far past the standards of former years. This is one of the many reasons why the clubs are in great demand in the District.

Under the supervision of the major and superintendent of the Metropolitan Police the clubs of Washington have made much headway in the line of bringing in the youthful citizens off the street and giving them the full benefit of enjoying athletics, games, etc. The four establishments constructed in the past three years are Boys Club, No. 5, located at Fifth and E streets southeast; Boys Club, No. 4, located in southwest; Boys Club, No. 11, located at Kenilworth, a suburb of Washington, and last, the colored Boys Club in northwest.

The director of the clubs is Sergt. John Scott and the assistant director is R. B. Harris. These men have done well in their effort to please the hearts of boys.

I, being a member of Club No. 5 since it was established on February 22, 1934, have enjoyed the wonderful features of its activities. Football, baseball, and basketball teams were organized and were furnished with excellent equipment. Boxing and wrestling have also been outstanding in the club. Under the direction of Mr. Brown a large band was formed and many boys have been taught the use of an instrument. The club has succeeded in furnishing the boys with a variety of things. The club goes on outings and also swimming trips. In the clubs are ping pong, boxing, wrestling, football, basketball, many games and libraries. In order to operate the clubs a large amount of money is needed.

Camp Brown, recently constructed for the use of the boys, is going to be in operation all summer. It has canoeing, fishing, swimming, hiking, games, and, most of all, plenty of eats. It is located at Scotland, Md., at the mouth of the Potomac.

As a member of the harmonica band of No. 5, I have had much enjoyment out of playing to the requests of clubs and other organizations. A string orchestra also has been organized at No. 5.

In coming years better prospects are being looked forward to by the Police Boys Clubs. The clubs combined have a total of about 8,000 boys. The clubs have sponsored many contests and have offered wonderful prizes to winners. The Boys Clubs of the Metropolitan Police have organized good teams which have captured many honors. The Boys Club of Washington is a worthy cause to look into.

In closing this letter, I thank Maj. Brown, Director Scott, Assistant Director Harris and the supporting citizens of the District of Columbia the benefits and privileges which the Boys Clubs offer.

Shocked By Ad.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was certainly shocked to find in a paper with such high standards for truth and accuracy as The Washington Post, such a palpably insidious concoction as that open letter from the Citizens' Committee of Johnstown, Pa.

This letter protests its impartiality all the while that its very existence, size and wide publication testify to its having been paid for by potent moneyed interests.

This letter claims that local authorities in Johnstown were "protecting" the strikers and that there was no disorder—at the very time when Mayor Shields was sending hysterical telegrams to the President demanding military intervention!

And finally, this letter—published throughout the country, mind you—attempts to instill in the minds of all readers fear and hatred of what it admits to be a perfectly legal movement . . . the movement to organize workers for their own betterment.

Applauds U. S. S. R.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a non-Communist, a one-armed World War veteran and a patriotic native of these United States, I rise to protest in a vehement manner against your anti-Soviet editorial of June 18.

I say, and I challenge anybody to deny, that the Soviet democracy (not dictatorship) has done more for the workers in the short 20 years than the capitalists have done from the time immemorial.

What blessings for the world had the workers of Italy, Germany, Ethiopia and Spain purged their countries of Fascist malefactors, exactly as the Soviet workers are doing today! If you knew just a little bit of the inferno of war, you would give all your sympathies to the U. S. S. R., for it, by attacking the Fascists on all fronts, is the world's biggest peace factor. The more Fascists executed in the U. S. S. R. the better for the world.

Being true Marxists, the Soviets never skim the surface only; they always strike at the very root of the evil, knowing that when the bacillus is destroyed the wound heals itself. They also know that their country will emerge manifold stronger when the last Fascist traitor is destroyed. It would not hurt us in the least if we copy some of these Soviet undertakings.

CONRAD M. PAINE.

The Davey-Perkins Row.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The proposal of Secretary of Labor to the Ohio Governor to suppress and restrain Tom Girdler until an agreement—or manipulative settlement—favorable to "our labor friends" was bludgeoned through, regardless of law or the merits of the case, hits a new low in New Deal ineptitude and blunder.

It renews the question how, after such a demonstration, hope for solution of any national problem can exist while the New Deal remains enthroned and continues to run—wild—on its mandate. It is also to be hoped the action taken was without knowledge, approval or dictation from the White House.

Secretary Perkins' denial of such "unwarranted high-handed proposals" would carry more weight if backed up by written or telegraphic confirmation, in the open, of what was actually proposed.

Governor Davey, commenting upon the proposed dictation, speaks too hopefully when he says: "Government in this country cannot do the things we condemn in Russia, Italy and Germany." It is clear from this that the Governor's training in the demagogic branches has been defective—and he doesn't know his New Deal.

Modify The Tax Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recent editorials in the local press have accurately expressed enlightened public sentiment regarding taxation, both within and without the District. The action of the House of Representatives on this matter has, in the main, been contrary to the sentiment expressed.

Now that the bill providing ways to collect funds for the expenses of the District government has passed to the Senate, a calmer and more reasonable interpretation of the legislation necessary is to be expected.

It is to be hoped that the Senate, acting in accordance with modern practice in such matters, will eliminate or modify the present antiquated features of the bill.

Reply To The Sun.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. O'Brien, editor of the New York Sun, condones his omission of material facts by saying they were implied in the editorial. Some of the facts were stated by implication, others were entirely omitted by implication. To cite a few examples:

The Sun says that the strikebreakers "met no interference while they stripped the mine of earth without removing coal." The Coal Commission report says explicitly, "In April 1922, he (the mine operator) secured the consent of the union to work at uncovering the coal during the strike, with the promise that there would be no production of coal." In other words the union made an agreement and kept it. The Sun didn't mention that.

Mr. O'Brien asks how union men could have been discharged when a strike had been on for 82 days. The report states "The union men were discharged June 13. (Seventy-four days after the strike had been started and eight days before bloodshed). Then workmen from a labor agency in Chicago began to appear and armed guards from Hargrave's agency were placed about the mine to protect it. These facts indicate that he (the operator) intended to work the mine and feared trouble." Mr. O'Brien blandly brushed aside these facts and implies that this could not have been so. The question is surely one of fact not of Mr. O'Brien's credulity.

The Sun uses Lewis' reply to local union officials, to view these scabs as "any other common strike-breaker," to imply that Lewis ordered the bloodshed which later occurred. The commission report says: "Although the commission finds that the tragedy might have been prevented, it also finds that the union officials and the public officials never anticipated that it would happen. They all believed that the non-union members would be kicked out of the county and that would end it." It further states: "There is no doubt that when the promoter of the Southern Illinois Coal Co. started to operate his mine in defiance of the union he was inviting mob violence and flirting with death, he knew it and prepared to meet it."

The facts cited above clearly indicate to me that the Sun's editorial and Mr. O'Brien's later comment were one-sided, full of implications contradicted by facts conveniently omitted and designed to substantiate a preconceived belief.

Democracy In Virginia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Meade's article in The Post of June 26 concerning the coming primaries in Virginia is illuminating only because it reveals the deplorable conditions of a State that once claimed among its citizens men with the names of Jefferson and Randolph. The observations advanced by Mr. Meade are not in themselves pertinent to the questions raised, but represent the intellectual decline of a so-called "cultured" middle-class in the Old Dominion. It is necessary to suppress a yawn when one reads that " . . . the growing centralization of Government in Washington must discourage interest in the affairs of every State. Unless counteracted, it seems a fair assumption that it will eventually lead to the drying up of democratic Government at its source."

The facts of the case prove that the self-appointed exponents of democracy in Virginia are the very ones who are doing all they can to destroy our democratic concepts of government. Are the disciples of European fascism less anti-social than the henchmen of Byrd and Glass in Virginia? Are the working people of Virginia less slaves than the working classes of Italy or Germany? Spiritually they might enjoy greater freedom, but economically and politically they are subservient to the Virginia political machine. VIRGINIAN.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Dean And The Radio.

Here's to the town of New Haven,
The home of the Dwights and the Malleys,
Where a dean, if a star, can go almost as far
As the Cantors, the Wynns and the Vallees!

• • • •

The university and radio worlds are still talking of the Running Broad Jump of the Year—the leap of a dean from Yale to the National Broadcasting Co.

• • • •

Dr. James Rowland Angell, who is retiring after 16 years with Old Eli, will take up a new job as educational counselor for the radio chain. This proves once again that if a man sticks in college long enough he will ultimately get somewhere.

• • • •

Yale looms up as a handmaiden of the mike. She has now given Rudy Vallee, Billy Phelps and Dean Angell to the radio and the Big-Three football games to the gasoline industry.

• • • •

There is now no doubt that Mother Yale has been wired for sound. Youth is already beginning to confuse campuses with air programs and to think of a curriculum as something connected with amplifiers.

• • • •

It was a curious week for Yale men. Just as they nodded approval of Larry Kelley's spurning an offer to join the St. Louis Cardinals Gas House Gang as a professional ball player for big money, they were shaken to their heels by the news that Dean Angell had been snared by radio.

• • • •

The rumor that it was a summer trade, N. B. C. getting Dr. Angell and Yale getting Ben Bernie, Jack Pearl and Jessica Dragonette is denied.

• • • •

Don't misunderstand the situation, folks! The former dean of Yale is not going onto a program to push cigarettes, pancake flour or anything like that, and it is not a move to compete with Fibber McGee and Mollie. It is carefully explained that Dr. Angell has been hired to give radio a cultural side.

• • • •

"The N. B. C. is deeply conscious of an obligation to foster the broadest range of educational and cultural interests of the public." The only question is whether N. B. C. will be, in a manner of speaking, at home on the "range."

• • • •

Maybe it's all a move to make all broadcasters speak English.

• • • •

Does the great unseen audience want culture? And if it gets it, what will many of those radio actors do for a living?

Some people predict this is only the beginning and that in time it may be possible to get a sheepskin through a loud-speaker.

• • • •

Do you wish to go through Yale free? Do you want to win four years at New Haven? Then join our contest now and write an essay stating in not more than 100 words why you prefer a blue sweater to one of any other color.

Kitchenetting.

For boiling eggs, the cook book says,
Take minutes five to have them right.
I've followed rules, and tried for days,

—Hilda Z. Ascheim.

A fresh attempt is being made to unionize baseball. We can hardly wait for the fun when they try to picket the third base line.

Canadian Indians are staging a sit-down strike. They have seen movies of some of those labor riots and think they see a short cut back to the good old days when a man could enjoy himself with a tomahawk.

Pitching Records.

They are saying that Carl Hubbell, a pitcher for the New York National League Club, has won 24 consecutive games. They do this by combining his 1936 and 1937 records. They seem to forget that Albert G. Spalding, then with Boston, won 24 consecutive games in the same season.

Officially "Rube" Marquard won 19 consecutive games in 1912, but Al Monroe Elias, statistician, has said that Marquard should be recorded as winning 20 consecutive games; he as a relief pitcher won the twentieth. Hubbell won 16 consecutive games last season.

If Walter Johnson, in his best years, had been pitching for a winning team, he probably would have left a record for all the rest of them to try to match or surpass. Johnson was far and away better than the Washington team he served.

Sky Storming Yankee

By N. H. Randers-Pehrson

Division of Aeronautics, Library of Congress.

TO THE average individual the automobile is far more important than the airplane, but few bother much about its history, except as far as it affects the turn-in value of the present family car. The radio is really a greater technical wonder than flying, still, we accept it as a household necessity and rarely ask questions about how it came to be. With aviation it is different, books on aviation history seem to have a peculiar popular appeal. One of the reasons for this may be that so many of the pioneers, the men who did the important work, were also star performers.

One of these was Glenn H. Curtiss, motor builder, inventor and manufacturer, but also pilot of spectacular flights, "the fastest man on earth," and a popular hero. His life story, told by Clara Studer in "Sky Storming Yankee," is decidedly good reading.

Curtiss was one of the few aviation pioneers who did not start at a tender age observing the birds while dreaming the appropriate dreams. Frankly he considered all flying machine inventors cranks. Well on the way to success and prosperity in the motor and motorcycle business, he had no particular desire to join the flying fraternity. But when the Darius Greens had sufficient cash he did not object to selling them motors, whether it was to propel gas bags, helicopters or aeroplanes. It was his fame as motor builder that brought him into contact with Alexander Graham Bell, who persuaded him to visit his home at Baddeck, Nova Scotia. Here Curtiss came under the spell of the enthusiasm of Bell and his young assistants, MacCurdy, Baldwin and Selfridge, and from then on he belonged to aviation.

• • • •

THIS meeting resulted in the formation of the Aerial Experiment Association, with Curtiss as "director of experiments in special charge of active power." In the course of a year this group brought out four airplanes, the four younger members each being in charge of one machine. All these planes flew, and Curtiss, with his "June Bug," won the first leg of the Scientific American trophy. When the Aerial Experiment Association was dissolved, Curtiss formed an airplane manufacturing company and leaped into international fame by winning the Gordon Bennett Cup at Rheims in September, 1909. His next great triumph was the winning of the New York World prize for a flight from Albany to New York, one of the most daring and dramatic flights in all aviation history.

All this Miss Studer brings to life again in a very readable narrative. When the main facts are familiar, personal touches and details give added interest. One is usually suspicious of the human interest stuff, especially dialogue, in popular books, because some authors seem to make it up and make no distinction between fact and fiction. We have flagrant examples of this in certain aviation books, but when Miss Studer brings in details which can not readily be verified, one still has the impression that they are authentic.

Her list of acknowledgments, including many of Curtiss' close friends and associates at Hammondsport, confirms this impression. This list does not include members of the Curtiss family, and as a result his home life is entirely in the background, Mrs. Curtiss being mentioned only quite casually a few times. On the other hand the description Mrs. Studer gives of Curtiss at work, his methods of invention and relations with assistants gives an interesting inside view of the infant airplane industry. The Curtiss flying school and exhibition teams are also vividly pictured, the narrative spiced with anecdotes and amusing incidents.

THE chapter describing the experiments on North Island could have been better arranged, and could have done more adequate justice to the development of the seaplane and flying boat, which was Curtiss' greatest contribution to aviation.

The patent litigation, which ran through most of Curtiss' career in aviation, is handled very nicely. In the case of controversy, many popular biographers use every opportunity to heap abuse upon the hero's opponents. Mrs. Studer has tried to be fair to both sides. In one instance, however, she does injustice to the Wright brothers, namely when she states that a letter to them from the Secretary of the Aerial Experiment Association met with a curt refusal. The fact is that the Wright brothers wrote a polite answer, giving the desired information.

• • • •

THE book is not burdened with many engineering data, but when they are introduced, they are correct. Mrs. Studer knows the airplane and understands the functions of its various parts, she can write about it plainly, without any fuss and without stumbling. Historical data are handled carefully, a few errors and omissions might be pointed out, but with the exception of the one just mentioned they are unimportant. The illustrations, which are assembled at the end of the book, are well chosen, and many of them have not been published before.

Clara Studer has done a very good job, not only in telling what Curtiss did, but also who he was. He is alive on every page in the book.

Golding the Puritan

"It seems very strange that such a celebrated man, and one who had such influential friends and connections, and was also the owner of such extensive properties, should have suddenly disappeared, and that there should be no record of where he was buried, or if he left any family." Thus, Dr. Malcolm W. Wallace of the University of Toronto in 1906 quotes a correspondent, whom he does not identify, in the introduction to his reprint of Arthur Golding's translation of "A Tragedy of Abraham's Sacrifice" by Theodore Beza. This was in 1906 and the "celebrated man," Arthur Golding, who was one of the greatest translators in an age when translation was as highly regarded as original composition, had been dead for three centuries. Little was known of his life before Dr. Wallace's sketch, which was excellent but brief and incomplete. But Golding did leave some family, and after 30 more years one of his descendants, Louis Thorn Golding, undertook a thorough research and study of the fragmentary facts known concerning the life of this Elizabethan puritan. His effort has given us a complete recounting of all that can be learned of Arthur Golding, his life and his works.

The author has collected with painstaking care all the known information concerning his worthy ancestor, and using these few facts as a chisel, has unearthed a wealth of new information and thus incurred the debt of present and future generations of students of our early literature. This indebtedness is acknowledged in the foreword by Dr. Joseph Quincy Adams, director of the Folger Shakespeare Library.

The first chapters of "An Elizabethan Puritan" are principally biographical and not only reconstruct the life of Arthur Golding but portray an interesting picture of English life in the days of "Good Queen Bess." Poor Golding, though wealthy in his middle age, was always in rather deep water financially and we find Queen Elizabeth exacting her share of his diminishing fortunes. She is rather heartless in this, we think, after reading the dedication of Golding's translation from the French of Jacques Hurault's "Politicke, Moral and Martial Discourses' in which he pays an eloquent tribute to England and Elizabeth. But he is a puritan, and his whole philosophy "is crystallized in one word, 'obedience.' Obedience of the sovereign to God, obedience of the subject to the sovereign, and over all the sheltering arm of Almighty protection from the assaults of Satin within or his agents without."

The author discusses the recently discovered posthumous copyright of Golding's works which was issued two days after his burial. The copyright is of interest and value as it lists most of the works of Arthur Golding and assists the author in correcting some erroneous attributions which had previously been supported. Following this is a bibliography of Golding's works, probably as complete a one as will ever be compiled.

As the author tells us in the preface, he has attempted no new evaluation of the literary quality of Golding's work, but instead he devotes a chapter to quotations from four centuries of universal criticism and analysis.

The last chapter is a brief discussion of the effect of Golding's translation of Ovid's "Metamorphoses," his most popular work, upon Shakespeare. Ovid's influence on Shakespeare has long been known. The author points out that there is internal evidence that Shakespeare had read Ovid in the original, but that there is no reason to doubt that his familiarity with the poet's work was gained from Golding's translation.

While it will be of interest only to students, Louis Thorn Golding has compiled a volume which is a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the Golden Age of English Literature. The author tells us that he spent several years in the research and his accurate, scholarly effort not only tells the story of a great Elizabethan but also reflects his own painstaking industry and patience.

Scoutmasters

"HANDBOOK FOR SCOUTMASTERS." (Published by the Boy Scouts of America, 2 Park avenue, N. Y. Two Volumes, $1.75.)

Crammed full of the best scoutmaster material that has ever been put into type and loaded with interest for you who have sons. . . you who teach boys . . . and even you who may only know a boy . . . is the new "Handbook for Scoutmasters," published by the Boy Scouts of America and released last week.

The "Handbook for Scoutmasters" is written in informal and very readable style by William Hillcourt of the editorial service of the Boy Scouts of America, himself scoutmaster of a Boy Scout troop, and illustrated by the well-known artist, Remington Schuyler.

For more than a quarter of a century the Boy Scouts of America has been one of the accepted institutions in the community life of America. Their new "Handbook for Scoutmasters" is worthy of the reputation they have built up.

Fiction Footnote to Revolt

(Editor's note: Miss Stratton has just been awarded a special third prize by Story Magazine for her story entitled "If You Love Me.")

By Constance Stratton.

Here are two novels, among the first, certainly not the last, and let us hope not the best, that the current unpleasantness between Mr. Lewis and the representatives of our upper income-tax brackets has produced. Neither of them good, both of them earnestly "significant," they indicate with startling clarity just how much the average, fairly literate, lately thoughtful American observer doesn't yet know about what's likely to get him if he doesn't watch out. One of these novels wants us to wonder what a member of what one feels the author privately calls the literati thinks about when he gets caught in a general strike; the other would like, less pretentiously, to tell us what an average workman in a comparatively small, isolated strike doesn't think about; both of them suggest with unconscious candor how pretty normal members of the middle American stratum feel when they're confused.

At once the worst and the most deserving of these two is Mr. Duffus' "Night Between the Rivers," which is unfortunately that most pathetic of literary casualties, the honest and well-meaning product of a sincere and decent mind, which is, at the same time, a book bad enough to be funny. Obviously its author was moved by a genuine if somewhat muddled compassion for the economic wrongs about him, and by a wholly creditable indignation at their causes. It is sad that the ingenuous quality of this theme and 100 per cent reader-irritation power with which he has invested his characters will provide the unkind with almost unlimited possibilities for quotation. It is, in fact —to quote an ecstatic appreciation of another work—"the sort of book that cries to be read aloud." For the sake of the honorable purpose with which it was written, I hope that its readers will resist this mute appeal, but I can warn them from experience that it's going to be hard.

There is, for instance, Mr. Duffus' heroine, that sensitive young woman, whose name is Myvanwy Wynne. The full possibilities of this cannot, however, be appreciated until the reader realizes that the story and Myvanwy's great love begin together with a cocktail party, given, incidentally, at the opening of a general strike which is paralyzing, as the radio commentators say, New York City.

Myvanwy and her fate, Louis Flood (tall, dark, with a fine, intellectual forehead and troubled-looking brown eyes) address each other in their whimsical-romantic passages by their full names—makes it more significant. It is, I think, one of the most remarkable of Louis Flood's many unique gifts that at the end of a party which, in spite of Myvanwy's sensitive shrinking from the sordid aspects of life, apparently developed into something of a brawl (one semimarital row, one young girl's virtue enthusiastically threatened, one guest asked to withdraw and another sick in the bathroom) he is able to stand up and produce a sentence like this one: "Dear Myvanwy Wynne . . . fear is a memory out of the far past." Dear Myvanwy Wynne . . . try including this in your conversation several times, even without stimulants.

There is, too, J. K. Strummel, a coarse and lecherous sort who is, by one of Fate's unkinder tricks, Myvanwy's boss, and thus is invited for sordid economic reasons to her cocktail party. He repays her hospitality, the beast, by making a pass at her young niece. I like particularly Myvanwy's indignant comment on this situation. "'The old groper,' whispered Myvanwy between her teeth. 'The wise old groper. He's waiting for her to lean back.'" What Mr. Strummel had done, you see, was to extend one arm along the back of the sofa on which he was sitting with the tempting Melanie. The old groper.

June one more. In his portrait of Esther Stein, the girl revolutionist, Mr. Duffus has added notably to the already imposing galaxy of stage and literary Communists. It seems to me that Esther inherits the general unreality prize for contemporary reds of literature, awarded last year (by me) to Mr. Robert Sherwood's Marxian in "Idiot's Delight." This is her farewell to the assembled hesitant intellectuals gathered at Myvanwy's party: "She flung out her right arm dramatically, then slowly closed the fist. Her voice rose, she almost chanted the words. 'I've got a date —out in the streets—with brotherhood, with death—with revolution.' I like, too, her additional comment, when Myvanwy's sensitive soul softens even the revolution in Esther's mind. "If I come through this night, I'll come back, some day, when it's all over, and we'll talk of Chinese art or something. I like that sort of thing, too, you know." To me there is something extraordinarily touching in this wistful footnote to revolt.

Well, this sort of thing may be unfair. Mr. Duffus' thesis is the honorable and decent one which says that violence will not be cured by more violence. Whether or not this position is a valid one in this particular day is another question; one which, I think, the author has tried to answer, and it is a pity that in his attempt he has used a situation which, except in the hands of a master, could never be anything but, at the least, implausible and characters who, in spite of (or maybe because of) the loving care which he expended on them are well up among the first of the stagey, artificial, self-consciously whimsical and—in other words—generally fake members of the company of bad novels of the last few years.

Mr. Goetze Jeter's book, "The Strikers," is, in both senses, less pretentious, and, therefore, less pathetic in its failure to achieve its purpose. According to the publisher's blurb, Mr. Jeter is going to tell us the answers to "Who are these workers; what do they want; who prods their longings into dissatisfactions that bring with them bursts of violence from otherwise peaceful men; can they be satisfied?"

According to him, the answers are pretty simple. The workers are, on the whole, a good, steady lot, proud of their bungalows (complete with living-room suites, electric iceboxes and radios bought on the installment plan), automobiles, wives, and kids. A few of the younger ones get hold of Red ideas about collective bargaining; a good many more, without the ideas, like the excitement which attends them. The workers don't know just what they do want except a regular pay-check and a general maintenance of their installment-plan standard of living. Agitators, interested more in the rights of the strike leader than in the right to strike, prod their longings, etc., and scab leaders take up the prodding where the strike leaders leave off. And the workers can be satisfied for a while at least by a company-instigated lynching party and a vague promise to improve wages sometime.

It is, in Mr. Jeter's simple thesis, a general run-around. The workers believe the man who shouts the loudest for a while, and then the man who manages the best frame-up. The company knows that a waiting policy is the best one and that violence always looks better when engineered from within instead of without. The leaders of the strike know that propaganda to maintain their own positions comes before any clear plan of action to improve that of their followers. The businessmen know that an ordinary cash basis of trade is better than a credit boom. The workers' wives know that they can't pay the next installment on the electric ice-box. And so the workers eventually apply themselves to the task of lynching their leader, Farland, with the same general enthusiasm with which they originally applied themselves to picketing the factory. Nobody (except maybe the company) wins.

Well, whether or not we agree with Mr. Jeter's general hopeless attitude—and, it seems to me, a highly questionable one—there is still the question: Has he shown us the microcosm of Youngstown and Detroit which he has promised us? I don't think he has. What he has given us is a somehow desperate attempt to cover everything which ends in a hasty, pretty stereotyped and generally disjointed story of a lot of things that happened in a factory town while a strike was going on. If he'd like to see what a better writer and less confused thinker can do with his own theme, I recommend to him William Rollins' "The Shadow Before"—an old novel but still a good one. And there is, too, "The Land of Plenty;" there is "Strike," and there are plenty of others. Possibly Mr. Jeter, or even Mr. Duffus, might object that these three novels all represent a definite and fairly plainly aligned school of fiction, that they are, in fact, the work of nondisinterested, "proletarian" novelists.

To which anticipated question I should like to answer that even in writing fiction it sometimes helps to have a pretty clear idea of what you're writing about.

Then he decided he'd like to get into the Atlantic avenue tunnel in Brooklyn, sealed up since 1859 . . . Appetizing

"SERVE IT FORTH," by M. F. K. Fisher. (Harper's, $2.50.)

It must have been a book like "Serve It Forth" that started the book critics' standard cliche for a complimentary review—"I couldn't put it down until I had finished reading it." Not that that is exactly what happened when this reviewer read it. Something took place that was even more complimentary to the book than not being able to lay it down uncompleted. I laid it down several times, and several times refused to take it up again and continue reading it, because it was such a good book. Not only did it seem gluttonous and stupid to go through such a piece just to read it, but it is too subtle for haste, and too interesting for the reader to be willing to miss any of its subtleties.

Now, to go on and say that it is a book about food may be a mild surprise. Accustomed as we are to encouraging cook books and career histories of famous chefs, we expect from books on food information, or entertainment, or both, but certainly not a book full of emotion, continental wisdom, farce, history and superb imaginative writing.

The writer, M. F. K. Fisher, has been around. She's had her taste of foods in America and in Europe, and after all that she confesses her personal favorite in edibles (no doubt because it was she who discovered it) is ice-cold dried tangerine sections. Her sister has a small, unusual favorite food, too—bits of chocolate stuck on a hatpin and burnt over a flame into a dripping small ball, and eaten so hot it burns her tongue.

Two of young Mrs. Fisher's advices about pleasant eating are (1) don't invite people in the first throes of love to dine and (2) don't have over six at the table.

A PREOCCUPATION with the realm of the occult and the incredible is less common with American writers than with those of England. Here in the United States Cora Jarrett is perhaps the only author who has established for herself an enviable reputation as a writer of psychological thrillers. "Night Over Fitch's Pond" and "Strange Houses" are masterpieces of their kind as examples of the art of rendering the improbable plausible. Doubtless with the idea of appealing to the Cora Jarrett fans, Farrar and Rhinehart have now published a so-called novel with the title "To Walk the Night," by William Sloane.

Mr. Sloane's story is a melodramatic yarn of the supernatural. As he says in the foreword: "There are some experiences which are alien to everyday life; they are 'doomed for a certain term to walk the night' before the mind of man either recognizes them for what they are or dismisses their appearance as a fantasy." The experience of which Mr. Sloane writes here is based on the assumption that there are great and unknown forces outside our world; forces which "have their origin in some other dimension than our usual three." The disastrous events which might occur if these forces or any one of them should enter into our sphere are related by him with gusto and melodramatic fervor.

IF the sole purpose of "To Walk the Night" is to excite and hold the curiosity of the reader from the first page to the last, then Mr. Sloane has achieved his end. As a dramatic tale of horror and suspense it is excellent; as a novel, however, it is poor. It seems to this reviewer that the publishers would have been nearer the truth had they termed Mr. Sloane's book a romance rather than a novel. For whereas Mrs. Jarrett's "Strange Houses" earns the latter title by dint of the atmosphere of probability and the well-drawn characters therein. "To Walk the Night" is a tale that only occasionally borders on the plausible and shows no attempt at any sort of psychological development of character.

In a word, Mr. Sloane deals with the supernatural as opposed to the supernormal which is Mrs. Jarrett's field. The author of the present book is interested solely in the evocation of an atmosphere of mystery and suspense; in making his story move with breath-taking swiftness. Not for him the more leisurely, the more subtle procedure of the true psychological novelist.

ACCORDING to the publishers' note on the back of the jacket, Mr. Sloane has written a number of plays, and this, his first "novel," grew out of "an ambitious project for a Broadway play." This introductory item clarifies a great deal of the author's technique of story telling. Melodrama on the stage calls for much in the way of background; the bleak and deserted castle on the wind-swept moors is a time-honored setting for a weird tale of murders and ghosts. Mr. Sloane is hardly more subtle in his creation of appropriate atmosphere.

The story of "To Walk the Night" is told by one of the characters who finally, through his own narration of past events, arrives at the solution of the riddle which had confronted him and those associated with him. By this procedure the author can fairly reasonably have his narrator exaggerate the terror of his situation, past and present. In addition, Mr. Sloane chooses to have Berkeley Jones relate the incredible story at night time while sitting on the terrace of a large estate on Long Island overlooking the earlier stillness of the bay. By describing this somewhat ghostly setting and by reverting to it at various stages during the story, the author foreshadows the mystery and the tense nervous quality of events to come.

This method of preparing the audience for an overwhelming climax is an authentic one, but it should be more subtly dealt with than it is here. An able novelist incorporates his method into his material: the two are all of a piece. Here, the method is imposed upon the material and its artificiality is immediately apparent.

IN the story proper the author as a melodramatic playwright is too evident. We find, first, a famous astrologer and mathematician dying a horrible death in his lonely observatory high on a hill with naught but the distant and unknown world of stars for company. Later, a second mysterious death occurs; this time in a small house in the middle of the desert of the Middle West—"The great bulk of the mesa loomed towering and imminent above the house; incalculable tons of rock and earth seemed almost suspended above its roof; the very scale of that slope above you made you feel like an ant. I don't know how better to give the effect than to say that I felt always as if a giant were about to step on the house and all of us in it." This description sounds much like stage directions for a vast movie set.

Certainly, this method of building up effects from externals recalls the old-fashioned melodrama. It is this obvious imposition of an overworked device upon his so promising material that bars Mr. Sloane's work from the realm of the psychological novel. Although Mr. Sloane's theme keeps the interest of the reader at a high pitch, his manipulation of the material is not equal to the task of rendering his story anything more than a good time-killer.

Flight From Germany

"IF I FORGET THEE," by Josef Dunner. (Duloun Press, $2.50.)

Deriving its substance from one individual's impressions of Hitlerized Germany, "If I Forget Thee," however, is not to be classified merely as one of the latest exposes on that subject. It deals not with concentration camps, shuns bombast and invective and, in short, refrains from dipping into the sensational. From a positive standpoint, the things which lend a degree of distinction to the first English work of Refugee Dunner are the nostalgic pictures of Jewish home life, the pro-and-con discussions of Zionism and the intimate understanding one obtains of student life in the Reich today.

Alexander Roth, central character of this autobiographical novel, is a young Jew from Berlin who is a student in Frankfurt when national Socialism spurts into the ascendancy, turning the world upside down for non-Aryans, Communists, Democrats and the numerous other racial and political entities in Germany for whom the Nazis have no use, and vice versa.

On April 1, 1935 comes the anti-Jewish boycott. A few days later Alexander, long since compelled to leave the university for his own safety, flees his homeland in the van of the Storm Troopers' wrath. He goes first to Saarbrucken, still a League-governed city; then Paris, Brussels, Amsterdam, Basle. His beloved Devorah is imprisoned by the Nazis because she, a Jewess, attempts to send Alexander by express his doctor's thesis which, unfortunately, happens to be on "Trade Unions Strikes and the Business Cycle."

Through Alexander's efforts, Devorah is freed, he receives his thesis, the Swiss University awards him the doctorate with high honors and his name is suggested as an addition to the lecture staff. His immigrant status, however, precludes his following this lead and Alexander becomes a roving newspaper correspondent. Devorah, who had rebelled against the humiliation of continuing her studies in Frankfort, obtains her M. D. from the University of Basle. She takes a position in a hospital; Alexander sails for Palestine to write a series of articles. Upon his return to Switzerland, he finds a letter containing an offer from an American university. Alexander accepts with his father's blessing.

And that is the barest sketch of a factual narrative which is as timely as it is interesting. True, the "bull session" interludes, particularly in the earlier portions, may be boresome but they have plentiful compensation. Splendid characterizations are numerous, judgments are sane rather than bitter, situations have the stamp of authenticity.

The speech I like best is the one spoken by the Berlin rabbi who, on the Sabbath eve Alexander attends services with his father, rebukes his people as follows:

"A people of priests were you ordained to be. It was for you that Jacob wrestled with the angel. Instead of this you have begrudged your mission; you are men who quarrel with your fate; you hate your fate. You have lost the open glance of your ancestors; you squint at your surroundings. Your eyes question the Gentile to divine his judgment of your acts.

"You debate whether you are first Jews and then Germans, or first Germans and then Jews; and making an issue of the problem, you incidentally reveal that you have lost respect for your own worth. You have set up the outside world to be your judge. You are careful not to startle your neighbors. You have revamped the prayers of your people to make them modern, reasonable, logical . . . You have discarded traditional observances and so you have robbed your children of the memory of a Jewish life in a Jewish home. And all this you have done to please the outside world, to satisfy your judges, to win emancipation."

Josef Dunner, like his literary prototype, was born in Germany in 1908, began his higher education in the fatherland and completed it in Switzerland, where he received his Ph. D., covered Europe and the Near East as a correspondent and came to America in the fall of 1935.

He wrote "If I Forget Thee" simultaneously in German and English, the latter reaching publication first. The author is now associated with the Brookings Institution in Washington.

For Sailors

"THE SHIP'S HUSBAND," by H. A. Calahan. (Macmillan, $3.)

You may be able to navigate your ship anywhere in the world, but if you don't know how to care for it, you might as well stay tied to the dock. Of course, this applies to the true lover of boats, one who intends to be familiar with his own, and not the rocking chair sailor who hires someone to do his yachting for him.

A ship's husband is the man in port who prepares the ship for her next voyage—or her first. H. A. Calahan, from wide personal experience, keen observation, much research, and a love of ships has written this manual of instruction and advice to all owners of sailboats. He is the author of other well-known books written in a similar manner, including "Learning to Sail," "Learning to Race," and "Learning to Cruise."

There isn't a cubic inch of any material that goes into a boat of any kind, which does not require attention and thought, first to its selection and then to its care. All materials are discussed from both angles, and there are chapters on woods, metals, wire, rope, canvas, and paint and varnish.

Calahan's writing flows smoothly. It is simple and direct, without unnecessary embellishments. Consequently, it is easy to understand and follow his instructions on mending torn sails, splicing, how to detect dry rot and its subsequent treatment, hauling out, and care in commission.

There are also valuable remarks on electrolysis and the magnetic qualities of metals, spars, tools and their use, care in commission and the relations with the boatyard. On vital points, where there is a large variance between reputable opinions, the author gives both and the reasons for each. No one, eager to know his boat inside and out, could fail to profit from this book.

Paris Deputies Grant Powers To Chautemps

Emergency Bill to Deal With Finance Crisis Passed; Restriction Blocked.

By the Associated Press.

Paris (Wednesday), June 30.—The Chamber of Deputies early this morning approved Premier Camille Chautemps' request for full financial powers to deal with the nations financial emergency by a vote of 380 to 228.

The chamber shortly before refused three amendments which would have qualified the powers. The measure is expected to go to the Senate this afternoon.

The measure would authorize the government to promulgate decrees "tending to assure suppression of attacks on government credit, fight against speculation," promote economic recovery, control prices and balance the budget.

Chautemps' winning vote in the chamber was assured when Communist members decided to support the measure.

The Communist decision came after Finance Minister Georges Bonnett made an appeal to the Chamber of Deputies, avowing that the franc would be "defended" with renewed equalization funds.

He told the chamber also that the government planned to float no new loans before January 1, 1938, and that it would depend until then on advances from the Bank of France. The new decree powers are needed, he said, to enable him to ask for the loans.

The government hoped its bill, authorizing the cabinet to promulgate degrees to solve the financial situation, would have parliamentary approval tomorrow afternoon.

Deputies declared Bonnet indicated the government would take quick steps for devaluation of the franc but without fixing a definite price.

This was interpreted as an action to allow the franc to find its natural level. The minimum gold content of the franc now is 43 milligrams, giving the unit a value of 22.96 francs to the dollar. (The franc yesterday was quoted at 22.40 to the dollar.)

Congress Votes $1,500,000,000 U. S. Relief Bill

By the Associated Press.

Congress gave the Administration $1,500,000,000 yesterday to finance work-relief for the year starting July 1, but bogged down in a race to provide funds for the War and Interior Departments for the same period.

The House completed Congressional action on the relief bill by adopting recommendations of conferees composing differences with the Senate. The measure now goes to the White House for Presidential approval.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the House Appropriations sub-committee on relief, in debate on the conference report, appealed for development of a "sane and sensible plan" for handling the relief problem before the next session of Congress.

"Unless the responsibility is shifted back to the States and local communities," he said, "there will develop one of the most powerful political organizations of relief workers this country ever saw. No Congressman would be able to win re-election without acceding to their demands. They will want civil service status, sick leave, increases in pay and retirement benefits."

The Virginian said the bill carried a provision that would save between $750,000,000 and $1,000,000,000. He referred to a clause requiring the funds to be distributed over a 12-month period.

Drowning Victims' Bodies Recovered

Bodies of three Washingtonians who drowned Saturday night in the Potomac River were discovered yesterday morning near Morgantown, Md. They were Mrs. Elizabeth Bealle Bechhold, 28, of 3202 Nineteenth street northwest, Walter J. Lloyd, 50, a supervisor at the National Training School for Boys, 2813 Bladensburg road northeast, and William C. Zircle, 43, 2020 Fourteenth street southeast.

Lloyd drowned when he lost his balance and fell from a 12-foot motor boat, pulling Mrs. Bechhold overboard with him. Two others in the party, Raymond Bealle, brother of the drowned woman, and Marie Dorsey, his fiancee, were saved.

Zirkle was thrown overboard in a storm while fishing with another party of six.

Three Badly Hurt In Auto Accidents

Serious injuries were sustained by three persons yesterday as result of traffic accidents here and nearby. The injured are:

Swan was injured when the car which he was driving collided with another operated by Joseph Saunders, 52, of 741 Alabama avenue southeast.

Miss Abbott was struck as she was crossing at Eeventh and Pennsylvania avenue, by a car operated by Gus Lee Law, jr., whose father is proprietor of a billiard parlor at 3109 Nichols avenue southeast.

Publishers Join To Wage Fight On Closed Shop

Guild Demand Called Peril to Free Press at Parley of Executives.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 29.—Representatives of 11 large newspaper associations adopted a resolution today stating their "unalterable opposition . . . to the closed shop for those who prepare and edit news copy and pictures for newspapers."

The resolution said the 565 publishers and executives in attendance at the special convention expressed their "determination not to enter into any agreement upon such a basis."

The convention, called to discuss the American Newspaper Guild's decision at a recent St. Louis meeting to seek a closed shop, adjourned after an all-day executive session.

"This meeting," the resolution said, "is by no means one of opposition to collective bargaining, better hours, pay or working conditions for newspapermen and women.

"We are here to discuss the closed shop as a matter of journalistic and public principle, not as an economic issue."

The resolution said freedom of the press was not "an exception accorded by the Constitution for the benefit of the publishers," but was included among the freedom of religion, speech and assembly contained in the bill of rights.

"Uncolored presentation of news" was more "vitally important" today than at any time in history, the resolution said, and "only upon such a foundation of factual reporting can sound public opinion and wise public policies be based. . . .

"This responsibility cannot be discharged if some outside authority, . . . determines whom they (publishers) shall or shall not employ. That is precisely what the American Newspaper Guild seeks by its demand."

The demand, the resolution said, was "more serious because the guild is now committed to a number of definite political objectives." The resolution then cited votes taken at the St. Louis Guild convention on "such debatable subjects as" the Spanish civil war and the Supreme Court reorganization bill.

Action for Divorce I s Filed by Vickers

Harry F. Vickers, wealthy Detroit inventor and manufacturer, yesterday in District Court filed an answer to a suit for limited divorce filed against him by Mrs. Grace Vickers, legal assistant to Chief Justice Alfred Adams Wheat.

Mr. Vickers asked that he be granted a limited divorce because of alleged constructive desertion of him by her or that in the alternative he be given an annulment of their marriage on the ground he was not legally separated from a prior wife who obtained a Reno divorce from him.

Mrs. Vickers, attractive and brunettte, originally filed suit alleging her husband had failed to support her and had been guilty of mental and physical cruelty. She asked a limited divorce and maintenance.

Hitler's Foe Is Freed Of Nazi Death Threat

New York, June 29 (AP).—Rolf von Reitzenstein, representing himself as Baron von Reitzenstein, a former German army officer who arrested Adolf Hitler in 1923, was free today from the threat of immediate deportation to Germany, where he feared he would face a firing squad.

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Burke, jr., agreed to permit his release from Ellis Island on a $500 bond for 60 days, during which he may leave for any country willing to receive him. Von Reitzenstein said he would go to South America.

Citizens Favor Study to Give D. C. Suffrage

The Southeast Citizens Association last night approved a plan offered by its president, William A. Maio, for the creation of a committee of three Representatives, three Senators and three citizens to study local self-government and national representation.

William S. Finch, chairman of the temporary city-wide suffrage committee, stressed the need for organization and co-operation if the citizens of Washington are to gain the right to vote.

"We want to have a definite plan," Finch said, " to present to the next session of Congress, so that some action, to secure for the citizens of Washington the rights of other Americans, will be forthcoming in the near future."

Announcing his support of a general sales tax, Malcolm S. McConihe, Democratic National Committeeman for the District, said he was opposed to the tax measure now pending. The business privilege tax, and the levy on chain stores, he indicated, would be "inequitable," because they would raise the cost of food, and would be an excessive burden on individuals with incomes in the lower brackets.

Other speakers included: Joseph L. Gammell, past president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association; Kenneth P. Armstrong, of the Burroughs Citizens Association, and Miss Etta Taggert, member of the District bar.

Improper Sales Methods Hit By Better Business Bureau

A marked increase in the activities of the Better Business Bureau was reported yesterday at its fifteenth annual luncheon meeting. Director Joseph W. Marshall announced 37 firms have joined the bureau in the past year; that the public's financial inquiries and consumer complaints have increased 50 per cent over the preceding year, and 8,713 cases of untruthful advertising have been handled as compared with about 6,000 during 1936-1937.

Marshall referred specifically to the progress made against auctions, door-to-door salesmen and improper real estate and investment activities. In its campaign for a higher standard of advertising, the bureau has been successful to a large extent in aolishing the false labeling of furniture woods and unjustfied claims of "special" prices.

Progress has also been made in establishing when a "sale" actually is a sale.

The treasurer's report was given by Y. E. Booker, and James W. Hardey reported for the merchandise advisory committee.

The report of the committee appointed to nominate a board of trustees was unanimously accepted. The board met immediately after the luncheon and chose the following officers: Chairman, Lanier P. McLachlen, of the McLachlen Banking Corporation; vice chairman, B. Burgunder, of S. Kanns Sons Co.; treasurer, Y. E. Booker, of Y. E. Booker & Co., and counsel, R. B. H. Lyon, of Lyon & Lyon.

New members of the board are C. A. Aspinwall, Security Storage Co.; David S. Bethune, D. C. Life Underwriters' Association; Thorton Owen, Thomas G. Owen & Son; Chauncey Parker, jr., Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath; Charles A. Robinson, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; Wilmot R. Squire, president of the Advertizing Club, ex officio, and Arthur L. Thompson, Thompson's Dairy.

Bank of Commerce & Savings, Blick Coal Co., Brewood Engravers, W. A. H. Church, Inc., Morris Cafritz, Colonial Fuel Oil Co., Davidson Transfer & Storage Co., Dome Oil Co., District Lawyer and Washington Title Insurance Co., Emerson & Orme, Federal Service Finance Corporation, Federal Storage Co., Galt & Brothers, General Electric Supply Co., E. New Contract Of TVA Omits Rate Yardstick

Authority Attacks Utilities, Defends Agreement in Same Day.

By Russell Smith

The Tennessee Valley Authority, on Capitol Hill, yesterday struck a blow at private utilities and, downtown, defended itself from accusations having yielded to these same utilities.

At a Senate sub-committee hearing on the Norris bill for setting up seven more authorities to blanket the entire country in a development program, James L. Fly, TVA general counsel, urged adoption of that bill's amendment to halt injunction delays.

Downtown, a TVA representative said it omitted "yardstick rates" from its newly announced contract with the Arkansas Power & Light Co. because Arkansas is not properly in its area, there is no reason for the TVA entering that territory and $100,000 annual savings to consumers have been promised as a result of the contract.

The omission was challenged by Representative John Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, in an interview with President Roosevelt. Rankin, a friend of the TVA, declared that the purpose of the TVA will be defeated if retail rates are not specified.

Fly indorsed heartily the Norris bill provision which requires applicants for injunctions against operations of the authorities to post heavy bond to cover losses pending the outcome of appeals.

The TVA counsel accused the utilities of "court shopping," of filing similar suits in one court after another, as rapidly as already-filed suits were disposed of. He estimated such injunctions have cost TVA alone $5,000,000.

Director David E. Lilienthal, offered the TVA as a case study for Congress to use in studying the merits of the Norris bill.

"Congress must decide whether we have been successful," Lilienthal told the sub-committee.

He described in detail the TVA's progress and its expansion.

By the United Press.

Representatives of Acme Newspictures and Associated Press Picture Service were barred last night from taking pictures of President Roosevelt during his forthcoming Hyde Park, N. Y., visit because they distributed snap-shots of the Chief Executive taken by Congressmen at last week's Jefferson Island Democratic "love feast."

The ban was imposed by Stephen T. Early, secretary to the President, who said he acted without consulting Mr. Roosevelt. The restriction becomes effective as soon as the Chief Executive departs for his New York home from Wilmington, Del. He will attend the wedding of his son, Franklin, jr., there today.

Associated press and Acme officials said they understood that Early's reason for restricting their photographers was that he felt it was only fair that photographers of other services be given an opportunity to balance the scales.

Committeemen Predict Defeat Of Abattoir Bill

Kennedy Says Stockyard Already Exists as Bad Feature.

Defeat of the bill to curb nuisance industries in the Capital was forecast by members of the House District Committee yesterday following an inspection trip to the northeast site of the Adolf Gobel Co., Inc.

The District Committee is scheduled to consider the measures today. Although it reported the bill favorably several weeks ago without hearings, the committee now appears inclined to reject the legislation sponsored by Secretary Ickes.

The delegation yesterday was headed by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the committee, and included the following:

Representatives Kennedy, of Maryland; Jenckes, of Indiana; Bigelow, of Ohio; McGehee, of Mississippi; Quinn, of Pennsylvania; Allen, of Delaware, and Arnold, of Illinois, all Democrats.

Edward A. Dent, District surveyor, accompanied the members, and Frank M. Firor, president of the Gobel company; William J. Neale, president of the Union Stockyard Co., and John M. Riggles, representing the Maryland and Virginia livestock producers, acted as guides.

Palmisano, McGhee and Kennedy expressed the opinion the site did not seem unsuitable for an abattoir. The members measured the distance between the site and the Langston housing development of the PWA and found it to be more than a mile.

"It seems to me," Kennedy said, "that the bad features are already there in the form of stockyards."

Both LaFontaines Summoned in Suit

Guy Bell, Prince Georges County sheriff, announced yesterday that Charles Ford, Washington attorney, had accepted service on summonses for James A. LaFontaine and James A. LaFontaine, jr., in connection with a $15,000 damage suit filed last March against the latter two men.

Last week Bell informed the Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro he had not been able to locate the LaFontaines to serve them with the papers. At that time, Louis Lebowitz, attorney of Washington and Mount Rainier, Md., who filed the suit, remarked to the court:

"It seems strange that two persons as prominent as Jimmy LaFontaine and his nephew, are so difficult to serve."

The suit was filed in behalf of Edward J. Merritt, of Hyattsville, Md., who alleges he suffered severe injuries when he fell down a flight of stairs at the Maryland Athletic Club on Bladensburg road, in which the LaFontaines are reputed to be associated as proprietors.

Bob Burns Says

It kinda makes me mad when I read where some scientist fella says that man is the only animal who can think and reason things out. I have seen animals down home that catch on to an idea quicker than a lot'ta people I know.

Lots of smart people have been runnin' automobiles for 30 years and still don't know how to drive 'em right. I know an old hound dog back home. Some mean boys have been tying tin cans to his tail for six years and now every time this dog sees a tin can, he backs up to it!

The executive committeemen are: Stanley Reed and Sam Whitaker, Department of Justice; Brice Toole, 115 Oxford street, Chevy Chase, Md.; Edgar M. Gerlach, Rodney road, Hillendale, Md.; A. E. Denton, 926 Massachusetts avenue northwest; James Graham, 1326 Euclid street northwest, and A. R. Brindley, University Club. James J. Mackin, room 3348 Justice Department, is membership officer; Ray Huff is Americanism officer, and J. L. Cornwell is chairman of the fiance committee. At the next meeting, delegates to the State convention—to be held August 13, 14 and 15 at the Mayflower Hotel—will be elected.

Annual Meeting.

The very active Farm Credit Administration Club—which boasts a membership of more than 800—will hold its annual meeting at 4 o'clock this afternoon in room 358. There will be election of officers.

The Civil Service Commission announces examinations for the positions of junior agricultural engineer, $2,000 a year; Soil Conservation Service, and Bureau of Agricultural Engineering; chief of library service division, $5,600 a year; specialist in public libraries, $3,800 a year, and specialist in school libraries, $3,800 a year; Office of Education, Interior Department. Applications will be received not later than July 26.

Members of the Farm Credit Club are foreseeing a pleasurable trip on July 11, when they journey to Wakefield, Stratford Hall and Westmoreland State Park, where the party will eat lunch and swim. If a minimum of 25 register, admission to Stratford Hall may be secured for 25 cents instead of 50 cents. Those wishing to go, may register in room 338.

Beginning in July some 2,300 elevator operators, maids, laborers and other employes of the custodial force of the National Park Service will receive an increase of $237,280 in their pay envelopes as a result of the passage yesterday of the 1938 Interior supply measure.

"All that remains now is for the signature of President Roosevelt to assure the first wholesale promotion and pay increase for these faithful and patriotic workers, most of whom have worked from 5 to 30 years at $1,080 a year or less," said President Edgar Brown, of the United Government Employes, Inc.

Harbor Police Established in 1888; First Chief Still Hearty.

By Edward T. Folliard

These are days (and nights) when all along the Potomac is distinctly not quiet. Yachts, launches and tiny craft with outboard motors churn the ordinarily placid waters; excursion boats swing up and down the channel, carrying throngs which in a summer will total half a million. After dark, in the narrower stream above Key Bridge, hundreds of canoes glide over the moonlit waters, while music and song add enchantment to the night.

All of which, at this time of year, spells work for Washington's sailor-cops, members of the Harbor Police Precinct, whose task it is to patrol 45 miles of waterfront.

So far this summer 15 persons have been drowned in that part of the Potomac within Washington's boundaries. All the bodies have been recovered. If the record this year equals that of last, 29 more persons will drown before the season ends.

Plenty of Toil Ahead.

That means plenty of toil for "Maj. Brown's Navy," hours—sometimes days—of dragging the river's bottom with grappling hooks. They never have failed to find a body, these harbor police; and, rather than spoil that record now, they will work over a watery grave until exhaustion overtakes them.

The recovery of bodies is the most publicized phase of the work done by harbor police. Actually, however, it is just one of a hundred tasks they are called upon to perform.

One day two colored men were fishing from the pier of the Harbor Precinct. One of them was a newcomer; the other was an old-timer named Brown, who had been fishing there for years. Watching the police patrol boats come and go, the newcomer asked:

"What are all these boats and all this law doin' around heah?"

"These," explained Brown, "are the harbor police. Uptown the police keep you in trouble. Down heah these harbor police keep you out of trouble."

Miniature Coast Guard.

Which is a homely way of saying that Washington's harbor police constitute a sort of miniature Coast Guard for this Capital. They protect life and property; they enforce the fish and game laws; they keep the channel clear; they recover lost or stolen boats; they smash the ice in winter, and they take care of the wild drunks and other offenders that come to town in the brigs of boats.

Headquarters of the harbor police is a gray-stone, two-story building on what is popularly called the Seventh street wharves, but which actually is on Water street at M southwest. In command is Lieut. William H. Carlin, a veteran with more than a quarter of century of service. Under him are three sergeants and 19 privates, any one of whom can man a patrol boat.

The police "navy" consists of six boats. Largest of these is a 55-footer, equipped with a 100-horsepower Diesel engine and built entirely of steel, which makes a splendid icecutter. This vessel was designed by and built under the supervision of Sergt. Clinton C. Humphries, engineer in charge at the harbor precinct, a tatooed, deep-water sailor who got married and decided to come ashore and become a member of the police force. Now he works harder than he ever did at sea.

Navy Hand-Me-Down.

There is one boat, a 35-footer with a speed of 15 miles an hour, which the harbor police got as a hand-me-down from the Navy. A beautiful craft, with trim lines, it once was a proud admiral's gig.

Then there are three boats, two of them 36-footers and the other a 26-footer, which the city got through a transfer from the Coast Guard. Finally, there is a little 22-foot open launch with a 30-horepower motor which the sailor-cops themselves built in their spare time. That's how much they are devoted to their work.

One of the boats now has a big patch in its hull. Not so long ago, manned by two policemen, it was headed for the scene of a drowning when it was rammed by a pleasure launch.

The owner of the colliding launch was arrested and charged with "reckless operation of a motor launch." Two women aboard were charged with intoxication.

It may be surprising to the landlubber, but there are speed laws on the river. Thus, in the Washington channel, from the old Washington Barracks to the flood gates at Fourteenth street, a boat may not go more than 15 miles an hour. The reason for this regulation is that the "rollers" in the wake of a speeding boat are likely to capize a canoe or some other smaller craft.

Few Speed Violations.

The first boat owner convicted on a speeding charge was fined $25, and there have not been many violations since.

The harbor police have done good work in thwarting fish hogs on the river. Last year a score or more fyke, or cone-shaped fishing nets, were seized in Oxon Run, a branch of the Potomac. Nets and seines are barred in Washington's part of the Potomac, and bass fishing is illegal from April 1 to May 29, the spawning season. In winter, the wild ducks are protected.

Harbor police have their traffic problems no less than their colleagues who pound the pavements uptown. There are certain areas set aside for the mooring and anchoring of boats, and it is up to Lieut. Carlin's men to see that they are moored and anchored there and not "parked" out in the channel.

As most people know, the District of Columbia, the original "10-mile square," took in Alexandria. In 1846 all of Virginia that had been part of the National Capital was ceded back to the Old Dominion, leaving only what had once been Maryland territory.

It happens, however, that the District still retains jurisdiction over the Potomac River within the original 10-mile squre. Thus, the harbor precinct extends from Chain Bridge all the way to Jones Point just below Alexandria, and on the Maryland side to Oxon Run. In addition the harbor police must patrol the Anacostia River or Eastern Branch.

Patrol Cloudburst Lake.

As a matter of fact, they are responsible in a sense for all waters in the District. Last year, a cloudburst and a flood caused a lake to form in the northeast section of the city, endangering the lives of several persons. The harbor police loaded a row boat on a truck and went to the rescue.

Up until 1888 Washington had no harbor police. It had a harbor master, but that official, J. H. Sutton, didn't even have so much as a boat. In June of '88, the city bought a 60-foot steam yacht from a New York publisher named Monroe, and that was the nucleus of what ultimately was to become a fleet of patrol boats.

After the boat was purchased, the question arose as to who was going to man it. The city had no appropriation for the hire of a crew. Finally, it was decided to assign policemen to man the boat. But who was there on the force who knew anything about boats?

Fortunately for the city, there was a rookie cop pounding the pavements in Bloodfield, a tough section in the Fourth Precinct, who was a "natural" for the job. He was Private Russell Dean. Born on a farm near Port Tobacco in southern Maryland, Dean lost both his parents when he was 3 years old. They died of tuberculosis. He himself was delicate, highly susceptible to fevers and malaria. At 16 he determined to strengthen his physique and so he shipped before the mast.

Still Strong at 77.

That the sea-going life benefited him goes without saying, as he is now hale and hearty and 77. He lives with his wife at 300 East Capitol street northeast and will go for a cruise on the river at the drop of a hat.

Well, to go back 49 years, Dean was pounding his beat in Bloodfield when the city began casting around for a pilot for its new steam yacht. The Commissioners must have whooped for joy when they found him and learned of his record—a record that included experience on all kinds of boats, sail and steam, and which showed, too, that he possessed a pilot's license. He had come ashore to be a cop simply because he had married and wanted to be home at nights.

Dean was the first policeman assigned to what was to become the Harbor Precinct, and thus must be called the "father" of the city's navy. Besides a pilot, an engineer was needed. A policeman also was chosen for this post—Thomas B. Kendall.

Now for the first time the city was prepared to handle drownings, to stop thievery and to enforce regulations on the river. However, the Harbor Precinct had not yet been created. Harbormaster Sutton continued in his job, with the police co-operating with him. In 1905, the anomaly was corrected. Congress passed legislation doing away with the office of harbormaster and setting up the harbor police. A lieutenant was to be in charge, assisted by a sergeant.

Sutton Given Command.

Harbormaster Sutton was one of the most popular men in town and although he had never read a book of police regulations or swung a night stick, he was appointed a lieutenant and put in command of the Harbor Police. Dean was promoted to sergeant.

Sutton died a few years later and Dean then was made a lieutenant and given command.

Long before this, Dean had designed what was perhaps the best known boat in the history of the precinct—the 60-foot, steam propelled Vigilant. This suuplemented the precinct's first boat, the one bought in New York and later christened the Joe Blackburn, in honor of a Kentucky Senator who took a deep interest in District affairs.

Lieut. Dean was promoted to captain in 1923 and, because the harbor job calls for no rank higher than lieutenant, he left the waterfront and took command of the Eleventh precinct. A few years later he retired.

Capt. Dean, who has one of the finest handle-bar mustaches on record, unless it is the one that adorns the lip of former Inspector Albert Headley, spent 35 years in the Harbor Precinct. When he began, the idea of eight-hour shifts wasn't even a dream. He and the other sailor-cops worked from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. Then, when they went home, they often were aroused at night by a crime or a tragedy in the river.

Ten Drowned at One Time.

Looking back over those 35 crowded years, Capt. Dean thought that the most terrible disaster in his experience occurred a year or so after he went to the harbor.

"They were holding a big regatta up the river," he recalled. "I think it was in 1889, but I wouldn't be sure about that. Just below the old Aqueduct Bridge, a man was cruising around in a launch with some friends. They saw some friends ashore, waving, and they started in to get them.

"The man didn't know much about a boat, otherwise he wouldn't have done the thing he did then. These people were standing near a flume, a spot where water from the C. & O. Canal emptied into the river. This fellow took his boat right up there and started taking these other friends aboard.

The water pouring from the canal caused a strong eddy at this point, and soon the boat began spinning around. Then the people on board, the men and the women, got excited and the next thing anybody knew the boat had capsized, throwing them all into the whirling water.

"Everyone of those 10 men and women was drowned. The tragedy shocked the crowds gathered for the regatta and what remained of it was called off. We recovered all the bodies."

Recalls Old Ice Boats.

The old Potomac has changed a lot since he was a young man, Capt. Dean said.

"In those days sailboats used to come here all the way from Maine. They would bring ice here, and then take back coal which had come down the canal from Cumberland. It was nothing to see 50 or 60 ice boats tied up at the wharves.

"Steamboatin' was much more exciting then, too. Side-wheelers use to come here from New York and Philadelphia. There were any number of different lines, and the competition was brisk. A lot of freight was brought to Washington by boat, especially livestock. You could see boats come in loaded with cattle, sheep and hogs.

"Railroads have been partly responsible for the changes that have occurred, but I guess the automobile and the motor truck have had even more to do with it.

"In a way it is a good thing. You take fish, for example. A load of fish might take a day or two to get here. Nowadays fish caught down near the bay tonight will be put on trucks and be at the municipal fish market within a few hours."

Age Limits Bill Passed By Senators

Roosevelt Renews Plea for Employe Merit System.

The Senate yesterday demonstrated its belief in the fitness of men and women past middle age to earn a livelihood in the Federal service as President Roosevelt made another appeal for support of the merit system.

Following a discussion of the abilities of men past 55, the Senate passed a bill to permit persons over the age limits fixed for civil service examinations to take tests.

Senator Moore (Democrat), of New Jersey, piloted the bill through much joshing and implied criticism of those who would retire oldsters.

President Roosevelt's appeal was made in a letter to the president of the Senate regarding a provision in the social security section of the independent offices appropriations bill, which he had just signed.

His complaint was against a provision that the President must appoint and the Senate confirm experts and attorneys who receive $5,000 a year or more.

No Precedent.

Senator Moore explained that his bill was not setting a precedent as the age limit is now waived for World War veterans.

Majority Leader Robinson suggested that "the law" fixing age limits might be repealed, but Moore explained that there was no law, only regulations of the Civil Service Commission.

"This bill will enable those who are a month or a year or more over the age limit set to take examination, receive a grade and be placed on a register as set up in the Civil Service Commission," Senator Moore said.

Text of Letter.

The text of the President's letter follows:

"In signing the independent offices appropriation bill for the fisfiscal year 1938, I note that the appropriation for the Social Security Board contains a provision requiring the Presidential appointment and Senate confirmation of experts and attorneys receiving compensation of $5,000 or more per annum.

"I regret the inclusion of this provision in the bill. Aside from the hampering effect of the prohibition against receipt of compensation by such employes until confirmed by the Senate, particularly during periods when Congress is not in session, the method adopted for the selection of these employes seems to me unfortunate. In lieu of the present procedure for the appointment of these employes without regard to civil service laws, I think it would have been preferable to bring the positions within the civil service system. Under the reorganization of the work of the Civil Service Commission as contemplated by the pending bill S 2700, it is expected that there would be developed improved methods for the examination and selection of such employe.

"I am writing to express the hope that the Congress may see fit to enact legislation at an early date to place these positions under the merit system. I strongly recommend, as urged in my communication to the Congress of June 2, 1937, that all but policy-forming positions in the executive branch of the Government be included within the merit system."

Fo'csle Club Bids Adieu To Cup Regatta Head

With as much sea atmosphere as could be gathered several blocks from the nearest water, members of the Fo'csle Club yesterday said farewell to James A. Councilor, general chairman of the President's Cup Regatta Committee at luncheon in the Harrington Hotel.

Command of the committee was shifted from Councilor, who sailed yesterday for Europe, to R Lyman Sexton, assistant generaal chairman, after members had been piped to mess and a guest of the club had presented it with a real ship's bell.

Trampled Toes and Towsled Heads Are of the Past As Theater Managements Give the Public a 'Break'

New Theater Planning Provides Increased Space for Comfort and Overcomes Long-Standing Complaint; Washington Boy Returns Home on Screen; Previews Go Awry; Summer Troupers; Notes.

THE theater managements of Washington—and I assume that the awakening extends beyond the boundaries of the District of Columbia—are coming to realize at long last that patron comfort is one of their most valuable box-office assets.

BELL.

In the construction of all of the new theaters that have sprung up locally during the past year or two capacity has been sacrificed to so generous a spacing of seats that it no longer is necessary for those seated to come to their feet to permit new arrivals to crawl over them and muss up the backs of the heads of those sitting in the row in front. This seems almost the millennium. A little casual investigation, however, will prove it to be true.

In the Warner houses that have recently been erected—Uptown, Penn, Sheridan, Calvert, etc.—Zone Manager Johnny Payette tells me that first consideration was given to seat-breadth and leg room and capacity was allowed to take care of itself. Something over 200 more seats than they now contain could have been crowded into any of these houses. Two hundred seats represents a considerable sum of money daily when multiplied by the cost of the tickets and the number of performances a day. Instead of grabbing that money, the Warners gave the theater-going public a break.

At the Rialto, the matter was carried to the Nth degree. You can almost throw a piano around between the rows in the Ninth street house and with its new cooling system it well may lay claim to being "the house of comfort."

Taking a tip from the motion picture operators, the socalled legitimate theater now is going in for the same sort of catering to public favor. When the alteration and reseating now under way at the National are completed, I am assured by Manager Edmund Plohn that the comfort of his patrons will have been enhanced about 100 per cent.

All this is in striking contrast to the practices that were followed in the old days of the silent pictures. Beginning as "nickelodeons" housed in vacant store rooms, "shooting galleries" and any other available niche in the wall, the chief aim of the exhibitors was to pack in as many seats as the floor area would hold and let the customer do the best he could. That was a point of view that was carried over too far and too long into the planning and conduct of the larger and more ornate "cathedrals of the motion picture" that came along later.

Now the reverse view has taken hold. The exhibitor units are to be congratulated upon having finally perceived a quick avenue to public good will and the public, in turn, should, and probably will, express its gratitude in redoubled attendance at the playhouses.

It is quite a novelty not to have your feet trampled upon and your glasses knocked off!

Considerable went askew with the preview screenings that were planned for this week. The print of "New Faces of 1937" that Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, was to have shown to the boys and girls of the drama desks on Monday did not arrive and on Tuesday, when the Loew interests were to have rolled the critical fraternity all over the floor of the Twentieth Century-Fox private projection room with an uproarious unspooling of the Marx Brothers in "A Day at the Races," that bandbox theater was under repair and could not be used. Last night following the last regular performance at Loew's Capitol, however, an advance peek was allowed of William Powell and Luise Rainer in "The Emperor's Candlesticks," opening there Friday. More of this later.

A correspondent, lacking the temerity to sign a name, calls my attention to the fact that Bill Brady is in the cast of principals of "New Faces of 1937," opening today at RKO-Keith's and that Bill is a Washington boy who has had a rapid ascent in "show business." That would have come out in time, even if Bill is listed on the roster of players under the more dignified name of William Brady.

Bill will be remembered by many as a lad who made his professional stage debut at the Capitol under the billing of "Washington's Own Bill Brady." He is a graduate of Tech High School and was first importantly exploited in "The Dawn Patrol Revue," presented by a famous newspaper columnist. Well, as my anonymous informant succinctly puts it, "He's here again."

Incidentally, in addition to Keith's, the Rialto is breaking out a new bill today, with W. C. Fields, Bing Crosby and Joan Bennett in "Mississippi" and Spencer Tracy and Jack Oakie in "Looking for Trouble" as the double-feature attraction.

If the Roadside Theater players and other local summer acting groups think they put in a strenuous season of hot weather production, they should scan the route sheets of the unique institution known as Robert Porterfield's Barter Theater, at Abingdon, Va., where admittance may be purchased for a sack of potatoes, a side of pork, a mess of greens, or what have you.

Beginning with the production of Frederick Jackson's new mystery play, "The Long Night," on Monday night in Bristol, Tenn.-Va., the company will enter its busiest week since it was founded five years ago. On Tuesday night, "The Long Night" will be presented in Johnson City, Tenn.; Wednesday the Barterites will make their first invasion of North Carolina, when Mr. Porterfield will present Frederick Lawrence, of Warner Brothers films, and Margaret Swope, New York stage actress, in "Private Lives," at the Aeseola Inn, in Linville. On Thursday, John Cromwell and Lydia Perera will be seen in "The Patrified Forest" on the home grounds at Abingdon. This bill will be continued through Friday and Saturday.

At some time in his career my gay young confrere, Jay Carmody, must have been a Swiss bell-ringer. By self-appointment, out at the Roadside Theater Monday night, the versatile Mr. Carmody became the ringer of the cow bell that summons patrons back to their seats after the entr'actes. Mr. Carmody was terrific. I should like to see him some New Year's eve.

• • • •

Afterthought.

If the temperatures keep on going where they seem to be headed, I would even be content just to see a New Year's eve.

Star of New Film Opening Friday

pictured above intently watching something or other, will return to the local screen on Friday of this week as star of "The Devil Is Driving," next attraction at the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater. The story deals with reckless driving. The title of the magazine Mr. Dix is holding, loosely translated from Spanish into English means "Here It Is."

12 P. M. "I'm sick and tired of this Romeo and Juliet stuff the papers are printing about Ethel and me," Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., complains at "21." "That's why I ducked the Shakespeare course at Harvard!" . . . "So I bet on Isaiah in the fourth at Aqueduct," Frances Huntley informs. "Then, at my hairdressers, some one tells me to bet on Caballero II, and I did. I won both bets. The horses ran a dead heat." . . . Why all this fuss about my Theater Guild contract?" Ethel Barrymore states at the Glen Island Casino. "It's not the first time I've returned to the stage after renouncing it—and it's not the last."

1 A. M. "I saw 'Kid Galahad' again," Sam Harris confides at Moore's. "They made one mistake—having the fighter's manager openly bet against him . . . No, when I managed Terry McGovern I never bet against him. If I couldn't bet on Terry, there was no fight." . . . "The communists finally rented Madison Square Garden for November 13, to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the revolution," a reporter tips. "They follow Society's Horse Show there!"

2 A. M. Mrs. Jim Farley asks to be seated next to a window at the Rainbow Room. "The stronger the breeze, the better," she explains . . . Daniel Cowan Jecklin travels around the room sitting beside Helen Meyers at the revolving piano. Helen plays the tunes he requests—and then thanks him for the $100 bill he leaves in her handkerchief . . . "I know this looks odd," Phillips Lord confesses on the dance floor. "Seth Lord—doing a rhumba." . . . In the Grill next door, Emery Deutsch explains the cotton in his ears: "I go into the Paramount next week with Martha Raye and for the past few hours I've been auditioning trumpet players—loud ones." . . . "Walter Woolf King's son was voted Class Nuisance in a Coast school's poll the other day," an agent relates at the Village Brewery. "The youngster told his dad: 'I got the title boasting of your radio series.'" . . . Jack Doyle walks by Bertolotti's. "Y'know," the doorman offers, "I think that guy is left-headed!"

3 A. M. "Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Walker were in here earlier," a ringside reports at the Stork. "They kept staring at the young lady seated at the next table. Moss Hart has a club dedicated to liberalism, Communism and Cribbage. They call themselves the Pink Stinks."

"This," she informs, "is a piece of the Met's curtain. I cut it off on my opening night there." . . . "Pool your assets," Andre Kostelanetz suggests, "and open a rival company." . . . A stranger approaches Ruth Bradley, Bunny Berigan's vocalist, at the Penn Roof and suggests movie work. "Think up a new line," she tells—Frank Capra. . . . "Being away from home gives me a great urge to exercise," Edna Mae Oliver admits at Mori's. But whenever I feel that way, I just lie down until the foolish notion goes away." . . . "Speaking of psychoanalysts—which we weren't," Bea Little relates at El Morocco, "I'm not going to them any more. Not only did the last one want $20 a visit—but also wanted dirty stories!"

In that case, I've got the perfect first name for him. Everybody is sure to address him that way. . . . The first name will be 'Hey!'"

Theater Group Scores Hit in 'Help Yourself'

Exciting Play Is Staged in Pierce Hall for Three-Day Run.

Playing with a skillful enthusiasm, the "Help Yourself" company of the New Theater Group rippled off a neatly exciting little drama by Paul Vulpius, last evening in Pierce Hall. There are two more showings scheduled.

In Washington, of all places, this particular bit of board-treading should find receptive if blushing audiences, for its intention is to "take the stuffing out of stuffed shirts."

One Christopher Stringer (Arthur Westover), unemployed college graduate, must have a job, so he makes one for himself. That he is able to perpetrate a fantastic hoax on the astute gentlemen who run the bank which he happens to choose as his working place, is a tribute to the young man.

"Fuss-Fuss" (Harry Sanger), ex-college friend of Chris', is a hard-working employe of the bank. Chris overrides his timidities and together they plan an astounding "case" in which their bank, another bank and the Government are all supposed to co-operate. Laughable, incredible things happen.

Arthur Westover as Chris is debonairly convincing. His voice and stage presence are excellent; with a few more licks of polish he should be A-1 for Hollywood. Harry Sanger as the open-mouthed "Fuss-Fuss" draws many laughs; his was a hard part, for overacting would have heightened his burlesque of the role. Elaine Selwyn, as a dipply stenographer, is properly giddy. Heroine Ethel Davis, the president's daughter, is both lovely and competent. Her father, Schuyler Danford (J. C. C. Players), is outstanding.

Orphans Burn to Death.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 29.—Every time some friend back East comes to town, the first thing he wants to do is visit a studio. And once he has the chance, he is a cinch to ask the same bewildered questions: "When do they work? Why so much loafing and clowning on sets? Are studios willing to pay huge salaries and then let so much time go to waste while actors kid around?

FRED ASTAIRE.

Such questions are understandable. To anyone trained in the starchy routine of the average business, Hollywood's working tempo must be very puzzling. Doubly so, when you realize that almost everyone knows that production costs on a big picture run as high as $1,000 an hour. Last week I took a visitor on a set where Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire were making a musical extravaganza. My guest stood in open-mouthed amazement while Ginger and Fred spent a solid half hour playing practical jokes on one another while the rest of the company loafed and applauded.

But the rules that apply to other industries just do not fit the picture business. The clowning that seems, at first glance, such a waste of time is really the best guarantee of a hit picture. It eases the tension and creates that happy-go-lucky spirit that gives a film the swing and sparkle that nothing else can provide. As a matter of fact, I cannot remember a single smash musical picture that was produced by a troupe that went grimly about its work.

The pick-up corner at the entrance to Cahuenga Pass is just about the most colorful early morning spot in Hollywood. Every 8 a. m. studio secretaries, telephone operators, hair-dressers and make-up girls gather on this corner to catch a ride to Warner Brothers or Universal Studio cars, and even stars and directors, stop to load passengers.

But the other morning one of Hollywood's infamous girl-chasers got an idea. Driving by in his long, imported car (of a make famous for its pick-up!) he tried to single out a pretty stenographer. What a surprise he got! Almost before he had come to a pause, three girls and two men were in his machine. Not much chance for the wrong kind of pick-up on that corner.

Boulevard Window Shopping: When Janet Gaynor's stand-in and Garbo's double walk down the street hand-in-hand, they earn more tourist gawking than most stars. A window display of rare coins is a swell place to wait for Ginger Rogers. When Marlene Dietrich swapped her white and racy phaeton for that sedate, black town car with the idea of escaping recognition, she should have left off all those foreign, attention-getting license plates.

George Raft has to have the help of two henchmen and a bodyguard to buy a necktie. Most popular window in Hollywood is the one where you can watch a goldsmith make those clever gadgets for charm bracelets.

The prize Hollywood boner was admitted to me the other day by a studio cameraman. A few years ago, he lived next door to a woman who nearly drove him crazy with her stories about her "clever little girl." She begged him to use his influence to get the child into pictures and offered him 50 per cent of all her future earnings. The child's name was Temple. Last year she earned over $1,000,000.

Viennese Star To Be Hostess To Rumanians

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 29.—Tala Birell, blonde Viennese actress, is Americanizing newspaper circulation promotion methods of Rumanian newspapers by remote control.

Her No. 1 gag lacks about 20 years of being new here, but it's hot stuff for Roumaine and Independence, two Bucharest dailies, and Miss Birell says the Rumanians are eating it up.

On her suggestion the papers are running a nation-wide contest to select the most beautiful boy and girl in Rumania.

Prize is a month's trip to Hollywood, and an outside chance at film fame. Youngsters will arrive late in August, and Miss Birell will be their hostess and official guide to the film capital.

The Birell contest has one unique angle that wouldn't be possible in America. With war scares hovering over Europe a trip to the United States has a potent appeal to young Rumanians, and the contests are the biggest thing since the Roman legions abandoned the Province of Dacia.

Miss Birell has been connected with the newspapers about six months, writing an inside Hollywood gossip column as a hobby.

Because Charlie Harden, of Linden, Iowa, and Comedian Joe E. Brown speak the same language, Harden went to work as Joe's valet.

"Had any experience?" asked Joe E. when Harden asked for the job.

"Sure have," said Harden. "I caught for Linden High School the day we beat Bob Feller, pitching for Van Meter. Got one hit in four times up."

"Gee, you're hired," said Brown.

Olympe Bradna went starry-eyed when a telegram informed her Ringling Brothers & Barnum & Bailey's circus is rooting for her to a man. Wire said the circus caught her last picture in Manchester, N. H., and bought out the whole theater. The actress is a niece of Fred Bradna, ringmaster.

Barry Fitzgerald, Irish comedian, astonished the Paramount natives by hypnotizing a rooster, which was spoiling an "Ebb Tide" take by crowing in the wrong places. Fitzgerald caught the bird, stroked it gently and set it on the ground, where it stood like a statue until the scene was finished.

Some 25,000 young stomachs must be filled three times a day down along the Potomac where they're having that Boy Scout Jamboree. They—the stomachs—comprise the toughest commissary problem Washington has known since the World War. Above.—A few of "cookie's" nightmare as they stood in the lunch line yesterday.

Once in a while Boy Scouts dress themselves up in feathers and sprinkle themselves with brick dust and go on the warpath, in a mild sort of way. Above.—Troop 20, Comanche Trail Council of Central Texas goes into its Indian dance.

See Jamboree, Scout Writer Urges Public

Post Special Jamboree Reporter.

If you visit the National Jamboree, which you shouldn't miss, be sure to look for the attractive entrances the Scouts have built for their doorway into their individual camp sites. They are really the tops, and some of them have had a lot of painstaking toil spent on them. Scouts from the vicinity of Western Virginia have constructed a 20-foot model of the Natural Bridge, through which you must pass to enter their camp.

JACK PARKER.

The Scouts from New York State have made some dandy gateways in order to entice you into their several camps along the Reflecting Pool. They also have a white fence encircling their plot of ground.

I attempted to have an interview with some of the 21 Polish Scouts who had just arrived, but I found that they cannot speak English. They have made a life-size model of a cat, which they keep as a "guard" over one of their tents.

Washington now has six newspapers with the heralding of the first edition of the Jamboree Journal. This 16-page tabloid daily is to be published for 11 days. The paper with neither a past nor a future has as editor Homer Paul Anderson. It boasts of a circulation of 55,000, a great many of these subscribers being in other parts of the country. Be sure to get a copy when you visit our Jamboree.

A large group of boys yesterday attended the Washington-Boston game with the compliments of Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators. They couldn't very much help enjoying themselves, for the game lasted 12 exciting innings, resulting in a tie and had to be called on account of darkness, eventually.

This morning the 1937 National Jamboree is officially opened. With the firing of cannon, the Avenue of Flags will become suddenly a colorful spectacle of our 48 State flags and 52 foreign nations. Simultaneously 1,534 other flags will be unfurled at all other points of the camp grounds.

"New York is interesting, Washington is beautiful, the whole United States is grand, but when we go to buy souvenirs of America we find they say 'Made in Japan' or 'Made in France' on the bottom."

Jerzy Wacio'rski was disappointed on that score, he confided yesterday, as the Polish delegation to the Jamboree set up camp in the Monument Grounds.

Remarkable Counting."

"Oh, yes," continued Jerzy, who, with Eddie Walska, does most of the English speaking for the group, "this is a remarkable country. But, please state why your American souvenirs come from Japan and France."

He and his comrades disembarked last Tuesday in New York and spent a week there—shopping for souvenirs. Here they will exhibit a glider, a kayak, a model of the Polish Sea Scouts' training ship, native handiwork and other souvenirs—truly Polish—not made in Japan.

The Scouts and girl guides are from Poland's biggest cities—Warsaw, Posnan, Lwow and Cracow, and Vilna, as well as from country districts. "Baby" of the outfit is 19-year-old Jerzy Czerwinski, from Warsaw. Senior sojourner is the Rev. Lech Ziemski, chaplain of the delegation and a Boy Scout as well. He is "over 50."

Five of the fellows have made previous visits to this country. Eddie Walska, in fact, lived in America several years. That is why he speaks such good English. Now he's going to school in Posnan.

Sea Scouts Popular.

Wacio'rski would have you know there are 200,000 Boy Scouts in Poland. Eight thousand are Sea Scouts. That's what he is. He learned his English in a Methodist school in Warsaw.

The group is going on a good-will tour before embarking for home in September. They will visit Chicago, Cleveland, Milwaukee and other cities.

A young Polish-American woman who lives in Washington helped the fellows prepare lunch yesterday, slicing heaps of tomatoes and opening can after can. She spread a tempting table, but refused to identify herself, because, you see, all Scouts are supposed to do their own cooking.

Memorial Highway Strip Closed to Protect Scouts

In deference to the safety of hundreds of Boy Scouts encamped along the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway between Arlington and Highway Bridge, that strip of road will be closed to traffic beginning at 10 a. m. today and continuing until the same hour on July 10.

The inter-bridge section of the boulevard will be opened daily, however, from 4 to 5:30 p. m. for evening rush-hour traffic.

sparks from flint and steel to produce fire symbolic of the spirit of scouting.

Through Commissioner George E. Allen, chairman of the President's Jamboree Committee, President Roosevelt's personal message will be delivered to the boys. It was the President who invited them last February to hold the Jamboree in the National Capital.

The campfire flames will dance to the tune of beating tom-toms. Indian braves, trained for the ceremony by Ralph Hubbard, author and authority on American Indian lore, will perform for the khaki-clad throng. Dr. West will officiate at the exercises.

Other speakers will include President Head and Col. Theodore Roosevelt, vice president of the Boy Scouts of America.

Dedicated to the spirit of fellowship and camaraderie, the program will be punctuated with Scout songs and yells. Officials expect the gathering to be one of the favorite events for the Scouts themselves, since the entire show will be by and for them, the largest conclave of youth ever gathered about a common fire.

Today will open with reveille at 7 a. m. and breakfast 45 minutes later. Following the flag-raising ceremonies scouts from Region 9 will go to Mount Vernon while their comrades split up for sightseeing, letter writing and rehearsing for the nightly arena displays.

Lunch will be served at 12:30 p. m. following which representatives of the Tenth and Eleventh Boy Scout regions will embark on the Mount Vernon excursion.

Beginning at 3 p. m. demonstrations of scoutcraft will be staged in the four camp theaters, with the visiting public welcome. There will be two performances, one at 3 and another at 4:30 p. m.

Mess call for dinner will sound at 6, the campfire will begin at 7:45 and the sounding of "Taps" at 10 p. m. will check off the first in the ten-day series of events.

The Jamboree Journal, an honest-to-goodness daily newspaper—with the exception of advertisements—made its debut yesterday in Scoutdom's tented city.

Printed in tabloid format, there will be one edition daily through July 9, last day of the Jamboree. Subscription price for the "season" is 50 cents. Single copies are a nickel.

Circulation had been built up to 55,000 before the presses rolled off the first issue, for the paper will be read not only by "jamboreenos" but by parents and friends throughout the country.

The Journal is edited by older Scouts and their junior comrades do the reporting. E. S. Martin, of national Boy Scout headquarters in New York, is editorial adviser.

Today's Jamboree Program

Me. Scouts to Give President Blankets

One hundred and eighteen Maine Scouts attached to Kathadin Council arrived in Washington last night bearing more gifts for President Roosevelt.

The White House, already destined to receive a weird array of horned toads, bull whps, miniature totem poles, etc., if their present uniformed owners have their way, will have its linen closet increased by two Indian blankets. The two Kenobscot Indian boys who, according to report, made the blankets were in the Maine contingent.

Cummings Is Told To Address Scouts

Attorney General Homer Cummings was under instruction from President Roosevelt last night not to attend the Roosevelt-duPont wedding today but to go, instead, and make his speech before the opening campfire tonight of the Boy Scout Jamboree.

Cummings with other members of the Roosevelt cabinet was invited to the wedding. He also had promised to deliver an address at the official opening of the Jamboree.

Mountain Scouts Bringing 'Scrip' To D.C. Jamboree

Scouts from southwestern Virginia and eastern Kentucky brought with them pockets full of scrip or "company money," a common medium of exchange in the coal fields, and small mountain communities.

More Scouts Invited To Today's Ball Game

Another batch of Boy Scouts will be guests of the management this afternoon at the second game of the Boston-Washington series.

Approximately 4,000 of the campers witnessed yesterday's opener. Other thousands will attend the final game in the series tomorrow.

When it was decided to send a delegation of Polish Boy Scouts to the National Jamboree here this summer, an energetic group of Polish Girl Scouts decided to come along, too. Eight of them arrived in town Sunday and since then have been dividing their time between the Jamboree and the Washington Girl Scouts' headquarters.

All eight are leaders of the Girl Scout movement in Poland. The only English-speaking member of the party, Jnina Tworkowska, has a position at the national headquarters and for many years has been an international commissioner of the movement. She was an intimate friend of Juliette Low, founder of the Girl Scouts of America.

Visit Headquarters.

They have already visited national headquarters in New York City. A ninth Polish girl is also here studying American camp procedure.

From here the women will return to New York and later journey westward to Detroit and Chicago, studying scouting activities along the way.

If Miss Tworkowska is typical of the rest, they have their minds pretty well made up about the differences between Girl Scout activities in this country and in Poland. Discussing particularly the contrast between the camps of the two countries, she explained—more emphatically than she intended—that Polish camp life is more "savage."

That is, the girls have to pitch their own tents and make their own furniture.

Polish System.

They look out for themselves more, too. Instead of having instructors in sports and handicrafts, the campers must be their own teachers.

She is inclined to believe that the Polish system tends to develop the girls' character more than ours does. But she agreed that our camps are preferable for one reason: They mix girls from many troops and localities, whereas Polish camps are smaller, consisting of Scouts from only one troop.

All are interested in the jamboree. Wanda Szydlowska is doubly so, because her husband, who is famous in Poland as a glider expert, is attending it.

'Swim-Dance' Attracts Many At Metronome

Pool Offers Cool Interlude to Wardman Park Hotel Patrons.

By Chanticleer

Positively the latest, folks. It's the "Swim-Dance." Nope, it's not a new Rogers-Astaire step or even the dance that young couples used to attract attention at the last PWA street dance. It is the new attraction offered by the management of the Wardman Park Hotel. There have been so many requests by the patrons of the Metronome Room for a bit of swimming after a dance and also by the early birds who want a morning dip, that the pool now will be available for swimming from 7 a. m. to 10 p. m. Sorta like a summer vacation, eh?

Jimmie Santmyer and his orchestra at the Wardman will probably have to play a new style of music for the swimmers or maybe they will put a loud-speaker out in the pool for the patrons. Incidentally, one of the most popular features of the night club is the intermissions . . . when various members of the orchestra entertain. Bill Einarsson, with his violin, is one of the best bets. He plays anything from classical to swing tunes. Here's a note of interest . . . Bill's wife, an attractive blonde, is a native of Iceland.

Opening quietly and unostentatiously (ahem) some weeks ago, the Nightingale, a night club worth the attention of all nighthawks, is ready to throw its first big party of the fiscal year, and tonight's the night. Located just three miles outside of Alexandria on the Richmond highway, this spot is easy for even one-armed drivers to find and with the new reduced popular rates now in effect at this nightery, there is really no reason for you to turn a deaf ear to the news that here is a place you can go and enjoy yourself without having to bring along your family silver chest.

The Nightingale boasts, and justly, of one of the largest and smoothest dance floors in these environs. So take a spin out there tonight and join in with the genial host and his merrymakers.

The King Cole room of the Claridge Hotel, 820 Connecticut avenue, has added a new and interesting attraction to supplement rippling-eyed Joan English and her ever-pleasing rendition of popular songs. Ward DuVall is the latest addition and this young man presents both popular and semi-classical vocals that is very, very good. In short, he is worthy of your attention when you drop in at the ever-cool Cole room. Miss English, by the by, is continuing her run at this place and as has previously been predicted her singing is growing in popularity each night. Now, we told you so don't blame us.

Well, well, our little scout just dropped by . . . and he's been to Brinkleys . . . that popular little place on Eighth street in the Southwest section of Washington, D. C. . . . and with his eyes near popping out of their sockets . . . he says . . . the customers over at Brinkleys go the management one better . . . they join into the entertainment themselves . . . community singing . . . of all things . . . if you like that sort of thing . . . and we do . . . ever since listening to the radio . . . and little popeye says that there are rumors that a network representative was seen lurking around for talent . . . so if you want to get in on the ground floor of community singing . . . hie yourselves over there . . .one, Carl Gunther, is the music master . . . and he calls his boys the disciples of rhythm . . . and he says (the pop) that in case your pipes(?) get dry there is a man who shakes things in a shaker.

It seems as if the Three M's who are currently featured at the Hi-Hat of the Ambassador Hotel are in for a long siege. And each week there is somethnig different on their program. The word is that the boys had several important engagements in New York and were only brought here for a short stay. However, the management prevailed . . . and so the boys will remain. Jimmy Summerville and his original version of the Man on the Flying Trapeze has been received with great enthusiasm. The Three M's, you know, recently made a short for Fox Films.

Just a bit of space now to tell you about one of Washington's finest Italian restaurants, Jene's at 1707 De Sales. They are opening the new outdoor garden tonight. So tonight, or any other night for that matter. if you are in the mood for good Italian dishes try Jene's. They also serve fine imported Italian wines . . . to make the meal complete.

Gwynne, the magician, appearing at the Shoreham presents his company of five assistants in quick-moving procession of spectacular tricks. And this fellow Gwynne looks like a magic man. He has a mustache, dark eyes and wears a costume for every occasion.

Adhering to Chinese pantomime, he performs his first tricks without speaking a word. Later on, he carries on a fast and humorous line of chatter. He will make a young lady disappear before your very eyes. He brings little bowls with fish from out of nowhere, he pulls strings out of your pockets. Also featured on the Shoreham program are Everett and Stevens in a sophisticated dance and violin numbers. The young lady fiddles while she dances.

Vacation time has really hit the Madrillon with all the fury of a tropical storm. In the orchestra several of the boys have disappeared for a short while, but they'll return. Johnny Shaw, the leader, is out of town. He is in New York. We wonder why?

"but just you wait till you see what I have in store."

A clever dance team is on the bill at the Lotus for this week. Jackson and Blackwell. They have recently returned from the West Coast, where they enjoyed one of the longest runs in the more popular night clubs. Their comedy number is really a hit. It is very hilarious. Next is Jack Whitney, a very graceful and talented solo dancer, who has appeared in several movies and also with Sally Rand.

The Van Sisters perform in a dance that is marked with perfect rhythm. They are twins and were also featured in recent shorts. Don Alvarado, billed as the Spanish barytone, is one of the best mimics to appear in Washington this season. Pretty Marion Dawn is still featured and her popularity ever grows. Nobody, remember, suffers from heat at the Lotus. The place is absolutely, folks, positively, and genuinely air-conditioned.

5 Group Heads Picked For Chest Fund Drive

Five of seven group solicitation area chairmen have been obtained for the tenth anniversary Community Chest campaign, it was announced last night by John L. Vandegrift, the unit chairman.

All are veteran members of previous Chest drives. They are John Reilly, president of the Second National Bank; Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary of the American Security & Trust Co.; Dr. Harold G. Moulton, of the Brookings Institute; Herbert J. Rich, of B. Rich's Sons, and Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"To Marry Or Not?" Asks Girl Whose Fiance Feels Financial Obligation to His Family.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am at my wits' end as to what to do. For a year I have been going with a young man, and for six months we have been making tentative marriage plans, but something always comes up to discourage them. I am 20 and he is 23, and we love each other deeply, in the true sense of the word. I have no family whatsoever, but his parents are living and he has two sisters, one of whom is married and has a small child. They all live together in one big house which they are buying on the installment plan.

• • • •

My fiance seems to be the mainspring of his mother's existence. Once when he tentatively mentioned marriage plans to her, she expressed the hope that he would "stick by" her until the house is paid for, which will be four more years at least. She suggested that one room could be fixed up for him and his wife and that he could consider the house as his. They have been expecting the married sister to move; in fact, would like her to; but won't suggest it. Her child is so spoiled that he gets on my nerves until I think I can't stand it. Superficially, however, I get on very well with his family.

• • • •

My fiance wants to get married this November, and says we can live in a place of our own if I wish. I can sense that he would like to "stick by" his mother, but still he wants to be with me. I don't want to be selfish about the whole thing, but I can't see waiting four years, on the one hand, or living with his family, on the other hand. Also, if we are going to have children of our own, I feel we shouldn't wait too long, and I wouldn't want children immediately after marriage in any event. I know we could be happy if we could just get married.

• • • •

Surely something can be done, when two people are as much in love as we are. He has left the decision to me, and this is what I have to choose from; living four years with his family; waiting four years; or having our own home, with the possibility of making him think I am selfish and maybe spoiling his regard for me. Please help me to decide.

DISTRESSED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DISTRESSED: If both you and your fiance have permanent positions, I believe the safest—indeed, the only—thing to do is to marry, get a very modest place of your own, and contribute regularly what you can toward retiring the indebtedness on the house. You are not selfish in wanting a home of your own, if only a room or two. Rather, you are demonstrating common sense and realistic foresight. So far as your mutual true love is concerned, it would be as dangerous to postpone marriage four years as it would be to live under the same roof with your husband's family. M. H.

A Romantic Encounter.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You will be rendering me an invaluable service in publishing this letter—if the other person whom it concerns should happen to read it and give me some explanation. My story is as follows: On Monday of last week I had occasion to go to a certain office in a large office building where I work. Not knowing the exact location of that particular office, I asked directions of a young lady I met in the corridor. Very graciously she conducted me there. En route, she disclosed the fact that she had worked in the building at one time, but is currently unemployed.

• • • •

Now, Miss Haworth, I am not the sort of person who takes a fancy to every girl he meets, but this particular girl appealed to me very much. She was altogether charming, gracious and at the same time the most unostentatious woman I ever met. I felt reluctant to leave her and in desperation asked if I might have the pleasure of seeing her again. At first she hesitated, but evidently sensing my desperate earnestness, she said she didn't have a telephone. Then I asked her if she would telephone me, and she said she would. Then we parted.

• • • •

I couldn't get her out of my mind. I had always wanted to meet just such a girl as she appears to be. On the third day after our encounter she did telephone me. It's possible I may have seemed a bit abrupt over the telephone, as I was very nervous, there were others in the office at the time, and I am not good at making telephone conversation. Anyway, I asked to see her that evening. She consented. Then I asked where she lived and she evaded the question, saying she would meet me in front one of the largest department stores at the appointed hour.

• • • •

I was overjoyed at the prospect of seeing her again and proceeded to the rendezvous ahead of time. I waited until 30 minutes past the appointed time and still she hadn't appeared. I have since been expecting a telephone call explaining why she didn't keep the appointment. She did not appear to be the type of person who would deliberately break an engagement. Do you suppose I made her angry by being rather abrupt over the phone? I know this episode is unconventional, but I have never met a girl whom I intuitively liked and respected more. Please advise me.

PERPLEXED.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Well, here's your letter in print, and let's hope it doesn't lead you into trouble. It's just possible, you know, that the young lady may have a husband or heavy suitor in the background, either of whom might resent intensely her keeping a rendezvous with another man, however, romantically met or repectfully impressed. On the other hand, of course, she may be only shy and essentially conventional in conduct; or it could be that she comes from humble or shabby home surroundings, and would rather do without men friends than present herself at what she might consider to be a social disadvantage.

M. H.

Tomorrow's Problem.

For nearly a year, middle-aged widower has been trying to persuade a young woman to marry him. At first she encouraged him, but now she won't have him. He gives details of her "most mystifying" conduct, and asks whether to pursue or abandon his courtship. His questions will be answered here tomorrow. This column appears Sunday and daily.

Whites That Differ.

New York (AP).—Would-be wearers of white clothes must select the proper shade with care this summer. For not all whites are alike. There are chalk, porcelain, oyster and even gardenia variations, some containing a little more blue, and some more yellow than dead white.

Heavy Women Offered Advice On Gown Buying

Hollywood Designer Suggests Proper Lines for Slimness.

SUMMER CLOTHES present special problems to the woman who is not so slim as she woud like to be. For one thing they often are inclined to fluffiness. For another, they are usually in light colors which give an illusion of bulk.

Kelly maintains no one wears clothes like a tall, slim woman and he unhesitatingly gives Kay Francis the accolade. Since everyone isn't blessed with that type of figure there are plenty of tricks in dressing that can help promote the illusion, he points out.

The woman who is large above the waist should pay particular attention to the neckline of her dress and the cut of the arm's eye. The latter should be cut so large that there is no wrinkle or pull below it. The neckline should never be high. The turtleneck and clerical styles should be avoided. A long slim V is generally preferred. Long loose sleeves are flattering or cap sleeves, but never the awkward elbow length ones which end with the bust and consequently widen that line. In no case should the bodice fit too tightly nor should too much detail be added to camouflage the size. Both of these tricks merely make it appear too prominent. The ideal setup is a semifitted or slightly gathered bodice.

A waistline that measures more than it should must never, never be girded by a contrasting belt. If a belt is used at all it must be as self-effacing as possible. Medium width and self-material are the two watchwords.

Straight Skirt Best.

The best way to slim hips that need it is to experiment by trying on dresses with every variety of skirt. Sometimes the gathered dirndl type of dress hides them, but more frequently it emphasizes size. A straight skirt is the best general rule, according to Kelly. However, it must not actually mold the figure, and the longer it is the more inches it will take off the hips. Beware of short skirts if you wear a size 40 dress. A hint there is also a jacket that extends as far as the lower hipline. A tailored suit with this type of jacket will have a surprisingly slender effect. Square shoulders and big sleeves are also a perfect antidote.

Kelly has suggestions for making too-slender girls look heavier. The neckline is usually a girl's first thought in selecting a dress. If she is underweight she should have a round or built-up neckline. Anyone of a dozen varieties will flatter.

Puffed sleeves are good if they continue down to the wrist, but if they end above the elbow they only emphasize the length and slimness of the arm. A modified medieval sleeve that comes from a square shoulder and extends to the elbow is most flattering for summer dresses.

It seems that no girl ever has too slim a waistline, so if she measures only 17 inches around she can wear exactly the type of belt she pleases unless this line is out of proportion to the rest of the figure.

Full skirts do wonders for boyishly flat hips, but they make slim legs appear slimmer, so unless the legs are Dietrichs, slim girls, like overweight ones, should stick to the straight and simple skirt. Panels and drapes are the slender one's meat and can be used extensively in evening clothes this year.

For Summer Slenderness

This beige cotton lace dress illustrates a flattering styling for a not-so-slim figure. The lowered V neckline, shoulder detail, surplice-effect blouse and simple skirt are the desired slimming details. It is a smart and cool frock that lends itself to numerous accessory changes.

Teach Children Consideration For Neighbors

By Margaret Wallace.

"DOES a boy or girl have a right to live and play in the great out-of-doors without any consideration for anyone else?" This question has been asked by a woman who complains that she "never has a quiet Sunday," her only day of rest at home, because the neighborhood boys play baseball all day in a vacant lot adjacent to her garden.

"They start to play before breakfast Sunday morning and play all day long, screaming and shouting, wrangling and making a noise generally," she writes. "I cannot sit on my own porch, although I have invested in an awning and easy chairs; and there is no longer any pleasure in my garden because these boys use a hard ball which often comes flying over my way. Of course I do not own the vacant lot, and as the owner has given these boys permission to play on this lot I cannot make any protest of that kind. I do not know how their own parents get a chance for any Sunday rest. It does not seem well-bred to me for these boys to thus break the Sabbath day, which some of us like to keep more quiet.

Protests to Parents.

"I protested to one of the parents and was told that while the children did not trespass on my property they had a perfect right to enjoy themselves, no matter whom it disturbed. I concede the right, perhaps; but is it good manners and will a boy or girl who has been deliberately rude and annoying to all the neighbors just so they can play on Sunday grow up to be a polite man or woman? I have always thought that well-bred children respect the rights of other people as well as claiming their own."

We have considered neighborhood manners before in this department. This writer is quite right in her contention that a well-bred boy or girl will consider the rights of other people. It has alwas been considered good form among church-going and non-church-going people of all creeds to respect the desire of the group who wish to have a quiet Sunday. It is very rude of these boys and very inconsiderate of their parents to permit them to play from early in the morning until late in the afternoon on Sunday, the day of rest of many people in the neighborhood.

One of the first essentials in training children to be well bred is to inculcate in them consideration for others. Boys and girls old enough to play baseball know that most of the people in their neighborhood work all day on week days and that they want a little quiet and relaxation on Sunday. Therefore, they show deliberate inconsideration for others.

Radio Manners.

QUERY—Is it polite for our next-door neighbor to play the radio long after midnight with all the windows open and the radio tuned up to the highest key? I remarked that the radio did not disturb my children as long as it was low, and since that time the neighbors have made their radio late at night as loud as they can. Legally they may have a right to do this, but is it well bred?

ANSWER—No; it is as rude as shouting into the windows of another person who wants to sleep. The well-bred owner of a radio will tune it down low so it can only be heard in the house and not disturb the neighbors. There is a polite pitch for radio as well as for people's voices.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 29.

NOW that the talk about the coronation and the Duke and Duchess of Windsor has died down somewhat, it becomes possible to pick up the fashion pieces among the debris. Out of all the tumult and the shouting, the one general influence that survives is the trend toward elaboration, fancy trimmings and gorgeous fabrics. But more specifically, Her Grace the Duchess of Windsor has brought about a wave of bodice styles that leave no doubt as to who still remains the prime mode mover today. That wedding dress of hers, with neat little draped bodice and tightening through the diaphragm, is the cry of the hour. Not only dresses, but blouses, nighties, and even suit jackets are being cut along these lines. You'll see plenty of these carry over into autumn.

ALICE HUGHES.

The first fall dress the shops will offer you is a draped number, likely to be of acetate silk jersey, and black or brown. Your second fall costume, if you're smart, will be one of those three-piece suit arrangements. Men have known the economy of two-pants suits for years. Now women are waking up to the realization that a one-piece dress, a separate skirt and a suit jacket make an all-season wardrobe.

Get ready, too, for the big brown fashion wave that is heading our way. Last year, as you know, was a gray year. Well, gray and brown just can't see each other. So now it is brown's turn, and this fall is the time. Both Schiaparelli and Alix, in Paris, have come out flat-footed for brown—which means all the light colors complementary to brown will be good, too—coral, turquoise, topaz and dusty rose quartz.

What's happened to the way women use colors is almost like what's happened in modern music. The most ear-piercing dissonances are played together. The other day we sat at a style meeting of the 1939 World's Fair to be held here in our town. Ahead sat Sara Pennoyer, fashion scribe for a Fifth avenue store. She knows her styles. She wore a brown dress banded at throat, sleeves and hem with orange piping. And at her throat, a brilliant cerise scarf. They shrieked at each other, these colors, but they're smaht!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—There's a Frenchwoman in this town by the name of Mme. de Bloas, who is crazy about cleanliness. She not only has her own sidewalks in front of her dwelling washed, but scented daily. She and her husband are now trying to get New York to appropriate money to mop up all over town. They counted several thousand wads of chewing gum in just one square block, and feel it just can't go on . . .

Helen Hayes floated through the city the other day when it was scorching hot. I passed her in a shop where she was buying stockings, and she had on a blue dress made of my favorite-sounding fabric, whose name is "Thinosa" . . .

• • • •

My friend, Eleanor Pollock, who works for a large organization, tells me her best source for what's going on among the biggies in the firm comes from the bootblack. Nearly all big office buildings have an itinerant bootblack who wanders in and out of bosses' offices, shining 'em up fast and unobstrusively. Often there is a conference going on, but no one seems to mind the bootblack. He just polishes away, listens to everything, receives his dime—and carries the news to the next office.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Vaccine Treatment.

Of the various methods of getting ready for the hay fever season, which begins in about six weeks, the two methods recommended in the two previous articles are probably most likely to succeed—one is a prolonged vacation, and the other is the use of air filters in the room in which the patient sleeps and the room in which he works.

For many people, however, neither of these are feasible. Those who have to be outdoors a good deal of the day and who cannot take off sufficient time for a vacation are reduced to the necessity either of bearing it or of trying the preventive treatment by the use of pollen vaccines. In the hand of those who have had experience with this form of treatment, when properly performed it gives some measure of relief in about 50 per cent of cases.

The theory on which it works has to do with the fundamental condition of the cells of the hay feverite's mucous membranes. The theory is that the cells are in a condition of what is called "allergy," or are particularly sensitive to the pollen of certain plants. This group of people consists of about 7 to 10 per cent of the entire population.

For some reason the pollen grain lights on the membrane of the eye or the nose and dissolves, liberating a chemical which immediately causes intense inflammation of the mucous membrane. Why this occurs in some people and not in others is a complete mystery. It can be found, however, which pollen produces this effect.

In this country the fall hay fever is caused by some form of ragweed in about 90 per cent of cases, although many people are sensitive to several kinds of plants.

It has been found also that if very high dilutions of pollen are prepared and injected hypodermically, they act like an immunizing agent and desensitize the membranes involved. This treatment must be begun early, several weeks or months before the season starts. The strength of the vaccine is gradually increased until at the time the hay fever season starts, quite a potent vaccine is being taken.

In some patients this pre-seasonal treatment is not sufficient, and small doses of vaccines must be taken all year round in order to achieve results. This is called the perennial vaccine treatment.

Cool Fruit Drink, Plate of Cake Go Far to Dispel Summer Heat

Cold Punch or Lemonade Hit Spot With Afternoon Callers and Children; Recipes Listed for Hula-Hula and Raspberry Tang.

By Rebekah Blake.

NOTHING is more refreshing than a cool beverage and a plate of cookies or cake. Even without the cookies, a drink of cold punch or lemonade hits the spot with afternoon callers, with children after strenuous play or for no more excuse than that you are thirsty.

A cooling beverage as pineapple punch, ginger cup, ambrosia punch, mintade, mixed fruit punch, coffeeade or fig delight, or one of many others, such as those that were submitted in The Post beverage contest, should be kept handy in your refrigerator for an impromptu serving.

The first prize for this contest, $3, was won by Miss Jeanette Beaver, Paeonian Springs, Va., for her recipe for hula-hula.

The second prize, $2, went to Mrs. J. T. Frailey, 5716 Eighth street northwest, for her recipe for drink. The third prize, $1, was awarded Miss Ruth Clark, LaPlata, Md., for her recipe for raspberry tang, and the fourth prize, also $1, went to Mrs. Mary Graham Ireland, 719 Third street northeast, for her recipe for maple coffee cream. The fifth prize, $1 was won by Mrs. J. H. King, 1623 Thirty-fifth street northwest, for her recipe for fig delight.

Hula-Hula.

Syrup from No. 2½ can sliced pineapple.
1 cup water
½ cup of sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint vanilla ice cream

Boil cocoa, sugar and water together 3 minutes. Chill. Add chilled pineapple syrup and vanilla. Stir ice cream until in small pieces. Add to drink, beat with spoon, and serve at once with spoon and straw. This makes 3 servings.

Mrs. Frailey's recipe follows:

Drink.

1 quart uncolored Japan tea
1 pound small white grapes
1 pound 4x sugar
1 pint root beer
Pulverized mint

Have tea ready. Cook grapes with sugar and 1 cup water until syrup is formed. Add mint while above is warm. Chill hours before serving. Add crushed ice just at serving as ice takes away flavor. Do not use root beer unless you wish. Whip the whites of several eggs, put in a dash of sugar. Add a teaspoon to the top of the drink in each glass. Also add 2 green cherries and 1 mint leaf.

Miss Clark's recipe:

Raspberry Tang.

1 quart currants
1 quart red raspberries
3 lemons
1 pint gingerale
2-3 cup sugar
3 cups water
1 teaspoon maple flavoring

Mash the currants and raspberries and cook until the juice flows freely, using just enough water to keep from sticking. Drain off the juice, add lemons, sugar and water. Stir until the sugar is dissolved. When cool add maple flavoring and gingerale. Serve with ice cubes. Makes about 3 quarts.

Here is Mrs. King's recipe:

Maple Coffee Cream.

3 cups drip coffee
6 tablespoons maple syrup
½ cup stiffly whipped cream sweetened with maple sugar
Scraped maple sugar (optional)

Combine the coffee and maple syrup and chill. Pour into tall slender glasses. Garnish with the maple whipped cream and if desired, sprinkle with scraped maple sugar.

Mrs. King's recipe:

Fig Delight.

1 pound figs
2 quarts boiling water
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
Tiny piece of mace
4 cloves
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup honey
¼ cup strained lemon juice
½ cup strained orange juice
3 cups unsweetened pineapple juice

Wash the figs and cover with the boiling water. Let stand overnight. In the morning simmer until the figs are tender. Strain the juice (reserving figs for other uses). To the hot juice add the next 6 ingredients. Let stand, covered, until cold. Strain and add the remaining fruit juices. Chill thoroughly. Serve with 2 tablespoons of cracked ice and a slice of lemon in each glass.

Vivid Pink, New Scent Both Called 'Shocking'

Paris (U.P.).—"Shocking" is the name of a vivid pink in the new Schiaparelli collection, and "Sweet Potato" yellow is used effectively as well as a bright greenish blue which is between turquoise and aquamarine in tone. Black is repeated frequently for street wear in trim, tailored crepes made with short sleeves, high neck and zipper or medal fastenings.

"Shocking" likewise is the name of a new Schiaparelli perfume just displayed. It is exotic and rather heavy to suit the sophisticated note of the new collection.

Style of Dancing Often Influences Clothing Designs

Shortly after the war such dances as the toddle and the bunny hug hit the world. "Ragtime" was the popular musical phrase and it could almost be applied to fashion. Skirts became shorter and tighter and the romantic trend completely disappeared. When the Charleston swooped down, skirts had to widen out a bit because legs had to have plenty of room for action.

By and by came the depression and music became gay and sweet by turns. Gowns dropped to the floor but were slim and molded, so semi-romantic music of the day brought on semi-romantic fashions for evening.

With the advent of swing music came the princess line with a fuller skirt, and when the rhumba hit, with it came a very fitted hipline with fullness emerging from a lower level.

Now comes the most talked-of style of all—the waltz frock. Whether it will catch on or not remains to be seen. It is so radically different that it is merely very much under discussion at the moment. However, if the people go on loving waltzes it's a cinch.

'Dream Cottage' for Wall Panel Composed of Simple Stitches

By Alice Brooks.

"GARDENING" proves a real treat for needles when there's a rose trellis "dream cottage" with garden to be embroidered on the loveliest wall panel ever! Its background plain, the panel works up quickly, using gay floss or wool and simple stitches. It needs only a lining. In pattern 5880 you will find a transfer pattern of a picture 15x20 inches; color key and chart; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post Household Arts Dept., 250 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Mrs. Pettengill Will Sail To Peking House Party

Going all the way to Peking, China, to attend a house party, Mrs. George Pettengill, wife of Admiral Pettengill, will sail from San Francisco, July 1. To the envy of her many friends, she is to be one of the guests at the party which Paul D. Cravath, of New York, is giving there.

Mr. Cravath has leased a house—servants and all—in Peking and his guests are coming from all corners of the globe, for two months of gayety.

Sailing today, he and his attractive daughter, Mrs. William Francis Gibbs, of New York, will be accompanied by Mrs. J. Bradley Delehanty and Miss Patricia Delehanty and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Vetior, of New York City. They will go first to Russia and then to the Far East.

Mrs. Pettengill will be accompanied by Miss Margaret Case, of New York, and several other guests of Mr. Cravath are sailing at the same time. They will enter China, from Japan by way of Korea; will be met by their host in Peking and will be joined there by two friends from Paris and two others from London.

There will not be a dull moment during the house party if the well-laid plans of Mr. Cravath pan out—which undoubtedly they will. There will be the usual temple trip, and many short trips will be taken around the city in addition to the entertaining which will attend the visit of the guests.

The party expects to land in San Francisco about November 1, all coming back on the same ship.

Going to the Orient is like going home to Mrs. Pettengill. Admiral Pettengill was twice stationed in China, serving five years altogether. While there, he and Mrs. Pettengill collected many valuable and unusual pieces. In their quarters in the Navy Yard the Chinese touch predominates. Mrs. Pettengill's old vases have been the envy of antique collectors, as have her Chinese screens and prints.

Mr. Cravath, who has been the guest of Admiral and Mrs. Pettengill in Washington several times, finds it easy to assemble his guests from far parts of the world for he has traveled extensively. He represented the United States Treasury in the "House Mission" to the Inter-Allied War Conference in Paris in 1917. He was also advisory counsel of American Mission to the Inter-Allied Counsel on war purchases and finance in London and Paris in 1918.

Admiral and Mrs. Pettengill returned to Washington on Monday from Hanover, N. H., where they attended the graduation of their son, William Vanhorn Pettengill, from Dartmouth College. Young Mr. Pettengill will spend the summer in Washington with his father and in the fall will enter Harvard Law School.

H. W. Peters Weds Miss Edith Colt In Quiet Ceremony

Miss Edith Converse Colt, daughter of Mrs. Le Baron Carlton Colt, of Bristol, Long Island, and the late Mr. Colt, and Horace White Peters, son of Mrs. Joseph Hyde Pratt, of Chapel Hill, N. C., and the late James Girvin Peters, were quietly married yesterday afternoon, with only members of the two families and a few close friends present at the ceremony.

Of interest to Washington was the recent marriage of Miss Bernice Adelaide Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Leonard Howard, of St. Albans, Ala., and Mr. Robert Julius Gutheim, son of Mr. and Mrs. August G. Gutheim, of Chevy Chase, Md.

The bride wore a white lace gown and a white Juliet cap. She wore a cameo, which was worn by her great-grandmother on her wedding day, and a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Howard, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her dress was of apricot chiffon. Her hat and shoes were of pale green and she wore a corsage of Talisman roses. The bridegroom had as his best man his brother, Mr. Frederick Gutheim, of Chevy Chase, Md.

Following the reception, which was held at Hathaway Inn on St. Albans Point, Mr. and Mrs. Gutheim left by motor on an extended honeymoon. They will be at home in White Plains, N. Y., after July 5.

Mrs. Gutheim is a graduate of Bellows Free Academy, class of 1931, and was graduated from the Lenox Hill Hospital in New York in 1935.

Mr. Gutheim attended private schools in this city and was graduated from the Harvard Business School and the Harvard Engineering School in 1933. He is employed by the General Cable Corporation, of White Plains, N. Y.

Among those who attended were Mr. Henry Wesselman, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. August Gutheim, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gutheim, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McCawley, all of Chevy Chase, Md.; Mrs. Meiser and Mrs. Etta Boreland, of Erie, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. William Winship, South Royalton; Mr. and Mrs. E. A. West, Miss Helen Taft and Mr. Chester Taft, Essex Junction; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cutting and Daniel Cutting, Cambridge, Mass.; Miss Josephine Baum, New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Herman E. Gutheim, of Cambridge, Mass.

F. S. Paxtons, Married Monday, Honeymooning in Atlantic City

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK SHERWOOD PAXTON, whose marriage took place Monday morning, are now on their wedding trip to Atlantic City and New York. Upon their return to Washington they will be at home at 3319 Morrison street.

Mrs. Paxton is the former Miss Mary Verlinda Roach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Roach, and Mr. Paxton is the son of Mrs. Pauline S. Paxton and Frederick Paxton.

The ceremony was performed at 9 a. m. in St. Anthony's Church, in Brookland, with the Rev. Edward H. Roach, uncle of the bride, officiating. The church was decorated with white gladioli and larkspur. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of lace over satin Her veil of net was caught to the sides with lilies and her bridal bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Florence H. Roach, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and her gown was of rose mousseline de soie with lace insert. She wore a veiled turban and carried a bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium.

The bridesmaids were Miss Martha Catherine McAndrews, of Brookland, and Miss Mary Watkins, of Baltimore, Md. Their gowns were made similar to that of the maid of honor and were of aquamarine mousseline de soie. They wore matching turbans and carried bouquets of talisman roses.

Robert Sheves was best man for Mr. Paxton, and the ushers were Norman Grady, Frank D. Roach, jr., Thomas B. Smyser and George Paitan.

A wedding breakfast followed the wedding and was given at the Admiral Club. The mother of the bride wore an ensemble of blue crepe and her corsage was of talisman roses. The mother of the bridegroom wore a gown of gray and red print chiffon. Her corsage was of gardenias.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Melvin C. Rohler, Scarsdale, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. McIntyre., jr., Boston, Mass.; Mrs. B. S. Jenkins, Hanover, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Cockley, Thomas Smyser and Miss Hazel Diffendaffer, of York, Pa.; Miss E. Watkins, Baltimore, Md., and Miss Ruth Castille, of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Paxton is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy, and Mr. Paxton attended Washington and Lee High School, in Falls Church, Va.

Dr. Hugh Grant Studies Balkans

U. S. Minister to Albania Tours Greece, Turkey, Rumania.

Dr. Hugh G. Grant, the American Minister to Albania, has returned to Tirana following a month's tour of Greece, Turkey and Rumania, where he made studies of the political and economic situation. Mrs. Grant was accompanied by his wife and daughter, Miss Louise Grant The minister's itinerary included Athens, Istanbul, Ankara and Bucharest, where he conferred with and was entertained by his colleagues, the American Ambassador to Turkey and the American Ministers to Greece and to Rumania, and by the official representatives of the Albanian government. The Minister also conferred with members of the foreign offices.

In Bucharest, the Minister was the guest of the Rumanian government at the review given by his majesty King Carol in honor of the President of Poland, a visitor in Bucharest. Within the next two weeks Dr. Grant will visit Belgrade and Sofia, thus completing his tour and study of the Balkan countries.

Bliss Home Is Scene of Press Tea

Mrs. Cordell Hull and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace Are Among Guests.

Dumbarton Oaks, the beautiful 67-acre estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss yesterday was the scene of a party given in honor of the officers and board of governors of the Newspaper Women's Club, of which Mrs. Bliss is an associate member.

Receiving in the patio with the host and hostess were Mrs. Ned Bruson Harris, newly elected president of the club, and Mr. Charles Gridley, president of the National Press Club. Mrs. Bliss wore a white crepe ensemble with a necklace and bracelets of jade.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, arrived early, as did Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture. Both are associate members of the club.

Mint juleps, iced coffee, dainty sandwiches and sweets were served in the solarium and on the verandas. As the invitations read "swimming and tennis" a number of the guests took advantage of the opportunity to enjoy the lovely Venetian pool. Senator Theodore F. Green came equipped to play tennis, but due to threatening skies was unable to find anyone ready to join him in a set.

Among those who called during the afternoon were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mr. Butler Wright, United States Minister to Czechoslovakia; Dr. Leo S. Rowe, of the Pan-American Union; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Roland Robbins, Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin and Mrs. George T. Marye.

Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of Senator McNary, was among the later arrivals. Others seen strolling in the garden or chatting on the verandas were Mrs. Harold Hinton, Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, Senator Arthur Capper, Mr. and Mrs. William Castle, Dr. Stanley Hornbeck and Mr. Olin S. Dows.

Birth Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. John Slidell announce the birth of a daughter on Monday, June 28. Mrs. Slidell is the former Miss Hallie Brooke, daughter of Mrs. Mark Brooke and the late Col. Brooke, U. S. A.

Sail for Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Gassenheimer sailed from New York yesterday, on the S. S. Statendam for Europe, where they will spend the summer. Their itinerary will include England and the Scandinavian countries.

Central Committee Acts For 18 Women's Units

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

When is an organization not an organization? The answer is simple: When it's the Women's Joint Congressional Committee.

Mrs. Glenn L. Swiggett, of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, is now chairman of the committee, which includes representatives of 18 national women's organizations and serves only as a clearing house for them. It takes no stand itself, has no aims or purposes other than to make possible united action when five or more of its member organizations desire to co-ordinate their efforts for or against a measure, and to keep them all informed on national legislation of interest to women.

It was formed in 1920 with Maud Wood Park, first president of the League of Women Voters, as its first chairman. Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, vice president of the league, is now its vice chairman; Mrs. William T. Bannerman, of the Congress of Parents and Teachers, its secretary, and Mrs. Sina N. Stanton, of the Council of Women for Home Missions, its treasurer.

Each Group Has Two Representatives.

Each of the member organizations appoints one delegate and one alternate to serve on the committee and may also designate 3 members to represent it on specified legislative committees. It meets monthly and has one social affair a year—a dinner in the winter, soon after Congress convenes, to which the women members of Congress are invited. This is an off-the-record party given so the women lawmakers and those interested in legislation may become acquainted.

Mrs. Basil Manly, of the National Consumers' League, heads the entertainment committee which functions for this single affair, assisted by Mrs. Dorothy Dunn, of the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Mrs. Paul E. Howe, of the American Home Economics Association; Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, of the National Council of Jewish Women, and Miss Clarice Wade, of the Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Among the most active members of the congressional committee "on the Hill" are Miss Florence Kirklin, congressional secretary of the League of Women Voters; Mrs. Opal D. David, legislative representative, of the Congress of Parents and Teachers; Miss Elizabeth Eastman, of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, and Mrs. Bannerman.

The by-laws of the "Woman's Joint," as the organization is sometimes called for the sake of brevity, provide for a few standing committees

Miss Eastman Look Out Chairman.

There is the look-out committee, headed by Miss Eastman, charged with responsibility for scrutinizing measures introduced or about to be introduced into Congress and for bringing to the attention of member organizations those which appear to be in line with their interests. Miss Eastman has serving with her on this committee, Mrs. William Kittle, past president of the D. C. branch of the Women Voters; Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, its present president, and Miss Carrie Waldron, of the National Education Association.

There is also the follow-up committee which investigates and reports from time to time to the Joint Congressional Committee concerning the results of those laws supported by member organizations. Miss Selma Borchardt, of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., who is on her way to the meeting of the World Federation of Education Associations in Tokyo, is chairman of this committee. Serving with her are Dr. Mary Alice Brosius, of the Women's Homeopathic Medical Fraternity; Mrs. William Crane Johnstone, jr., of the League of Women Voters, and Miss Agnes Winn, of the National Education Association.

The admissions committee, which considers applications of organizations for membership, is headed by Dr. Louise Jones, of the Medical Women's National Association, with Miss Mary Winslow of the National Woman's Trade Union League, Miss Gertrude Bowling, of the American Nurses' Association and Mrs. E. E. Danly, of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., and Dr. Julia M. Green, of the Women's National Homeopathic Medical Fraternity, as the other members.

Persistent Effort Made for Years.

Special legislative committees are appointed to work for or against any measures on which five member organizations of the committee have, on their own initiative, taken a similar stand. Committees have been following certain legislation for years. Some which have been carried over a long period are that for adequate support of women's and children's bureaus in the U. S. Department of Labor; for the Bureau of Home Economics in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and for the Office of Education in the U. S. Department of the Interior; also that on the status of married persons and the merit system in the Civil Service; opposition to the so-called equal rights amendment, which is opposed by nine member organizations; revision of the Food and Drugs Act and national representation for the District of Columbia.

The trend of sentiment among women's organizations is indicated by the measures on which the legislative committees are working. New committees have been formed during this session of Congress to work for the abolition of block booking and blind selling of motion pictures; for anti-lynching legislation; and in support of Federal Child Labor legislation.

The Women's Joint Congressional Committee is believed to be unique and to have survived where other attempts at similar organizations have failed, because it has sought no identity of its own other than its name, and is nothing more than a tool for the use of its member groups.

Member organizations are the American Association of University Women, the American Dietetic Association, the American Federation of Teachers, the American Home Economics Association, the American Nurses' Association, the Council of Women for Home Missions, the Girls' Friendly Society of the United States, the Medical Women's National Association, National Board of the Y. W. C. A., National Congress of Parents and Teachers, National Consumers' League, National Council of Jewish Women, National Education Association, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, National League of Women Voters, National Women's Trade Union League, Women's Homeopathic Medical Fraternity and the Childhood Education Association.

Jewish Auxiliary To Hold Club Dance

The Washington Ladies Auxiliary of the Jewish War Veterans will sponsor a country dance this evening at the Indian Springs Country Club. Prizes will be offered for the funniest and the prettiest costume and a prize waltz also will be a feature of the program.

Mrs. Israel Reiskin is chairman of the committee and Mrs. Albert Kahn co-chairman. Mrs. David Sherman is in charge of publicity.

The auxiliary cares for needy veterans and their families and has standing committees which visit veterans' hospitals weekly, dsitributing candy, cigarettes and other articles for which the men ask. In addition to this, the group co-operates with other civic and patriotic organizations. Proceeds of the dance will go toward the philanthropic work.

Off for Education Conference in Tokyo, Japan

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

FRANCES PARKINSON KEYES, one of the most distinguished members of the Women's Natoinal Press Club, is on her way to Europe. Saw her off yesterday noon—believe it or not—and didn't go to New York to do it either. She and Harriet Whitford, who is accompanying her on the trip, were already on their way when I found them out at the Little Tea House, having luncheon. Mrs. Keyes was in a cool green and white print dress, made with a little jacket, and wore a black hat with a spray of green flowers like those in the design on her frock. Miss Whitford was in a costume of navy blue. However, don't make the mistake of picturing them in those clothes for the entire journey—they have 13 pieces of baggage (sizable baggage it is too) packed neatly in the rear of the car. There is still space for a few extra things if they care to add them before sailing tonight abroad the Hamburg.

They plan to tour the Continent, remaining abroad until September, Labor Day as the tentative date for their return to Washington. Mrs. Keyes, necessarily, has included in her luggage what she calls "the tools of the trade" and a book at least partly finished is bound to be the fruit of her summer in Europe.

MRS. STERLING BOCKOVEN, who is press chairman for the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution, does not confine her writing to publicity for the D. A. R. For some years she has been doing feature articles and short-short stories for a syndicate.

More than that, she goes "gypsying" through the country each summer to gather material accompanied by her young son and daughter, who do their share of recording daily adventures in their diary. Mrs. Bockoven with Arlene, 12, and Thomas, 10, leaves tomorrow by motor, for the West to be gone three months. Their trip will take them first to Chicago, on to Iowa, up into Montana and where else, Mrs. Bockoven does not know until she gets there.

Two years ago she went to Portland, Ore., "by way of Mexico." That's one of the joys of her story-gathering trips—she follows her inclination or the trail which leads to some out-of-the-way place of which she has heard, which has an interesting tale connected with it or a picturesque town character to be interviewed. She sketches the plots of her stories as she goes, and, on her return home, spends long sessions at the typewriter catching up with herself and "pounding out copy."

During Mrs. Bockoven's absense, Mrs. E. A. A. Dunn, will take over the press chairmanship of the D. A. R.

JANET COON, who delighted the Business and Professional Women's Club with her whistling Monday night on the program of its banquet, paid a pretty tribute to three of her friends among the members before she began. It was Sybil Baker, director of playgrounds, and a member of the club, who first took an interest in her whistling, she said, and encouraged her to go on with it. Another, Alice Webster, of the board of directors, was responsible for her start in the business world, giving her her first job as a secretary, and it was Marjorie Webster who gave her her training at the Marjorie Webster School.

When the attractive young artist had expressed her appreciation for what her friends in the B. & P. W. had done to contribute to her success, the club members felt as though they all had a claim on her and had a right to be proud of her, too.

Women's Group Hears Address By Mrs. Fickel

MRS. MAYBELLE G. FICKEL, who has just returned from an extensive lecture tour in the interests of general education on the social security program, Monday night addressed her first Washington audience on the subject. She spoke at the Washington Hotel before the regular meeting of the Reporter Plan Group of the Democratic Women's National Council, of which she is a member.

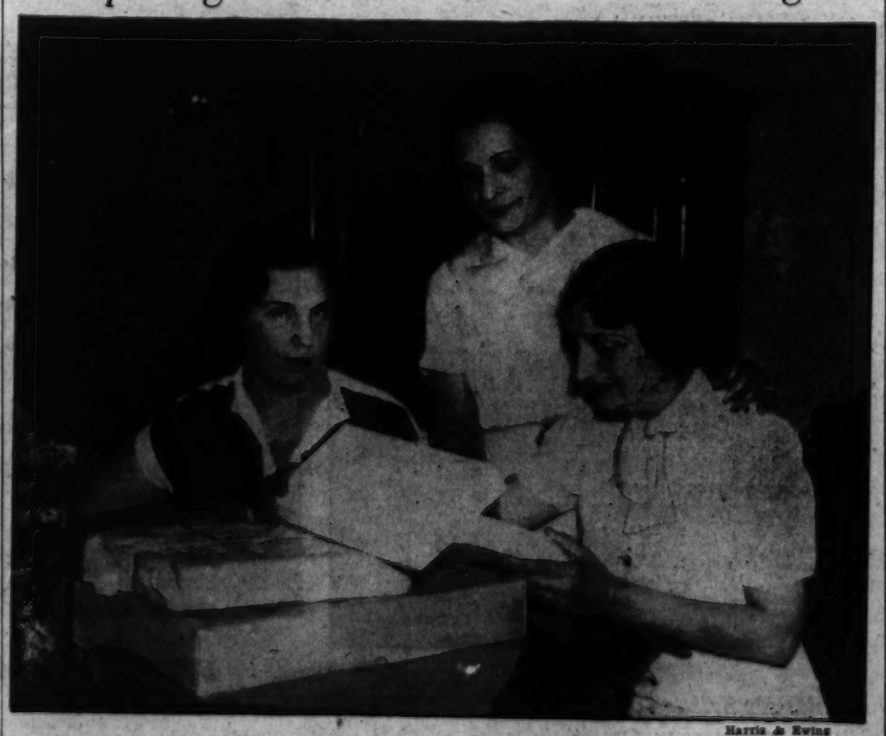
Mrs. Fickel's recent trip took her through Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, and to Indianapolis for the meeting of the National Council of Social Workers.

"Without the interest of the general public and the co-operation of Federal and local governments," she asserted, "the accomplishments of the social security act would not be so apparent as they are today. The trial period is passed; results are being shown. Public understanding and interest in various parts of the program will assist the maintenance of the project, which will necessarily cover a period of years.

"The heart of any security program must be the child, and all parts of the social security act are in a very real sense measures for the security of children. States have been willing and active in co-operating with parts of the program in which they have had some experience prior to the passing of the social security act. The continuance of public assistance by matching Federal grants represents a true tradition long established in American life," she said. "Federal old-age benefits and unemployment compensation are relatively new in our social life, however, and the public needs to become acquainted with their importance."

Miss Alma Schevlin was chairman of the meeting.

Preparing for War Veterans' Dance Tonight



Harris & Ewing

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Jewish War Veterans is sponsoring a dance this evening at Indian Spring Country Club to aid its philanthropic wrk. Mrs. Israel Reiskin, chairman, center, is shown with Mrs. David Sherman, left, and Mrs. Albert Kahn, looking at prizes which will be awarded for costumes and in dance contests.

Girl Guides From Abroad To Visit U.S.

Encampment to Draw Members From 31 Countries.

Three women members of Congress have expedited the entry into the country of visiting Girl Guides coming to the United States this summer for the Girl Scout Silver Jubilee encampment at Briarcliff Manor, N. Y. Representative Caroline O'Day introduced a bill exempting them and their chaperones from payment of visa fees, head tax and certain customs duties, and Senator Hattie Carraway and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers aided in its passage.

Yesterday morning two girls from the District who will be among the 72 Girl Scouts from various States, acting as official hostesses, were presented a copy of the bill at Senator Caraway's office as a gift of Congress toward the success of the encampment. The girls were Florence Farwell, of Troop 60, and Elizabeth Warner, of Troop 53, who accepted it as representatives of the national Girl Scout organization.

The encampment is sponsored by the national Girl Scouts as a feature of the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the movement in the United States. It is the first such international gathering to be held in this country, and will draw Girl Guides from 31 nations.

Ninth Inning Rally Gains Tie for Nats

Bluege Inaugurates Drive With 'Fluke' Single; Grove Goes Route.

By Shirley Povich.

With the Nats and Red Sox locked in a 12-inning 2-2 tie in the gathering dusk of yesterday, Hizzoner Bill McGowan, the umpire in chief, looked at his watch, scanned the cloudy heavens and with a wave of his pudgy arm shooed both clubs off the field for keeps, declaring their battle a draw.

Thus came to an end what had been a swell ball game with the venerable Robert Moses Grove out there giving duel to three shifts of Washington pitchers and doing a superb job of it with the exception of the ninth inning.

That ninth inning brought forth a magnificent last-ditch stand by the Nats that wiped out a 2-0 lead Grove had been holding ever since James Emory Foxx had interrupted Monte Weaver's pitching with a booming shot of a home run into the leftfield stands back there in the second inning.

Beats Back Threat.

The old left-hander who had been pitching some three-hit ball up to the eighth inning, beat back a Washington threat then when he struck out Buddy Myer with the bases loaded, clogged, fully populated or any other way you want to put it. But he was wavering badly in that ninth.

Ossie Bluege, who always did have a respectable batting average against the league's greatest left-hander, appeared as a pinchhitter for Ed Linke in the ninth and opened proceeding with a luck-anointed single—a broken bat affair that Joe Cronin just did fail to reach and the rally was on.

Grove then put the tying run on base personally by walking Jess Hill and, quicker than you can say John L. Lewis, young John Kelley (Buddy) Lewis rapped a safe bunt in Jimmy Foxx's direction and the Nats had the bases full with none out.

Then the old lefthander, who was visibly tiring, failed to get the ball across the plate against Joe Kuhel and forced Bluege home with a run. And when Johnny Stone hit into a force play at second, Hill galloped home from third with the tying run.

Hits Into Double Play.

And with only one as yet out, the Nats' hopes were somewhere up in the stratosphere, but a moment later they could have walked erect under a daschund, because Freddie Sington, who could have driven that winning run home with a long fly, bashed a soft line drive into Cronin's hands and he whipped it across the diamond to Jimmy Foxx to retire stone for a double play before that fellow could return to the bag.

After that Pete Appleton took up the pitching for the Nats, and he gave 'em plenty of license to go out and win the game, because he held the Sox to one hit from the tenth through the twelfth, but the Nats were kinda helpless against old Robert Moses.

They didn't get a hit in the tenth or eleventh, and in the twelfth they muffed their last chance. Johnny Stone beat out a hit to Foxx, but Freddie Sington's attempted sacrifice took the form of a pop to Grove and, after Travis fouled out, Stone went out stealing in a last desperate effort to make some progress.

Then it was that Hizzoner Mr. McGowan decided it was too dark to play any more and said so, but the 10,000 Boy Scouts from the Jamboree grounds and the 4,000 paying customers didn't think it was too dark and they said so, too. But Mr. McGowan paid no attention.

Monte Weaver was the guy who was pitching against Grove when the thing began, and if you toss out that homer he pitched to Foxx in the second inning, it was a right fair job that he did. He lasted seven innings and gave up only four hits before he was removed for a pinch hitter.

Joe Cronin whacked a single to center just before Foxx smacked his fourteenth homer of the season high into the centerfield seats and Grove was making that 2-0 lead stand up very nicely until the ninth.

Cubs Retain League Lead, Beat Dean, 11-9

Errors in Ninth Inning Lose Seventh Game of Season for Dizzy; Jurges Ejected by Umpire for Kicking Dust.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 29.—Explosive protests of the Chicago Cubs intermingled with base hits and runs today as the fighting Bruins whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 11 to 9 and kept their leadership of the National League.

The game was won in the ninth inning on three hits off Dizzy Dean, a walk and two errors by Mickey Owen, rookie catcher, and the veteran St. Louis captain and shortstop, Leo Durocher.

Dean pitched only the ninth, and fanned the first two, but was charged with the defeat, his seventh of the season against 11 victories. Charlie Root got credit for the victory.

Until the Cub half of the sixth the battle for first place before a ladies' day crowd in excess of 20,000 was purely baseball. The Cubs went into that inning trailing by one run and got two of them back before Bill Jurges was called out at first on a close play. The Cubs stormed on the field and protested to Umpire George Barr. It was Barr who called a balk on Dean in that "battle of the century" between Hubbell of the Giants and Dean here May 19 which ended in a free for all riot.

But the decision stood.

In the eighth Jurges was ejected by Umpire Stewart after the Cubs had kicked on Stewart's calling a pitch to Johnny Mize a ball, which walked the Cardinal slugger and forced in Pepper Martin with a run which put the Gashouse Gang in the lead. As the snarling Cubs gathered around Stewart at the plate, Jurges kept kicking dust over the plate as Stewart attempted to sweep it off.

Then the ninth with Dean on the mound and Owen behind the plate.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 29.—With Jim Ripple getting four hits out of five times at bat, the New York Giants came from behind to whip the Phillies, 4 to 3, in ten innings today.

Ripple drove in the first two Giant runs, scored with the tying counter in the eighth and brought over the deciding run in the first extra frame when he led off with a double and tallied on Johnny McCarthy's single. In addition he made several sparkling catches in centerfield.

Al Smith, who replaced Hal Schumacher in the tenth, after the latter had allowed the Phils to score three times in the first frame, received credit for the victory.

For the first time since the John McGraw era of five years ago, the Giants did not have their manager on the bench. Bill Terry was laid up by a slight attack of ptomaine poisoning. The team was in charge of Catcher Gus Mancuso.

Helen Jacobs Upset In English Net Play

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Wimbledon, Eng., June 29.—Dorothy Round, England's 27-year-old top ranking player, pounded Helen Jacobs out of the all-England tennis championships today and left blonde Alice Marble to carry on the fight for the title America has captured eight times in the last ten years.

In as stunning an upset as this ancient tennis center ever has witnessed, Miss Round, daughter of an English clergyman, eliminated Miss Jacobs, the defending champion, 6-4, 6-2, and joined Miss Marble, the American titleholder; Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, hard-hitting Polish girl, and Rene Mathieu, of France, in the semifinals.

It was a day of form reversals but Miss Round's unexpected triumph was by far the greatest. The English girl, who soon will be married to Dr. Douglas L. Little, held the Wimbledon championship in 1934 but her play had fallen off so badly that she was seeded only seventh for the current tournament.

Against Miss Jacobs, however, she hit the peak of her form and the comely Berkeley, Calif., girl never had a chance. Miss Jacobs held a 4-2 lead in the first set when the English star began an unsteppable rush. She ran through the next four games in a row for the set and then held a 4-1 advantage in the third set. The champion fought back gamely, but shook her head in desperation as Miss Round ran her all over the court and then dropped tantalizing shots over the net for winners.

Miss Marble, seeded fifth, surprised the capacity center court gallery of 15,000 by eliminating the second seeded German star, Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, who now makes her home in Denmark. This match, one of the hardest fought of the championships, went three sets before the American won at 7—5, 2—6, 6—3.

The long-legged German, once a cross-country runner, was only 2 points away from winning the first set, but Miss Marble broke her service and ran out the set in the twelfth game. After Mme. Sperling had taken the second set with the loss of only two games and had gained a 3-0 lead in the third, it looked as though the American champion was through. But she hit an unbeatable streak and reeled off the next six games in succession for the match. A sizzling backhander from the German's racquet which sailed over the baseline gave Miss Marble the deciding point in the deuced ninth game and ended the match.

Mlle. Jedrzejowska, who has beaten Miss Jacobs once and Miss Marble twice this year, had an easy passage into the semifinals, trouncing Peggy Scriven, of England, 6—1, 6—2. Mme. Mathieu, seeded sixth, routed the Chilean ace, Anita Lizana, 6—3, 6—3.

Tomorrow's program will be topped by the men's semifinals, in which Don Budge, principal American hope and favorite for the title relinquished by Fred Perry, battles his compatriot, Frankie Parker, while Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, of Germany, opposes Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, of England.

Budge figured on the winning side in two doubles matches during the day. He and his Davis Cup mate, Gene Mako, reached the semifinals of men's doubles with a 6—4, 6—4, 10—8 triumph over the Frenchmen, Christian Boussus and Yvon Petra.

Budge later partnered Miss Marble in an easy 6—1 victory over Jacques Brugnon, of France, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and New York.

Von Cramm and Heinrich Henkel, the German Davis Cup duo, outlasted Norman G. Farquharson and Vernon G. Kirby, of South Africa, 6—3, 9—6, 2—6, 7—5, 6—1, but only Henkel's play saved the Teutons. Von Cramm was missing many shots and he'll have to be better tomorrow if he hopes to whip Austin in the singles.

Teams With Dudley In Thrilling Victory

By Scotty Reston,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Southport, England, June 29.—America's professional golfers, blown out of many a British championship in the past, stood up bravely today in the face of as wild a wind as ever blew in off the Irish Sea to take a 2½ to 1½ lead over Great Britain in defense of the Ryder Cup.

Playing a foreign type of game, Scotch foursomes, and with the foreign, smaller ball, in a land where they never before have won the cup, the U. S. players beat the British at their own windy game. They gained their single-point advantage by virtue of the most astonishing victory in the recent history of British golf.

The hero of this victory was 25-year-old Byron Nelson, the slim former Texas railroad clerk, whose name stands for all that's poetic and valorous in British hearts and whose deeds today added glory to the name.

The youngster, paired with veteran Ed Dudley, beat the British "Invincibles," Henry Cotton and Alf Padgham, by 4 and 2.

"Worth Three Points."

The wizened old scorekeeper posted only a single American point for this victory, but non-playing Capt. Walter Hagen, beaming up at the board en route to his hotel tonight, remarked: "That one's worth at least three points."

The board also showed that Ralph Guldahl and Tony Manero, U. S. Open champions of this year and last, had defeated Arthur Lacey and William J. Cox, 2 and 1; that Gene Sarazen and Denny Shute, America's team of former British Open champions, had finished all even with Charles A. Whitcombe, veteran British captain, and his young partner, David Rees, and that Britain's Percy Allis and Richard Burton had won by 2 and 1 over Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta, the oft-teamed U. S. pair that has won the international four-ball title three years in a row.

In the final day's play tomorrow eight 36-hole singles matches will be contested. Hagen pulled Revolta out of the American lineup to make room for Slammin' Sam Snead, the prize rookie who was an unhappy spectator today. Horton Smith, tenth member of the cup-defending squad, also was to have seen action tomorrow, but asked to remain on the sidelines because of an ailing back.

Meanwhile the British, because of Cotton's defeat today, dropped the man who is generally conceded to be the country's outstanding pro to the No. 4 position for the singles. The pairings for tomorrow:

Guldahl vs. Padgham, Shute vs. Sam King, Nelson vs. Rees, Manero vs. Cotton, Sarazen vs. Alliss, Snead vs. Burton, Dudley vs. Alf Perry, British Open champion two years ago, and Picard vs. Lacey.

When Hagen first announced that he was sending Nelson and Dudley against Cotton and Padgham, the British press shouted that he was "sacrificing" them and "conceding" one point to Britain's pair.

But Nelson, who says he never remembers having seen either Cotton or Padgham back home in Texas, and Dudley were a bit too indigestible for the lions.

American Duo Lags.

At no time during the first round were the Americans in the lead. Cotton and Padgham, a howling but admirably fair crowd of 2,000 storming at their heels, won two of the first three holes in the morning and still held this advantage through the fifteenth.

But at Southport and Ainsdale's famous sixteenth, the "Gumbley's," the tide of the battle turned. The Americans won this one with a birdie 4, squared the match at the seventeenth with a par and finished the round all even.

In the afternoon the Americans stepped out, played the first five holes in one under par, won four of them and took command right there. After winning the next hole, the British pair had a chance for second life on the twenty-fifth, but Padgham missed an 18-inch putt.

The match ended, appropriately enough, at "Gumbley's," which is world famous because of the 30-foot bunker, faced with black railroad ties, which stretches clear across the fairway. Dormie three at this point, the Americans cleared the bunker with two inspired shots as the great Cotton hit a whistling iron full into the black face of the bunker, then watched the ball drop back in the sand.

Barney Welsh Advances in City Tourney

Barney Welsh, defending champion, became the first player to reach the fifth round of the District of Columbia Tennis Championship at the Columbia Country Club yesterday when he swept through two matches without dropping a single game.

Welsh, four times winner, eliminated Doyle Royal, clever junior player, in his third round match, 6—0, 6—0, then defeated J. B. Burnside, in the fourth round by an identical score. He is the lone player in the fifth round.

Turnesa Wins Medal; Georgetown Fourth in Collegiate Golf Tourney

Two Hoyas Qualify for Match Play

Johnson, Pettijohn Still in Running; Medal Score Is 146.

By Claire Burcky.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Oakmont, Pa., June 29.—Georgetown University's bid for a team title in the national intercollegiate golf championships was buried in the grooved sand traps of Oakmont Country Club today, but Charles Pettijohn and Harvey Johnson kept alive Hoya hopes in the individual championship by qualifying for the first match play round tomorrow.

The best the quartet of Pettijohn, Johnson, Bill Detweiler and Maury Nee could accomplish was an aggregate of 654, 10 strokes back of the winning Princeton University combination.

Pettijohn scored a 78 today for 157 to lead the Hoyas. Johnson added another 81 for 162. Detweiler played an 85 for 167 and Nee, whose 78 was among the first-round leaders, fell back to 90 and 168.

88 Proves Fatal.

Princeton's four-man squad won the team championship with a 644 total. Jim Marks led the Tigers with 158. The others were R. B. Parker, 160; L. W. Maxwell, 162, and R. J. Riddle, 164. Notre Dame was second with 649, Northwestern third with 652 and Georgetown, first-day leader, fourth with 654.

By a strange coincidence, Nee's collapse today was accompanied by a spectacular recovery by Albert Mailhes, his Notre Dame playing partner. Hopelessly lost yesterday with a 90, Mailhes battled back with a 75 today as the Hoya grid star lost control of his irons and soared to 90. Nee three and four putted several greens on the out nine and couldn't hit the greens with his approaches on the home stretch.

Pettijohn's 78 gave him a temporary lead, but it later was beaten by Willie Turnesa, of Holy Cross, who won the qualifying medal with rounds of 75, 71—146. Bobby Jacobson, of Dartmouth; Paul Leslie, of Louisiana State; Sid Richardson, of Northwestern, and S. Lewis Johnson, jr., of Charleston.

Johnson narrowly missed a sudden-death playoff. Chuck Wilcox, of Cornell, and Will Smith, of Georgia Tech, tied at 163, had to go two extra holes to decide the thirty-second place in the match play.

Pettijohn meets Bob Fraser, Creighton, Missouri Valley Conference champion; Johnson plays R. B. (Burt) Parker, Princeton, Pittsburgh boy, 1933 runner-up West Penn Amateur and 1936 runner-up Pennsylvania Amateur. Both Hoyas in lower bracket. If successful, will play each other in third round.

It took a youngster reared in professional environment—smiling Willie Turnesa of Holy Cross—to win the national intercollegiate golf championship's 36-hole qualifying round medal with a 146 total.

Just Misses Record.

Dressed in a sporty brown ensemble, the junior class student drove straight and long, lined his irons on the pins and putted with a magnetic wand to score a 71 this afternoon, hand par its only licking and grab medalist honors from boyish Bobby Jacobson of Dartmouth by three shots.

The Hanover sharpshooter fired a par 72 for a 149 and finished just as Turnesa reached the ninth hole in even par stride. Willie, who learned the game from four professional brothers, knew he had to shoot a 37 to tie. So, he promptly went out and shot a 34, for a 71, to go with his opening day's 75.

Only a pair of deceitful traps at the fifteenth and seventeenth kept Turnesa from setting a new competitive course record here, a 69 that would have bettered professional Henry Picard's 70 in the National Open two years ago.

Yanks Down Macks, 3 to 2 On Pinch-Hit

Ruffing's Infield Blow Scores Powell With Winning Run.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 29. — After blasting out homers to keep pace with the Athletics, the New York Yankees fell back on a pinch single by Red Ruffing to pull out a 3-to-2 decision in the ninth inning today.

An infield hit by Ruffing, batting for Spurgeon Chandler, sent Jake Powell home with the deciding tally after George Selkirk had hit his eleventh home run in the third and Bill Dickey his eleventh in the fifth. Ruffing was first called out by Umpire Summers. The Yanks protested and the decision was reversed.

Cleveland, June 29.—Sammy Hale's home run led a 13-hit attack on Elon Hogsett and Jack Knott today to bring the Cleveland Indians form behind and defeat the St. Louis Browns in the first of a three-game series, 7 to 5.

Second Baseman Hale smashed one of Hogsett's southpaw offerings at the height of a sixth inning rally which netted the tribe four runs. Julius Solters and Lyn Lary contributed doubles to the bombardment. The Indians added three in the seventh, with Hale and Bruce Campbell hitting doubles.

F. C. A. Netmen Win In Government Play

The Farm Credit Administration tennis team won its fifteenth series of the present running of the Government League yesterday by defeating the Veterans' Administration on the Monument courts, 4—1.

After the No. 1 team of the FCA, Henry Sweeney and Charles Lewis, had bowed to Manuel Evana and Felix Silva, 6—4, 7—5, the other four teams of the winning squad swept through the remaining matches, winning each impressively.

Bees Down Dodgers, 1-0 In Overtime

Fette Wins Ninth Game, Also Bats in Winning Run With Single.

Boston, June 29 (AP).—Lou Fette, 30-year-old rookie right-hander pitched and batted the Boston Bees to a 12-inning shutout victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers today for his ninth victory of the season. The score was 1 to 0.

For eleven innings, Fette and Max Butcher were locked in a pitching duel. In the third extra frame, Elbie Fletcher led off with a single and moved up a notch on Al Lopez' sacrifice. Then Fette lined a hit over Lavagetto's head for the only score of the game.

Doubles Final Listed Today at Edgemoor

The doubles final of the Grand National Tennis tournament will be played this afternoon at the Edgemoor courts, with the team of Bill Howard and Dooley Mitchell meeting Hugh Lynch and Lieut. Dolf Muelheisen at 3:30 for the championship.

Originally scheduled for this past Sunday, it was postponed until this coming Saturday before being set for today, when the singles match was rained out twice over last week and forcing the committee to schedule that match between Dooley Mitchell and Yelverton Garnett for Saturday.

Mid-Atlantic Junior Slated At Baltimore

The District stars will be cofavored for the title, but Baltimore will be represented by Nathan Kaufman, Johnny Farrell and W. W. Waxter, jr., all of whom are capable of winning.

Post entries will be accepted up to 10:15 at the Hillendale course. Shea played a practice round yesterday and scored three successive birdies on the second nine.

Washington's starting times include Jack Wade, Congressional, with Robert Goldman, of Suburban, at 9:50; Bobby Brownell with Nathan Kaufman, of Suburban, at 10 a. m., and Billy Shea with Johnny Farrell, of Hillendale, at 10:10.

Georgetown Prep Trio Trails in Eastern Play

Greenwich, Conn., June 29.—Eddie Foy, of the famous Foy family, and the Lawrenceville School led the individual and team play in the Eastern interscholastics, started with a qualifying round here today.

Georgetown Prep, of Washington, D. C., had three entries, Jack Brayer, 48, 41—89; Kenneth Cummings, 49, 49—98, and Paul Stewart, 57, 58—115.

Paris Prince Wins.

Late Sports News in Brief

Ardmore, Pa.—A Pennsylvania amateur and two professionals from Ohio and California tied today for the leadership at the half-way mark of the Pennsylvania State Open Golf championship. Each posted a 36-hole total of 146.

The amateur, Ted Johnston, 1930 Philadelphia amateur champion, shot a 72 to lead the field until late in the day, when Tony Penna, of Dayton, posted a 71 and Willie Goggin, of San Francisco, a 72, to tie for the top. Goggin missed a 2-foot putt.

• • • •

Louisville, Ky.—John McDiarmid, Princeton professor, who is seeded No. 1, advanced to the third round, while other seeded performers in the men's singles of the Kentucky State Tenis tournament scored first and second round victories today.

• • • •

Brookville, Ind.—More than 1,200 baseball fans from Brookville will go to Cincinnati tomorrow night to honor Harold ("Pie") Traynor, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, as the Pirates engage in a night game with the Reds.

• • • •

Chicago.—Frankie Sarillo, hard-hitting welterweight, scored a six-round "decision" victory tonight over Chester Rudr, of Los Angeles, in a scheduled ten-round bout at Western Stadium.

• • • •

Toledo, Ohio.—Dr. Hugh M. Parshall, of Urbana, Ohio, scored his first victory of the year in the grand circuit here tonight when he put over Promoter, a bay colt by Protector, in straight heats in the 2-year-old trot.

Junior Davis Cup Men in Competition

Washington's Junior Davis Cup squad engages in its first intercity match this afternoon when the Baltimore team is met on the Army-Navy Country Club courts. Play is scheduled to begin at 2 p. m.

Ten players between the ages of 15 and 20 have been selected by the committee, which is headed by Maj. C. W. Christenberry, to represent the District in the local team's first organized competition.

Although the committee has had its tentative selection of players on paper for several months and a squad of prospects worked out with older, experienced players of this city last month, today's play will give the committee its first opportunity to observe how the local boys stack up against competition from other sections.

Harry Heffner, tenth ranking junior player of the country, who is the No. 1 man of the squad, will meet Henry Barclay. Baltimore champion, in the feature match of the series. Other players who comprise the District team, in the order which they are rated, include: Dave Johnsen, Billy Turner, Harry March, Charles Channing, Jack Hoyt, Byddt Adair, Doyle Royal, DeWitt Smith.

Sharkey and Bogart Lead Favorites Into D. C. Junior Semifinals

This Morning

Bashful Buck Eager to Face Ferrell.

By Shirley Povich.

"If they want to see that Wes Ferrell pitch, tell the folks to come early—'cause he may not be in there very long."

The author of that crack was—you guessed it—Bashful Buck Newsom, whose own pitching will never lack for at least one admirer as long as Buck Newsom, personally, can draw a breath.

POVICH.

He was talking, of course, about today's scheduled pitching duel between himself and Ferrell, which will be the first head-on meeting of the two right-handers ever since they exchanged uniforms in that Washington-Boston trade three weeks ago.

Bashful Buck was around visiting his old pals in the Washington dressing room yesterday before the game—a powerful figure of a man in that new Boston Red Sox uniform he acquired in the deal. There was evidence that he had acquired a bit more of a strut, too.

There was pretty good reason for that, though. Those four straight wins he has pitched for the Boston team without a defeat was nice pitching and Bashful Buck was never the one to overlook nice pitching specially if it was nice pitching by Newsom.

* * * *

"I ain't got nothing against Wes Ferrell—that is I didn't have until I saw in the paper this morning that he said he was a better pitcher than 'that Buck Newsom.'" Bashful Buck was saying. "He's got to prove that. I don't think he is. Up in Boston they'd have something to say about that."

* * * *

Buck was only half kidding. There was a kind of a glint in his eye—not a gleam—and it was pretty evident that he wanted to win that game today, "just to show a few people," as he said.

* * * *

"Them Washington fans'll probably give me the works put there, I guess, but it's okay with me. I've been booed here before. It won't be any new experience, I can tell you. And the more they dislike me the better I'll be liking it 'cause I'll be giving 'em something they won't like." And Newsom laughed with a haw-haw laugh.

* * * *

He's a card—that Newsom. He hung around the Boston dressing room until he was certain the game had started and then he made the grand entrance on the field—alone—as the first Boston player was standing at bat. Newsom hadn't miscalculated.

* * * *

* * * *

But Bashful Buck wasn't content with that exhibition. Pausing behind Umpire in Chief McGowan, he took off his hat, bowed from the waist in mock thanks and with a wide sweep of his arm eloquently directed the booing fans to the place he was consigning 'em, if you know what I mean.

* * * *

And he paused again, too, before he reached the dugout, to hold up four fingers just to remind his fine-feathered friends in Washington that the Great Newsom had won four in a row since he left the Nats.

* * * *

And when Arch McDonald struck up the Nats' theme song in the late innings, Newsom grabbed a bat in the dugout and, for all the crowd to see, he pantomimed "They Cut Down the Old Pine Tree," ending his performance with his fingers tightly clasping his nose in complete derision.

* * * *

Cheerfully admitting that he had made that crack about being "a better pitcher than Buck Newsom," but not very much agitated otherwise about his duel today with Newsom, Wes Ferrell said he figured he could beat Newsom most any time he pitched.

* * * *

"I haven't pitched against that guy since last summer down here when he was working for Washington and I was working for the Red Sox," said Ferrell. "Seems to me I did pretty good against him that day. I forget what the score was, but I remember I clocked two home runs off Newsom myself. Seems like he didn't have a very good day."

In Short——

Manager Joe Cronin made it a point yesterday to deny that he had credited the Red Sox's recent success—11 victories in their last 13 games—to the fact that Catcher Rick Ferrell had been traded by his club . . . "That's silly," said Cronin . . . "I was misquoted, and I'm sorry for Rick's sake that the story was printed . . . I never made any such statement" . . . Outfielder Ben Chapman, who, like Newsom, is a huge favorite with Boston fans, has been hitting .390 since he joined the Red Sox . . . Chapman, who, when with Washington, lived down the reputation that he was a hard player for a manager to handle, is elated at the trade . . . Newsom's popularity in Boston was attested the other day when he got Fenway Park's greatest ovation of the season after being batted out of the box . . . Buck said it was a cryin' shame that Johnny Stone was left off the American League all-star team . . . "He's the best ball player on the Washington Club, Stony is," said Buck . . . "Howinell do they pick these all-star teams, anyway?"

Jim Stevens, Meyer Enter Semi-finals

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Meyer was forced to the final green in his match with young Earl Skinker, of Columbia, but parred the hole for a 2-up victory after winning 7 and 6 in the morning. Sharkey finished a total of 8 up in his twin wins. Bogart, playing the while Stevens, representing the Army and Navy Club in a dark horse role, finished 13 up over two opponents.

In his morning match with Fred Tita of Columbia, Bogart was seven over par for the 16 holes of the match, but fired a par 35 in the afternoon against Dave Springer, of Beaver Dam for a 5 up lead and closed the match on the thirteenth, 2 over par.

Sharkey was several over par in defeating Ed Bodnar and Tom Hanley, the latter giving the co-medalist a scare by squaring the match on the thirteenth but Sharkey fired two pars and a birdie on the next three holes for a decisive lead.

Meyer was four over par in his morning match, against George Foster, winning 7 and 6 after turning 5 up, but saw a 4 up lead against cotton-headed Skinker fade to one hole on the twelfth and again on the seventeenth but his final hole par won the match.

Stevens, holding respective leads of 6 up and 4 up at the turn of his matches against Frank Loftus and Bob Donohue, was in the van throughout. He meets Sharkey this morning in a semi-final encounter at 9:05 while Bogart and Meyer clash in the feature five minutes earlier. The winner will clash at 12:30 for the crown held by Bobby Brownell, who passed the 17 year age limit, and the Albert R. MacKenzie trophy.

Sharkey and Bogart will play off for the medal Thursday at 10 a. m. They tied at 75.

Engle May Buy Chattanooga Franchise From Washington

Charlotte, N. C., June 29.—Joe Engel, president of the Washington-owned Charlotte ball club, is considering the purchase of the local club and the Chattanooga Club of the Southern Association from Washington, he revealed here tonight.

Informed that rumors of such a deal were prevalent in Chattanooga, Joe admitted there was a possibility that it might go through.

"Some business men in Chattanooga have approached me about buying the Chattanooga Club," he said, "and if they are willing to go in with me, I will buy it. The deal also would include the Charlotte Club."

Engel said he had discussed the proposition with Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Club, and the latter said he would dispose of the properties to him.

Engel, long famed as a colorful baseball promoter, said that if he bought two clubs it would mean he would sever his connection with the Washington organization. For years Engel has been chief scout and handy man for Washington and now heads its chain system, Chattanooga and Charlotte being the principal members of the chain.

Made president of the Hornets when Washington took over the local Piedmont franchise at the beginning of the season, Engel has hoped to spend most of his time here. However, so far this season he has been in Charlotte infrequently and Zinn Beck, general manager, has been in direct charge.

Clarke C. Griffith admitted last night that on his recent visit to Chattanooga he had expressed his willingness to sell the Washington Club's Southern League franchise to Chattanooga interests.

"I told them I would not stand in the way of any attempt by home town men to control the Chattanooga Club," said Griffith, "but as yet I have received no offers. I know of no movement to buy the club."

For the past several years the Chattanooga team has been a losing venture for the Washington Club, with scanty attendance seriously affecting the gate receipts.

This year, a Chattanooga newspaper sponsored a movement to buy out Griffith and install as the head of the Chattanooga team Joe Engel, who formerly operated the club for Griffith. Engel has never broached to him the matter of taking over the club, said the Nats' owner.

Yates Re-elected Navy Crew Captain

Annapolis, Md., June 29 (AP).—Midshipman A. B. Yates, jr., Norfolk, Va., again will captain the Navy varsity crew in 1938, it was announced today at the Naval Academy.

Yates, 22 years old, is 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 186 pounds. He rows the No. 6 oar in the varsity shell.

Speed Marks Broken.

Westbury, N. Y., June 29 (AP).—Bernd Rosemeyer, German automobile speed king, and his teammate, Ernst Dglius, surpassed every listed American record for speedway racing today. Rosemeyer was officially timed at 158.3 miles per hour in a tune-up spin in preparation for Saturday's George Vanderbilt Cup race on the Roosevelt Speedway. Delius was clocked at 154 M. P. H.

Chisox Strengthen Their Hold On Second Place, Beat Tigers

Chicago, June 29.—Chicago's White Sox increased their margin over Detroit in the tussle for second place in the American League to two full games today by whipping the Tigers, 3-to-2, behind Monty Stratton's brilliant three-hit pitching.

The gangling Sox right-hander pitched six perfect innings in scoring his ninth victory of the season, while his mates combined a blunder by Eldon Auker, the Tigers' submarine-baller, with just enough hits to get the decision. Stratton has lost four games.

Chicago started the scoring in the fourth when Auker, who allowed only six hits, committed his "boner." Rip Radcliff doubled and reached third when Rudy York dropped Auker's throw on Mike Kreevich's attempted sacrifice.

Eligibility Rules Adopted by Loops

Players in weekday sandlot leagues not qualified for second-half series will be permitted to do so in the second half under an arrangement worked out last night at a joint meeting. Each player must participate in two games to attain eligibility.

Pepco, league champion last year, won the first half before most of the clubs completed their first-half schedules. Team managers pointed out that inasmuch as they had not completed their first-half schedules, Pepco's triumph automatically would deny them the opportunity of qualifying players in the last two games.

30 Minutes After the Game

—you're ready for KISSES
if you've smoked a Vintage Cigar
New scientific discoveries have shown that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is exceptionally low in the substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor.
White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not factory processing—made this tobacco very mild, mellow.
We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for use in White Owls.
Put White Owls in your line-up. You'll make a hit with the ladies every time.

The Metallic Nose Knows
Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

Trixie Lass Is Feature Race Victor

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 29.—Trixie Lass, owned by A. E. Pierce and ridden by Sammy Palumbo, drew out through the stretch to win the Pat Beacon Purse, best offering on the Tuesday program here this afternoon by four lengths.

Trixie Lass paid $5.60 and ran the sprint in 1:21 1-5, excellent time over the slow racing slip, still drying out from the Sunday showers and drenched just before the third race by another thunderstorm that served to cool the hot afternoon for the 4,000 present.

Trixie Lass and Silver Arch cut out the running in the sprint, that attracted six starters, but after running a half mile Palumbo let out a notch and the filly just walked away. Jadaan passed the leg-weary Silver Arch in the stretch but could not menace the winner.

R. Root, who is steadily overtaking Sammy Palumbo for the leading riding honors of the meeting, booted Royal Business home in the initial event, a half length in front of Caidon, with Muddler taking third money. Caidon started out to make a runaway affair of the test by jumping out to a long early lead, but had little left when the real test came and just missed by half a length. Royal Business rewarded with a $6.20 mutuel and ran the 4½ furlongs in 0:52 1-5.

A cheap band of platers competed in the second number and it resulted in a victory for Flamingo Stable's Envious. With Root in the saddle the 3-year-old daughter of Registrar—Bountiful lasted to gain a head decision over Canter Belle. Sea Charmer lasted to save third money. Envious covered the 4½ furlongs in 0:52 2-5 and paid an even $7. It marked a double for Jockey Root.

Little Percy, with the unfashionable C. F. Simpson up, was a driving winner of the third race, defeating Pageantry by two lengths. Gemwick easily bested Running Water for the small change.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, SLOW.

FIRST RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:40½. Off at 2:43½. Winner, E. Johnston's b. f. (2), by Sun Meadow—Pretty Business. Trained by O. F. Kent. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:52 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
ROYAL BUSINESS	(Root)	109	3	4²	2¹	1½	$2.10
CAIDON	(Garrett)	112	1	1½	1²	2¾	3.00
MUDDLER	(Laurin)	110½	2	5h	3½	3²	4.80
BROOM TOUR	(Simpson)	112	7	2	3¹	4¹	24.60
SCOUT ALLOW	(Palumbo)	109	5	6⁴	5½	5¹	2.80
WORTH OWNING	(Cusimano)	112	2	7	6	6	152.60
CROIX DE TOUR	(Gaither)	109	4	5	7²	7¹	26.20
ROVING EYE	(Martinez)	112	1	4	3h	6⁴	8	30.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL BUSINESS, $8.20, $3.20, $3.00; CAIDON, $4.00, $3.00; MUDDLER, $3.40.

ROYAL BUSINESS, held off the pace for a quarter mile, came around leader on stretch turn, and was going away at the finish. CAIDON, off in front, opened up a nice lead on the turn and just failed to last. MUDDLER, off last, took the overland route all the way and made up a lot of ground. BROOM TOUR forced the pace for a quarter, appeared to have been bothered, and never recovered. ROVING EYE had early speed.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:09. Off at 3:10. Winner, Flamingo Stables' b. f. (3), by Registrar—Bountiful. Trained by W. C. Kennedy. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:52 2-5.

ENVIOUS	(Root)	104	7	2	3²	2½	1h	$2.50
CANTER BELLE	(Sherry)	106	4	7	5½	4³	2¹	5.60
SEA CHARMER	(Palumbo)	109	1	1	1¹	1½	2½	1.00
MISS WRACK	(Garrett)	104	5	3	1h	2½	4³	10.40
GLOSS	(Dubost)	104	6	5	7⁴	7⁴	5h	52.00
LEW DUNLIN	(Gaither)	113	2	6	4h	5⁶	6¹	13.70
JUSTA TOWN	(Lauch)	113	3	4	6½	6¹	7⁴	70.00
PHILIPPI META	(Cusimano)	108½	3	8	8	8	8	75.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENVIOUS, $7.00, $3.20, $2.40; CANTER BELLE, $5.20, $3.80; SEA CHARMER, $2.80.

ENVIOUS, close up all the way, came to the outside and just beat CANTER BELLE in stretch drive. The latter, off poorly, saved ground on the rail and just missed. SEA CHARMER alternated in setting and forcing the pace, but tired in the late stretch. MISS WRACK showed good early speed. The others were not contenders.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:35½. Winner, P. H. Fauleoner's b. g. (3), by Playfellow—Golden Green. Trained by C. H. Fitzgerald. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:19 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

LAPIS	(Tryon)	107	4	1	8	8	8	8	17.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE PERCY, $7.80, $4.00, $4.00; PAGEANTRY, $3.40, $3.40; GEMWICK, $7.50.

LITTLE PERCY, slow to reach best stride, circled horses coming into stretch, appeared to have bothered GEMWICK, and won going away. PAGEANTRY, shuffled back going to first turn, got to the front on backstretch, but could not resist winner. GEMWICK, close up all the way, was running well when bothered. RUNNING WATER, off last, saved a lot of ground and showed a good effort. OAKHURST had early speed, as did ROCK MISS.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $36.60.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:01½. Off at 4:03½. Winner, B. Huyett's ch. g. (4), by Runantell—Star of Thule. Trained by H. L. Smith. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:28.

NO MISTAKE	(Garrett)	114	1	6	8	8	8	8	11.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TELL IT, $21.40, $9.40, $5.00; HALLOO, $7.40, $3.60; PACK AWAY, $3.80.

TELL IT, off in front, was outrun for a quarter, took command on backstretch, opened a nice lead and won easily. HALLOO lost ground all the way, dropped back while racing wide at stretch turn and came again in final sixteenth. PACK AWAY, close up all the way, could not better his position. SITTING PRETTY came from way back and showed a good effort. CHESSIE showed good early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:28½. Off at 4:32½. Winner, A. E. Pierce's ch. f. (4), by Petee Wrack—Morning. Trained by G. Russell. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:21 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRENE'S BOB, $5.20, $3.60, $2.60; SUN BELLE, $3.80, $2.80; ALAHAD, $5.20.

IRENE'S BOB went to the front at the break, opened up a nice lead while still in hand, and won as rider pleased. SUN BELLE pressed the pace of the winner all the way, but was not good enough. ALAHAD was close up all the way, but never threatened. CHIEF HOLLIS ran an even race. The others were never contenders.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:24½. Off at 5:36. Winner, S. G. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HUPPY, $17.40, $7.20, $3.60; FLAGEOLET, $5.40, $3.60; MISS CATALAN, $3.00.

HUPPY, close to the leaders all the way, responded well when called upon and just got up to win. FLAGEOLET, rated along in front, held on well, but could not resist winner. MISS CATALAN, far back in the early running, saved ground on the inside and was running well at the end. LADY BEACON was close up all the way, but was not there when called upon. LA MARQUISE had early speed. The others were outrun.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al,

While it has been rumored that the present meeting would be extended a week, it was learned today that the regular session will close as scheduled on July 5. However, action will be resumed here on July 14 when the horse show meeting opens for a four-day program. Conflicting with Delaware Park is only mildly affecting Charles Town. While the Wilmington track is having trouble filling entries, this plant has its usual waiting list of horses ready to run. Baltimore seems to have shifted its support to Delaware, but only a few Washingtonians are leaving Union Station for Wilmington in contrast to the usual crowded Charles Town special. The fact that most betters are familiar with the West Virginia horses and the fact that the trip is much more economical has kept Charles Town in favor. While Charles Town's volume of business this year has been greater than that of the 1936 summer meeting, profits for this year will be less, due to the increase in purse money.

BILL.

First race—Schley Buck seems nicely placed in the day's opening event. Needs only the right ride to win here. Cats Craddle is a fair sort and should give the top one a run for the chief money. Good Wine to take care of the others.

Second race—Johnny Bane deserves the call in a field of this caliber. Would take down the set of brackets if given the right handling. Crossing Over shapes up well and should be a keen factor. Morely Firth will be hard to keep out of the money.

Third race—Adriatic has worked well and appears to have the qualifications necessary to score in a field of this brand. Hereward and Aella to complete the money picture.

Fourth race—Topsie H promises to do a lot of running in this company. I see no reason for mistakes. Whiskora is due respect. Spear may be slightly better than generally rated.

Fifth race—Hard Chase earns oats operating with such as these. Needs only to run back to best races. Soupcon appears headed for the place award. Radial for the show end.

Sixth race—This looks like the right spot for Red Label. May go to the front in this field and never be headed. Floslida and Jadaan will be ready if the top one has any mishaps.

Seventh race—Poppyman and Penny should battle it out in this event. Both are fit and ready. Jim Brown will be hard to crowd out of the money.

Best bet—Red Label.

Wheat Makes Highest Flight In 15 Years

Extreme Jump of 8⅝ Cents Reflects Disastrous Crop Damage.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 29.—Soaring suddenly 8⅝ cents, the highest flight of any one day in 15 years, the Liverpool wheat market led new worldwide upturns of wheat values today.

In Chicago, Winnipeg and other North American grain centers, wheat prices skyrocketed around 5 cents, the immediate extreme permissible limit allowed by trade rules this side of the Atlantic. The jump of wheat prices here amounted to about 10 cents for the past 48 hours.

Drought disaster reported as on a mammoth scale in Canadian wheat crops, together with advices of swift increase of black rust damage in United States winter wheat States, formed the basis of excited buying that accompanied the sensational upshoot of quotations. Season peak price records were smashed right and left.

Crude Oil Output Again Nears Record

New York, June 29 (AP).—Crude oil production turned up in the week ended June 26, the daily flow increasing 18,650 barrels to within a fraction of the record peak established a month ago.

Output totaled 3,529,600 barrels daily. The weekly summary of the American Petroleum Institute indicated today, the entire upturn occurring east of California.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively,
A Special Correspondent.

Steel, Rail and Oil Shares Show Firmness; Bonds Irregular; Wheat Strong.

New York, June 29.—Stocks grew firmer on a turnover of 600,000 shares and commodities hardened. Nothing in particular seemed to affect stock market sentiment, but traders probably have had their fill of bearishness. September wheat closed 2⅜ cents higher at 122⅜ cents a bushel.

While some of the industrial news was unfavorable, including as it did further reports of violence, interest in the financial district was centered largely in the French financial developments. Suspension of gold payments, closing of the markets and closing the border to capital exports by France at least had the merit of bringing no surprise. The steady flight of the franc since the advent of the Blum government, and which grew into a near panic with the threats of financial dictatorship, involving a capital levy, just before the recent shift in the French Cabinet had made some action inevitable.

Holding Gold.

The French gold supply had fallen close to the amount generally regarded as the minimum for a war chest, the exchange control fund had run out of gold, and the only alternative to a fresh and heavy requisition on the Bank of France for gold was abandonment of the attempt to keep up the price of the franc. Markets were closed pending new plans for handling the matter. When the franc was devalued last year, after several years of combatting floating currencies in other countries with deflation in France, the general view was that France had waited too long, that most of the advantages hoped from devaluation had been lost.

Whether the cut in the franc was deep enough at the time is a question, but probably the effort to stabilize at the lower level would have succeeded had it not been for a new political element. The victories of the Front Populaire, bringing into power a government pledged to copy our own New Deal, greatly to increase public expenditure and to institute a series of social reforms having for their object the improvement of labor's position and the squeezing of capital, gave capital a fresh scare. The government apparently gambled on enough pick-up in business to provide new revenue sufficient to carry the ambitious program of public works, higher wages and shorter hours, and the like.

Further Devaluation.

Business had a temporary revival, but did not improve as much as expected, largely because confidence was low in the new Socialist government. Instead of returning to France, capital continued to leave, increasing the difficulties of the government in borrowing money and handicapping business enterprise, which was further crippled by rapidly rising costs. It is now expected here that the franc will again be officially devalued, probably around 4 cents to the franc, and that thereafter a new effort will be made to stabilize on gold, in conjunction with the exchange control in Great Britain and this country.

The fundamental trouble in France is not that the franc is overvalued but that confidence has been hurt by the ever-mounting government fiscal deficit and the antagonism toward capital of the Socialist and Communist elements. Removal of threats to capital and a determination to balance the budget, partly with reduced expenditures, probably would repatriate French capital. Meanwhile, talk is heard of summary measures to force capital to return (presumably for confiscation), of punishment for speculators and of a financial dictatorship.

It can only be hoped that France will avoid the German experiment and that enough assurances will be given capital to promote its repatriation. France has a talent for surviving financial crices, but until this one disappears the threat to stability of other currencies and to revivling foreign trade will do world economy no good.

Supplying Francs.

Prepared as they were for the French development, the effect on securities markets on this side was scarcely noticeable. Opening prices were mostly slightly lower, as they have been for weeks, but improvement followed and was held during the greater part of the day. Government bonds were down at the opening, but grew firmer. Trading in London was held down by the closing of the Paris bourse. But sentiment on the other side was moderately cheerful.

No regular market was quoted in French francs, but the currency was available at yesterday's price, the supply secured by banks here from the British equalization fund. The dollar was firm against sterling and other foreign currencies. It is quite evident that the Treasury intends to go far in helping the French out of their difficulties. The eagerness which Secretary Morgenthau shows in making a statement, immediately after the official French declaration, indicates that.

Mergers.

Mergers of consequence may be a long distance away in the railroad field, but a great many are said to be near in Wall Street brokerage houses. Many firms it is said are now operating in the red, and they see consolidation as the only solution, especially on the long view. Most brokers see several weeks of quiet markets ahead, and even the most optimistic think anything approaching boom conditions may well be a year or two off. A few weeks of two or three million-share day markets would lift the spirit of individualism, but the feeling is growing that on long account brokerage house facilities are redundant.

Bank Earnings.

Bank statements expected to be published late this week and early next week in response to national and State calls for condition probably will show rising earnings. Some institutions report a good increase in loans, and the interest rate has been rising. This week's Treasury discount bill rate again was higher, and the changes, small though they are, mean much to the banks which buy large amounts of the bills.

unable to learn how to play, his energy drove him on, even after his retirement. He traveled widely, not for the sake of travel, but to delve into ramifications of international finance.

He became an authority on war debts. He forsaw "utter financial collapse" unless foreign countries established something akin to the United States' Federal Reserve system.

He termed Mr. Roosevelt's gold purchasing plan "a boon to mankind," and asserted the Nation could not return to the old order.

Illinois and Chicago Universities, which he had attended as a newspaperman, bestowed honorary degrees upon him. So did Colgate, Princeton and Brown Universities. France made him a chevalier of the Legion of Honor. Greece and Montenegro decorated him.

He was consulted as an expert on reparations, when the U. S.-German peace treaty was drafted in 1921. The next year he was seated at the interallied conference at Geneva.

As a young man he became financial editor of the Chicago Tribune and later of the Economist, he carried with him knowledge that enabled him to write such informed comment that Lyman J. Gage, then Secretary of the United States Treasury under McKinley, asked him to be his First Assistant. That was in 1897.

Vanderlip handled the $200,000,000 Spanish-American War loan with such skill—it was oversubscribed seven times—that taciturn James Stillman, the elder, president of the powerful City Bank, offered him a vice president's desk. Vanderlip retired from the Treasury in 1901 and accepted the new job.

Steel Corp. Votes $2 on $7 Preferred

New York, June 29 (AP).—Directors of United States Steel Corporation today declared a dividend of $2 a share, payable July 30 to stock of record July 9, on the $7 preferred stock, reducing arrears to $1.25 a share. On May 25 a dividend of $2 a share on the senior stock was declared.

The latest payment called for distribution of $7,205,000. It cut the arrears, accumulated during the worst depression years, from a peak of $18.25 a share.

Recovery in steel operations has put U. S. Steel Corporation back into the profit money on a substantial scale.

The action, the third of its kind within the past year, was taken at the regular monthly meeting of the board. Dividend action on the regular quarterly dividend was not scheduled for consideration at today's meeting.

Foreign Markets.

London, June 29.—Influenced by further declines in New York yesterday and closing of the Paris bourse, stocks weakened today. Most ground closed around the lows. Transatlantics, rubber shares and gilt-edged issue were depressed. The 3½ per cent war loan went below par. Kaffirs and oils were about even. European bonds were irregular.

Paris opening to the franc crisis, the government closed the bourse fo an indifinite period.

Liverpool.—Reports of spreading rust damage in the American grain belt and continuance of extreme dry weather in Canada sent wheat futures up 6½ to 7½d today. The market closed strong. December contract made a new high for 1937. In cotton, London, continental and Bombay selling was induced by French financial developments. Recent declines unsettled Manchester cotton goods markets. At the close futures were steady, 4 to 7 lower.

On the Air Today

Boake Carter, Columbia's news commentator, has taken the rest of the week off from radio activities. So, the statisticians got busy and dished out a few figures on Mr. Carter's work.

Here are some of the findings: In the eight-year period he has been on the air he has been heard in approximately 2,080 broadcasts, thus consuming 75 minutes of air time a week, 3,900 minutes a year and 31,200 minutes in the eight years. It takes Carter 10 hours a day to prepare his material, or 40 minutes of preparation for each minute of his 15-minute program. This mounts to 2,600 hours a year in preparation, or 20,800 hours in the eight years. It has been estimated that the commentator travels 10,000 miles a year gathering his material, and he has journeyed over 80,000 miles in airplanes, trains and motor cars. Over 1,000,000 feet of ticker tape has flowed in a constant stream through his news service machines.

He is now heard thrice-weekly, but actually makes six broadcasts a week. This includes three broadcasts weekly to the West Coast. H. V. Kaltenborn will sub for Carter this week.

"Education by Radio," a bulletin to promote the use of radio for educational, cultural and civic purposes, in its July issue says that "Criticism of the Federal Communications Commission has become a rather frequent subject of comment in the Washington newspapers." Washington is referred to as "the center of control over all radio." The bulletin states that the Administration is "painfully" aware of the radio problem now resting on its doorstep, yet it seems reluctaant to act. Instead the Commission wants to correct conditions from within and does not favor a congressional investigation with its attendant publicity. The likely solution, however, would be a good clean congressional investigation so as to give the Commission a clean bill of health.

Word comes from the New York office of the National Broadcasting Co. that Dr. James Rowland Angell, retiring president of Yale University, has accepted the post of educational counselor. He will work on a full-time basis, and will begin his duties early in the fall.

9:45 a. m.—WMAL—The Boy Scouts' jamboree will be officially opened at this time during the flag raising ceremonies. This will be broadcast at this time.

11 a. m.—WMAL—The summaries of the Ryder Cup matches being played in England, where many golf luminaries are participating.

1:30 p. m.—WJSV—Bill Tilden will summarize the happenings in the Wimbledon tennis matches.

3 p. m.—WMAL—Henry Sztompka, a pupil of Paderewski, will be heard in a performance of one of Frederic Chopin's mazurkas in a broadcast from Warsaw, Poland.

6:15 p. m. — WMAL — Carleton Smith, N. B. C.'s presidential announcer, has been chosen by Mrs. Roosevelt to appear with her on her regular broadcast tonight. Mrs. Roosevelt will virtually step from the reception line at her son's wedding for the program.

7 p. m.—WJSV—The life of Luther Burbank will be dramatized during the "Cavalcade of America."

8 p. m.—WJSV—The new summer series will star Frank Parker and Alice Faye. Frank Parker takes the place of Lily Pons, who is now vacationing. Andre Kostelanetz continues to wield the baton. The new series will be heard each Wednesday and Friday.

9:30 p. m.—WJSV—Jessica Dragonette will present "The Pink Lady." She plays the lead and the hero, of course, is Charles Kullmann. The famous "Kiss Waltz," "Beautiful Lady," "I Like It" and "Love Is Divine" are included in the musical scores from the play.

9:45 p. m.—WJSV—"Old Age Security" will be the topic for discussion with the Merrill Denison program.

Sealed proposals will be received at Room 320, District Building, until 2 o'clock p. m., July 12, 1937, for furnishing optical supplies and repairs for various branches of the District Government; July 21, 1937, for furnishing brown corn for D. C. penal institutions; July 22, 1937, for furnishing tin cans and canning equipment for D. C. penal institutions; July 23, 1937, for furnishing educational tests and scales for the public schools, D. C.; July 26, 1937, for furnishing textbooks for the public schools, D. C. Specifications and information at room 320, District Building.

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, June 23, 1937.—Sealed proposals will be received at Room 509, District Building, until 2 p. m. (E. S. T.), JULY 13, 1937, and then publicly opened for the Landscape Development for the Adult Sanatorium and Nurses' Home at site of District of Columbia Tuberculosis Sanatoria, near Glenn Dale, Prince Georges County, Md. A more complete description of the work and full information for bidders is given in the drawings, specifications, and in other contract papers, which may be obtained at Room 427, District Building, upon deposit of a CERTIFIED CHECK payable to the COLLECTOR OF TAXES, D. C., in the sum of TEN DOLLARS ($10.00) to insure return in good condition. Not more than three (3) complete sets of drawings and specifications and contract papers will be furnished to any one general contractor. No proposal will be accepted unless accompanied by a guaranty of not less than five per cent (5%) of the amount of the bid in the form of a certified check made payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., U. S. bonds, or the bond of an approved surety company. Security for the faithful performance of the work shall be in the form of a surety bond in a penal sum equal to the estimated total contract price. A labor bond in an amount equal to the largest estimated several pay roll in any one month is required. Public liability insurance in the sum of $5,000 and $10,000 is also required. The work called for by this proposal is to be performed in accordance with an agreement dated December 19, 1934, between the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works, as amended and is subject to the construction regulations and labor provisions of Bulletin No. 2 of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works dealing with non-Federal projects, as revised. The Director of Re-Employment for the District of Columbia is C. F. LAMSON, 480 Indiana avenue northwest. The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all proposals and to waive informalities as they deem best for the interest of the District of Columbia. Final award of contract is subject to approval of the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. No bidder may withdraw his proposal for a period of thirty (30) days after the date for the opening thereof. Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates prescribed by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works must be paid on this project. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, DAN I. SULTAN, Commissioners, D. C.

Women Fleeing Occoquan Get Brief Freedom

Two Escape in Taxicab; Caught After Radio Alarm.

Fugitive freedom from the Occoquan Workhouse was brief yesterday for two young woman prisoners who escaped in a taxicab.

Ten minutes after a radio alarm for Ethel Nash, 26, and Ruth Lowery, 28, was broadcast, Arlington County Officer Harvey A. Barnett spotted the cab at Seventh street and South Glebe road, Arlington, and arrested them and two male companions. Barnett piled all four into his police cruiser and drove to the county jail where the men were booked as William C. Owens, 34, 903 M street northwest, a mechanic, and W. S. Edwards, 36, 24 Seaton place northeast, a taxi driver.

Make Quick Dash.

Capt. A. L. Pettitt, superintendent of the workhouse, believed that the novel escape was planned Sunday when the women received visitors. The pair were loitering near the gates at 3 p. m. when the vehicle paused in the road. They made a quick dash, according to guards, and were almost out of sight before pursuit was organized.

Barnett said the men told him they had picked the women up beside the road where their car had broken down. Later, officers reported finding a map in the cab with routes marked to Washington through less-densely settled areas. The women were lying face downward on the floor of the cab, Barnett reported. Their only baggage was a candy box containing powder, combs and toothbrushes. They had removed their white prison stockings and were wearing silk.

Returned to Occoquan.

The girls were returned to Occoquan late yesterday, but the men will be taken to Richmond today by Federal officers to face charges of aiding a jail break, according to Sheriff Howard Fields, of Arlington.

The Nash girl was sentenced in March, 1935, to a term of 2½ years for forgery. At the time she lived in the 1300 block of Irving street northwest. The Lowery girl received two to five years for robbery last December. She gave an address in the 1000 block of Tenth street northwest.

Referendum Petition On Coal Law Completed

Annapolis, Md., June 29 (AP).—Six acts of the recent Legislature, made subject to referendum by petition, tonight awaited the final action of Herbert R. O'Conor, attorney general, before being ordered on the ballots of the 1938 election.

The last petition was completed today when Lee Uhlep, executive secretary, Independent Coal Distributors Association of Baltimore, filed 7,031 names against the bill to regulate the sale of coal in Maryland. He had previously filed 7,315 names, the total of 14,346 more than meeting the legal requirements.

Tom McCarthy

TOM McCARTHY.

You'll find plenty of people in Bristol willing to talk about the visit, and they range from the reporters on the Bristol Herald-Courier to the librarian, and the boy in the popcorn store on State street. Of all the stories I heard, I think the boy in the confectionery store had the best of the lot.

Ralph (I never did get his last name) is an average young fellow of 19, bright, smiling, and totally unpreoccupied with things literary or spiritual. Nonetheless, when he tells his story of the visit from Thomas Wolfe, he puts as much animation into it as could Wolfe himself. It's a small story, but I think it gives an insight into the character of a man whom a lot of people consider to be America's foremost writer.

"I see this big guy come in," say Ralph, "and he is big, I'll tell you. He must have been six and a half feet tall. I never read anything he'd written. In fact, I'd never even heard of him; but I could see that there was something about him. I could see he was somebody.

"He comes up to me and buys a pack of cigarettes. Then he puts his hand in his pocket and commences to get red. He stammers a little and says, 'Oh, I'm sorry.' 'I'm sorry,' he say, 'all I've got is a $20 bill,' and he starts to hand back the cigarettes.

"I gave him back his cigarettes," Ralph will tell you, "and told him we'd be glad to change his $20 bill. Then he said he'd run over to the bank and get change. He told me that he didn't want to inconvenience us by taking so much change for a package of cigarettes."

"Well, when I told him that we'd be glad to make the change, and that it wouldn't inconvenience us a bit," Ralph continues, "he starts to jump around just like a big boy. 'Why, that's fine,' Wolfe say. 'That's grand—I sure appreciate that.'

"And with that," Ralph continues, admiration lighting up his face, "he began to jump around picking out everything he could lay his hands on. He picked out candy, peanuts, a half-a-dozen packs of cigarettes. And when he got his big hands loaded with stuff, he comes up and says, 'Take out for these, too.'

"When I told Ben Loving down at the Herald-Courier about it," Ralph concludes, "Ben said, 'Why, that must be Tom Wolfe.' And that's who it was."

* * * *

I left Bristol at 4 in the morning with the route man for the Herald-Courier, who also carries the mail sacks out into the mountain towns. We must have made a sort of figure-eight trip up into the mountains on both the Tennessee and Virginia sides of the line.

It was a dark, foggy morning and we couldn't see very much, except that some of the coal towns looked even dingier in the mist.

One of the biggest towns we went through was Norton, which has a population of about 3,000. It is set near the top of a mountain, and has that undistinguished gray drabness which seems to cling to all the coal towns. However, they tell me that this is the country which furnished the background for the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." About the only romantic feature of it is the growth of rhododendrons along the side of the mountain road. They grow in thick clumps all over the mountainside, as wild and tangled as berry bushes.

I asked the young fellow who was driving me about the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," and he had plenty of information to offer. It seems the heroine was supposed to have gone to school at Stone Gap, a town we'd already been through. The doctor lived over on that side of the mountain, and the author, John Fox, lived just a few miles away. I'd never read the book and so I wasn't able to identify the characters he mentioned, but it appears that all you have to do is to go up into the mountains within a 10-mile radius of Norton, and you can talk with people who knew the author and the characters in the book.

* * * *

After leaving the mail driver at Jonesville, Va., I hitch-hiked into Middlesboro, Ky., which is in Bell County, adjoining my immediate destination, Harlan County.

As I rode over the mountains and through the Cumberland Gap, I visualized Middlesboro as being a last outpost of civilization before terror-ridden Harlan County. I expected to see lank Kentuckians standing in front of the local drug stores or saloons, twirling pistols, and possibly taking potshots at out-of-the-State license plates, as they flashed by.

Actually, Middlesboro is a charming little city with a population of 10,000 people, a number of industries and a goodly array of smart and prosperous-appearing stores. On arriving, I called up A. T. Pace, the local representative of the United Mine Workers, to ask him where I might find my friend, Lawrence "Peggy" Dwyer, an old-time battler for unionization, who would show me Harlan County. Pace informed me that Dwyer was stationed 14 miles away in Pineville, but, if I would drop down to his house, he might be able to run me over.

A. T. Pace himself has a stormy labor career behind him. He is a stout man of about medium height, who boasts of service on some of the hottest fronts of industrial warfare. He was Mayor of Herrin, Ill., at the time of the "Herrin Massacre," in 1922. He did duty on the Harlan labor front when deaths by violence were a weekly occurrence.

I rather expected that he would occupy the majority of my time with a unionization harangue or a condemnation of the newest enemies of his organization. Quite to the contrary. Before he would discuss either Harlan, or his own varied career, I had to see his vegetable gardens, his bird dogs and his 75 chickens. After that, Mr. Pace was willing to talk about labor.

During a bite of lunch, he asked me what reaction I'd found toward the latest moves of John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. It was a moderately tense moment, and Pace busied himself with his plate.

"Well, frankly," I said, "I may or may not have talked with representative people, but every 7 out of 10 people I have talked with, on the way down here, have expressed the feeling that right now the C. I. O. is overstepping just a——"

I never quite finished, because Mr. Pace must have choked a bit, begun to cough, so I asked would someone please "pass the bread."

Tomorrow—Pineville, Ky., and an interview with Lawrence (Peggy) Dwyer, a union organizer with more than 30 years of labor warfare behind him.

America Speaks on Labor, Strikes

How does Mr. and Mrs. Average Voter feel about the present wave of strikes and labor disputes? You can get the answer Sunday in an important recent pool by the American Institute of Public Opinion, exclusively in Washington in The Sunday Post. The poll will reveal American sentiment in regard to labor unions, laws regulating the conduct of strikes, delivery of U. S. mail to strike areas and whether popular favor is with Green or Lewis. The mass of evidence will show just where the public stands in the present industrial controversy. Don't miss America's opinion on these important questions.

Miss Earhart Sets Howland Island as Goal of Next Flight

The 2,550-mile flight will pioneer a new South Seas air route to the island. From there Miss Earhart, accompanied by her navigator, Capt. Fred Noonan, plans to fly to Hawaii and then to California.

Dispatches from New Guinea said the American flier put her silver monoplane down at Lae at 12 midnight Monday after flying across the Arafura Sea from Port Darwin, on the north Australian coast.

Cupid Sets New Record.

Cumberland, Md., June 29 (AP).—Cupid made an all-time record here this June, with 505 marriage licenses issued in the first 28 days, as compared to 466 in all of May.

Woman, 110, Still Works.

Leonardtown, Md., June 29.—The oldest colored citizen of St. Marys County and probably the oldest in the State, is Aunt Dolly Carter, of St. Inigoes, whom relief records show to be 110 years old. Aunt Dolly attributes her good health to hard work and works every day.

Cleaners Win Hour Cut, Raise At D. C. Plant

Union Negotiating With Other Firms Affected by Strike.

The striking Laundry Workers, Cleaners and Dyers Union local yesterday won all its demands from the Aladdin Dry Cleaners, 1817 Columbia road northwest, including a 40-hour week, $18 minimum weekly wage, time and a half for overtime and union recognition.

Meanwhile, negotiations were under way between a union committee and representatives of other cleaning plants affected by the five-day-old strike. Union officials indicated they expected to reach an agreement with the owners today.

Other developments on the strike front were:

1. A committee of socially prominent Washingtonians, led by Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Colman, daughter of Senator Wheeler, of Montana, served sandwiches and soft drinks at noon yesterday to pickets in front of the Arcade Sunshine Laundry's plant at 735 Lamont street. The committee represented the League of Women Shoppers, which already has thrown its "moral and financial support' behind the striking local after its investigators had found "long hours, low pay and inadequate working conditions prevailed in the dry-cleaning places here. The Arcade-Sunshine is not on strike, but Calvin Cousens, president of the union local, said it had been listed as unfair. He said it will be cited before the National Labor Relations Board.

2. Morris Kuppersmith, president of the Retail Tailors Association, called a mass meeting of retail tailors for tonight at 8 o'clock at the Pythian Temple. The association is expected to continue financial aid for the strikers. It already has contributed $100 to the strike fund.

3. The Women's Trade Union League yesterday held conferences with A. F. of L. locals and Government lodges to determine what support should be given the striking dry cleaners.

4. Dry cleaning plants not affected by the strike indicated a willingness to negotiate with the union local.

5. Owners and operators of 15 cleaning establishments met with Samuel Rubenstein as chairman. The operators decided a price raise was inevitable if the demands of the strikers are to be met.

Bus and Truckmen Get I. C. C. Code for Drivers

The Interstate Commerce Commission, seeking greater safety on the highways, will place in operation at midnight tonight rules covering 300,000 truck and bus drivers.

Under the rules, drivers of public carriers operating in interstate commerce must be in good physical and mental health, have good eyesight, adequate hearing and no deformities likely to interfere with safe driving.

Esperanto Body To Mark 50th Birthday Here

Commissioner Hazen Will Greet Universal Language Delegates.

The golden anniversary of Esperanto, universal language, first written and spoken 50 years ago, will be celebrated in a three-day congress of the Esperanto Association of North America, opening tomorrow at the Hamilton Hotel.

The congress will be formally opened by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, of Washington, tomorrow morning. Representatives from many States and visitors from abroad are expected to attend.

The first real Esperanto session, aside from informal conversations, will be in the evening, with discussion confined to Esperanto and speeches by those most skilled in the language.

A meeting open to the public and conducted in English will be held Friday evening. A direct method of teaching Esperanto, developed by Andre Cser, of Holland, and designed to avoid the use of all national language words, will be demonstrated. Samuel S. Eby, president of the New York Esperanto Society will read a paper, and a member of the Polish Legation is expected to speak.

Election of national officers will take place Saturday morning, with a banquet and dance in the evening to wind up the congress.

Harvester Plant Fire Causes $200,000 Loss

Canton, Ill., June 29 (U.P.).—Fire destroyed a three-story building of the International Harvester Co. plant today, with damage estimated at almost $200,000, and threatened for a time to spread over the ten-block area covered by the $3,000,000 factory.

It was controlled shortly before 5 p. m. after the roof of the paint building, where it started, collapsed.

Work Starts on Fifth Unit.

Luray, Va., June 29.—Work will begin this week on the Elkton Homestead Unit for Shenandoah National Park residents, it was said here today. This site is the fifth on which construction has either begun or is completed.
